

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

A BRIEF MEMOIR
THE LIFE OF THE AUTHOR; AND AN ANALYSIS OF THE POEM, IN AN 'ARGUMENT' OF EACH RESPECTIVE BOOK.

THE interest which we feel in any literary production is easily transferred to its author. And if such production be of uncommon character, the desire to know the circumstances which distinguished the individual, who has in it portrayed the image of his mind, is proportionally strong. Such curiosity has undoubtedly been felt by those who have perused the 'Course of Time.' The poem is indeed of an uncommon character. This its claim is grounded on two things—the position it gives the reader, from which to take his view of the affairs of time—and its simplicity, freshness, and freedom from the pedantry and common-place of mere learning.

Before introducing the following brief memoir, a word or two shall be said on these characteristics. With regard to the former : the annunciation of the title which the poem bears is apt, at first, to excite the undefined idea of the concerns of the world in general as forming its subject. We speak from experience, having found the perception uncomfortable, seemingly indicating a design to make up in extent of matter what might be wanting in force of thought, or power of minute observation and accurate description. But, as we read the work, this anticipation vanishes. We find ourselves far advanced in the measureless course of Eternity itself; and are taught the distant transactions of a world we soon recognise as our own, not in the didactic strain of dull moralizing, but in the animated narrative of one, who had been an observant actor, deeply and holily interested in the consummation. And this narrative strain is continued through the work.

The latter characteristic feature, of freedom from scholastic and literary pedantry, is also striking. The Paradise Lost, for instance, cannot be fully relished but by one well acquainted with the mythology of the ancient polished nations. The same is true of several other invaluable productions of poetic genius. But here the language is that of one, in whom the idea of eternity and its all-important interests leaves no time or inclination to search for recondite allusions, flowers of rhetoric, or learned phraseology. The author seems to enjoy a holy, humble intimacy with his glorious but beloved Creator and Redeemer, and to desire and labour that the same views and feelings should be shared by all His human offspring. This must render the work peculiarly dear to all such as draw their religious views simply and penitently from the Bible. For its descriptions of the character and consequences of sin and holiness have all that simplicity, directness and pungency, which belong to Divine Truth, quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword—a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

With these remarks, we lay before the reader an account of the author, extracted from the Christian Review, an English periodical publication.

‘The Rev. ROBERT POLLOK was born at Muirhouse, parish of Eaglesham, in North Britain, October 19, 1798. His father still occupies the same farm, and is esteemed by his neighbours as a very worthy and intelligent person. Robert was the youngest of the family; and his early days were spent on the farm with his father, in such labours as the seasons called for. He was always fond of reading; and the winter’s evenings were employed in this manner, when his companions were perhaps engaged in some trifling amusement. He is not known to have made any attempts at poetry when very young. At fourteen years of age, he commenced the study of the Latin language; and, a few months after this, he produced the first poem which he is known to have committed to paper. In October, 1815, when seventeen years of age, he entered the University of Glasgow, where he studied five years; at the end of which time he obtained the degree of Master of Arts. While at college, he was a very diligent and exemplary student, and distinguished himself so far as to have several prizes awarded him by the suffrage of his fellows: besides the regular exercises, he composed a number for his own pleasure and improvement, and several of these were poetical. Before he had finished his curriculum, his health was considerably impaired.

In the autumn of 1822, he entered the United Secession Divinity Hall, under the care of Dr. Dick. Here his discourses attracted considerable notice, and called forth some severe criticisms from his fellow-students. A mind like his could not submit to the trammels of common divisions : the form of an essay suited better the impetuosity of his genius ; and he occasionally indulged in lofty descriptions, both of character and external nature. In May, 1827, he received license to preach from the United Secession Presbytery of Edinburgh. During his previous trials, he was employed in superintending the printing of his poem. His first public discourse is said to have produced a powerful sensation on the audience. The text was, "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him ; but if Baal, then follow him." Some descriptive parts, respecting those who serve Baal rather than God, are said to have been awfully grand. He preached only three other times, when he was obliged to retire from public service. His labours had been too great for his constitution, in which the seeds of consumption had long before been sown. By some medical gentlemen of eminence in Edinburgh, he was advised to try the effects of a warmer climate : Italy was his intended retreat ; and, after providing himself with letters of introduction to some learned men on the continent, he set out, accompanied by a sister. He had got as far as the neighbourhood of Southampton, when, overpowered with the fatigues of travelling, he was compelled to desist. He here fevered, and after a few days expired, far from the scenes of his birth and his studies. It is comforting to learn, that Mr. Pollok's death was that of a true saint ; his last moments being characterized by patience, resignation and faith.

‘Mr. Pollok’s mind was certainly of a very superior character: of this there need no other proof be given than the encomiums which his “Course of Time” has called forth—encomiums, many of them, penned before his death was known, but which did not appear till after he had gone beyond the reach of earthly applause. His habits were those of a close student: his reading was extensive: he could converse on almost every subject: he had great facility in composition; in confirmation of which, he is said to have written nearly a thousand lines weekly of the last four books of the “Course of Time.” The poem, as a whole, was, however, no hasty performance: it had engaged his attention long. His college acquaintances could perceive that his mind was not wholly devoted to the business of the classes; he was constantly writing or reading on other subjects. Having his time wholly to himself, he amassed a prodigious store of ideas. It was his custom to commit to the flames, every now and then, a great number of papers. He had projected a prose work of some magnitude—a review of Literature in all ages—designed to show that literature must stand or fall in proportion as it harmonizes with Scripture Revelation. But death has put an end to this, as to many other projects.’

We now proceed, as was promised, to exhibit an Argument of each book, forming a brief Analysis of the poem.

BOOK I.

A solemn invocation of Almighty God commences, and the object of the poem is stated, to describe

'time gone, man's second birth, his final doom, the righteous saved, and providence approved.'

Far onward in eternity, long after the period of the doom of man and its immediate consequences, two 'sons of Paradise' appear in discourse, and looking for the arrival of some heavenly messenger, or stranger from one of the many worlds which serve as seminaries for heaven. At length they perceive and welcome one of the latter character. He explains the reason of an anxious concern his countenance manifests—he had desired, when matured for heaven, and on his flight toward it from his native world at a vast distance, to explore beyond the visible creation of God. He had seen abodes of awful misery, which he describes, and now asks information respecting them. The youths introduce him, for this purpose, to an ancient 'Bard of Earth,' now in bliss, who tells him the place he saw is hell, shows the design of it, and of certain appearances in it, and consents, at his request, to instruct him in the history of its inhabitants, and of MAN.

BOOK II.

The 'heavenly Bard' describes to the stranger the Earth, now renewed, where Adam and his race, of whom he declares himself one, had formerly dwelt—its beauty at creation—and God's formation of the first human pair. Their introduction to Eden and their fall by sin are noticed. The Divine plan of Redemption, which, as related, excites devout admiration in the auditors, is dwelt upon and explained with holy rapture. The stranger compares his own previous thoughts and experience with the new things he hears, and asks if men lost not their reason and understanding in their fall. The Bard describes the BIBLE as their guide, its contents, design, and effects in those who embraced it; the abuse of it by multitudes, and the various monstrous productions of error and sin—the unfaithful magistrate, and specially the unfaithful minister of religion, ‘saddest among the damned.’ He dilates on the vain and selfish occupations of men, and on the character of sin—of that pride of heart which adores self and rejects God, and ripens the soul for ruin, proving itself to be madness, preparing woes for the resurrection.

BOOK III.

The mirror of Truth described, as a test of moral state in heaven. The Bible its resemblance on earth, although much neglected, and abandoned for the unsatisfying pursuits of the world. These pursuits more largely described. Men seek happiness, but forget to love God, truth and virtue, and are disappointed. Vain efforts of philosophy to nurture on earth a plant that shall afford genuine happiness. Holiness alone produces this precious fruit, itself being the genuine tree of life, replanted by the Son of God, unseen in the mists of sin and folly. The cost of a banquet on its fruit. Superior love of other things—gold preferred—sensual pleasure—and fame and notoriety leading to infidel excesses. Wisdom remonstrates and instructs, as does all else, but with little effect. Her true character—how misconceived by men. Narrative of one of the race, to whom mercy is shown of God—alluding, it would seem, to the amiable, evangelic Cooper. Lessons read to men by Death, and believed, but often too late. Promise of a brighter view of things, in the lives and hopes of the pious.

BOOK IV.

Description of human pursuits continued, and of God's providence with men. Lust of power, a ruling passion—takes often the name of liberty—its fruits—degenerates into tyranny. Contrast between earthly and true Christian liberty, or freedom from sin. View of a human heart—its mixture of good and bad—the Christian warfare—and its issue. Rapturous contemplation of redeeming Mercy. Review of books. Speculations of human philosophy and theology, and mysteries of the Christian faith. Unequal distribution of earthly things in the providence of God—riches, poverty, intellectual might and destitution of it—elucidated. View of an eminently gifted poet, of noble birth—alluding to Byron. Conclusion, that earthly things neither could nor were intended to satisfy the immortal soul of man.

BOOK V.

The 'Bard,' after calling on all intellectual beings to praise God, and descanting on the indelible character of fact, redeems his promise of a brighter view, and dwells on the joys of time. Satisfaction arising from natural sweets, tasted sparingly, and from feelings and actions of moral worth. The morning of life—its sensations—remembered with fondness. Love, holy and approved of God. Friendship—musing, solitary walks—investigation of intellectual subjects, and subjects of an external nature, interesting; and memory of all pleasant, but of guilt. Rest after labour, joy succeeding sorrow, and sometimes accompanying it, render the cup of life palatable, and the righteous may relish it with gratitude. The millennium. Previous corruption of men, and fulfilment of prophecy in the fall of the spiritual Babylon and accompanying events. Happiness of the succeeding period described.

BOOK VI.

Close of the millennium narrated. Eruption of iniquities, and indications of approaching wrath. Creation apostrophized in anticipation of it. Nearer view of the transition from a state of general holiness to the maturity of sin. Nature sympathizes, and, in her defects, irregularities and convulsions, seems preparing for dissolution. No reformation of men, however, but these symptoms are neglected, or a philosophic solution sought. Preparations in heaven for vengeance, while Earth is ripening to receive it. Here the narrative is interrupted by a call to worship. View of the employments of the blessed. The praises of Jehovah sung. The stranger Divinely welcomed.

BOOK VII.

The narrative resumed, and Earth's last day described. It commences without sign of change; men employ themselves as usual; review of these employments. The sun is suddenly dark—all nature pauses, and Time is declared to be no more. The dead are summoned—they arise, and the living are changed. Effects on different classes and individuals. Reunion of bodies and souls described, and dissolution of all else on earth. Survey of the condition of the assembling multitudes. Death apostrophized, as surrendering all his victims—forever.

BOOK VIII.

View of the multitude collected for judgment, undistinguished by outward pomp or badge ; the moral character alone giving distinction, and exhibiting its vast varieties. Description of several of these, and of the feelings of individuals of different character on arriving at this point of their existence, and waiting the manifestation of their Judge. As the 'Bard' continues his narrative, the stranger states what he had seen in the abodes of misery, and asks if men, believing in coming wo, could yet deliberately proceed toward it. It is replied, that they did not indeed believe—as having never inquired—or else inquired carelessly—and trusted to something else rather than God's Word. True Faith described, and the fatal result of error respecting its nature.

BOOK IX.

Apostrophe to Religion, whose day of gracious reward was now come. The 'Bard,' having before exhibited the wicked, and their wretchedness on rising from the grave to judgment, now dwells with delight, although hesitating as to a selection, on the respective characters of the good, of various classes of excellence. Modest worth is now acknowledged, and shines. Effect of the transition from Time to Eternity on thought, desire and anticipation. At length, a host of angels appearing, the whole race is raised 'to middle air,' and separated, the good and bad—to mingle no more! The different assemblies now described, with circumstances peculiar to each, and the preparation making to assign them to their eternal abodes—to reap, as they had sown.

BOOK X: and last.

Invocation of Almighty God, for aid to exhibit the momentous subject with fidelity. The 'Bard' is then represented as resuming his narrative. The silence following the separation of the good and bad is now interrupted by the sound of innumerable hosts and crowds, assembling, from all quarters of the universe, as summoned, to behold the mercy and justice of Jehovah. He communicates to the congregated millions of His holy subjects a declaration of His conduct and designs with regard to MAN, whose day of retribution is come; and Messiah proceeds to Judgment. Description of the divided multitudes of mankind, at His coming. Sentence pronounced. The wicked driven into the abode of endless wrath and misery, increasing in sin, and hence in punishment. The Earth purged with fire. Accompanied then with all His redeemed saints, whom He approves and welcomes, the Incarnate, Omnipotent God re-ascends to Heaven.

COURSE OF TIME.

BOOK I.

ETERNAL SPIRIT ! God of truth ! to whom
All things seem as they are ; Thou, who of old
The prophet's eye unscaled, that nightly saw,
While heavy sleep fell down on other men,
In holy vision tranced, the future pass
Before him, and to Judah's harp attuned
Burdens which made the pagan mountains shake,
And Zion's cedars bow,—inspire my song ;
My eye unscale ; me what is substance teach,
And shadow what, while I of things to come,
As past, rehearsing, sing the Course of Time,
The second birth, and final doom of man.

The muse, that soft and sickly woos the ear
Of love, or chanting loud in windy rhyme
Of fabled hero, raves through gaudy tale
Not overfraught with sense, I ask not : such
A strain befits not argument so high.
Me thought, and phrase severely sifting out
The whole idea, grant, uttering as 'tis
The essential truth—time gone, the righteous saved,
The wicked damned, and providence approved.

Hold my right hand, Almighty ! and me teach
To strike the lyre, but seldom struck, to notes

Harmonious with the morning stars, and pure
As those by sainted bards and angels sung,
Which wake the echoes of Eternity ;
That fools may hear and tremble, and the wise,
Instructed, listen, of ages yet to come.

Long was the day, so long expected, past
Of the eternal doom, that gave to each
Of all the human race his due reward.
The sun, earth's sun, and moon, and stars, had ceased
To number seasons, days, and months, and years
To mortal man. Hope was forgotten, and fear :
And time, with all its chance, and change, and smiles,
And frequent tears, and deeds of villany,
Or righteousness, once talked of much, as things
Of great renown, was now but ill remembered ;
In dim and shadowy vision of the past
Seen far remote, as country, which has left
The traveller's speedy step, retiring back
From morn till even ; and long Eternity
Had rolled his mighty years, and with his years
Men had grown old. The saints, all home returned
From pilgrimage, and war, and weeping, long
Had rested in the bowers of peace, that skirt
The stream of life ; and long—alas, how long
To them it seemed !—the wicked, who refused
To be redeemed, had wandered in the dark
Of hell's despair, and drunk the burning cup
Their sins had filled with everlasting wo.

Thus far the years had rolled, which none but God
Doth number, when two sons, two youthful sons
Of Paradise, in conversation sweet,—
For thus the heavenly muse instructs me, wooed
At midnight hour with offering sincere
Of all the heart, poured out in holy prayer,—
High on the hills of immortality,
Whence goodliest prospect looks beyond the walls

Of heaven, walked, casting oft their eye far through
The pure serene, observant if, returned
From errand duly finished, any came,
Or any, first in virtue now complete,
From other worlds arrived, confirmed in good.

Thus viewing, one they saw, on hasty wing
Directing towards heaven his course ; and now,
His flight ascending near the battlements
And lofty hills on which they walked, approached.
For round and round, in spacious circuit wide,
Mountains of tallest stature circumscribe
The plains of Paradise, whose tops, arrayed
In uncreated radiance, seem so pure,
That naught but angel's foot, or saint's, elect
Of God, may venture there to walk. Here oft
The sons of bliss take morn or evening pastime,
Delighted to behold ten thousand worlds
Around their suns revolving in the vast External space, or listen the harmonies
That each to other in its motion sings.
And hence, in middle heaven remote, is seen
The mount of God in awful glory bright.
Within, no orb create of moon, or star,
Or sun, gives light ; for God's own countenance,
Beaming eternally, gives light to all.
But farther than these sacred hills, his will Forbids its flow, too bright for eyes beyond.
This is the last ascent of Virtue ; here
All trial ends, and hope ; here perfect joy,
With perfect righteousness, which to these heights
Alone can rise, begins, above all fall.

And now, on wing of holy ardour strong,
Hither ascends the stranger, borne upright,—
For stranger he did seem, with curious eye
Of nice inspection round surveying all,—
And at the feet alights of those that stood

His coming, who the hand of welcome gave,
And the embrace sincere of holy love ;
And thus, with comely greeting kind, began.

Hail, brother ! hail, thou son of happiness,
Thou son beloved of God, welcome to heaven,
To bliss that never fades ! thy day is past
Of trial, and of fear to fall. Well done,
Thou good and faithful servant ; enter now
Into the joy eternal of thy Lord.
Come with us, and behold far higher sight
Than e'er thy heart desired, or hope conceived.
See, yonder is the glorious hill of God,
Above angel's gaze in brightness rising high.
Come, join our wing, and we will guide thy flight
To mysteries of everlasting bliss,
The tree, and fount of life, the eternal throne,
And presence-chamber of the King of kings.
But what concern hangs on thy countenance,
Unwont within this place ? Perhaps thou deemst
Thyself unworthy to be brought before
The always Ancient One ? So are we too
Unworthy ; but our God is all in all,
And gives us boldness to approach his throne.

Sons of the Highest ! citizens of heaven !
Began the new arrived, right have ye judged :
Unworthy, most unworthy is your servant,
To stand in presence of the King, or hold
Most distant and most humble place in this Abode of excellent glory unrevealed.
But God Almighty be for ever praised,
Who, of his fulness, fills me with all grace
And ornament, to make me in his sight
Well pleasing, and accepted in his court.
But, if your leisure waits, short narrative
Will tell, why strange concern thus overhangs
My face, ill seeming here ; and haply, too,

Your elder knowledge can instruct my youth,
Of what seems dark and doubtful, unexplained.

Our leisure waits thee. Speak ; and what we can,
Delighted most to give delight, we will ;
Though much of mystery yet to us remains.

Virtue, I need not tell, when proved, and full
Matured, inclines us up to God and heaven,
By law of sweet compulsion strong and sure ;
As gravitation to the larger orb
The less attracts, through matter's whole domain.
Virtue in me was ripe. I speak not this
In boast ; for what I am to God I owe,
Entirely owe, and of myself am naught.
Equipped and bent for heaven, I left yon world,
My native seat, which scarce your eye can reach,
Rolling around her central sun, far out,
On utmost verge of light. But first, to see
What lay beyond the visible creation,
Strong curiosity my flight impelled.
Long was my way, and strange. I passed the bounds
Which God doth set to light, and life, and love ;
Where darkness meets with day, where order meets
Disorder, dreadful, waste, and wild ; and down
The dark, eternal, uncreated night
Ventured alone. Long, long on rapid wing,
I sailed through empty, nameless regions vast,
Where utter Nothing dwells, unformed and void.
There neither eye, nor ear, nor any sense
Of being most acute, finds object ; there
For aught external still you search in vain.
Try touch, or sight, or smell ; try what you will,
You strangely find naught but yourself alone.
But why should I in words attempt to tell
What that is like, which is, and yet is not ?
This passed, my path descending led me still O'er unclaimed continents of desert gloom

Immense, where gravitation shifting turns
The other way; and to some dread, unknown,
Infernal centre downward weighs: and now,—
Far travelled from the edge of darkness, far
As from that glorious mount of God to light's
Remotest limb,—dire sights I saw, dire sounds
I heard; and suddenly before my eye
A wall of fiery adamant sprung up,
Wall mountainous, tremendous, flaming high
Above all flight of hope. I paused, and looked;
And saw, where'er I looked upon that mound,
Sad figures traced in fire, not motionless,
But imitating life. One I remarked
Attentively; but how shall I describe
What naught resembles else my eye hath seen?
Of worm or serpent kind it something looked,
But monstrous, with a thousand snaky heads,
Eyed each with double orbs of glaring wrath;
And with as many tails, that twisted out
In horrid revolution, tipped with stings;
And all its mouths, that wide and darkly gaped,
And breathed most poisonous breath, had each a sting,
Forked, and long, and venomous, and sharp;
And, in its writhings infinite, it grasped
Malignantly what seemed a heart, swollen, black,
And quivering with torture most intense;
And still the heart, with anguish throbbing high,
Made effort to escape, but could not; for,
Howe'er it turned, and oft it vainly turned,
These complicated foldings held it fast.
And still the monstrous beast with sting of head
Or tail transpierced it, bleeding evermore.
What this could image, much I searched to know,
And while I stood, and gazed, and wondered long,
A voice, from whence I knew not, for no one
I saw, distinctly whispered in my ear
These words: This is the Worm that never dies.

Fast by the side of this unsightly thing
Another was portrayed, more hideous still :
Who sees it once shall wish to see't no more.
For ever undescribed let it remain !
Only this much I may or can unfold.
Far out it thrust a dart that might have made
The knees of terror quake, and on it hung,
Within the triple barbs, a being pierced
Through soul and body both. Of heavenly make Original the being seemed, but fallen,
And worn and wasted with enormous wo.
And still around the everlasting lance,
It writhed, convulsed, and uttered mimic groans ;
And tried and wished, and ever tried and wished
To die ; but could not die. Oh, horrid sight !
I trembling gazed, and listened, and heard this voice
Approach my ear : This is Eternal Death.

Nor these alone. Upon that burning wall,
In horrible emblazonry, were limned
All shapes, all forms, all modes of wretchedness,
And agony, and grief, and desperate wo.
And prominent in characters of fire,
Where'er the eye could light, these words you read :
" Who comes this way, behold, and fear to sin !"
Amazed I stood ; and thought such imagery
Foretokened, within, a dangerous abode.
But yet to see the worst a wish arose.
For virtue, by the holy seal of God
Accredited and stamped, immortal all,
And all invulnerable, fears no hurt.
As easy as my wish, as rapidly,
I through the horrid rampart passed, unscathed
And unopposed ; and, poised on steady wing,
I hovering gazed. Eternal Justice ! sons
Of God ! tell me, if ye can tell, what then
I saw, what then I heard. Wide was the place,
And deep as wide, and ruinous as deep.

Beneath, I saw a lake of burning fire,
With tempest tost perpetually, and still
The waves of fiery darkness 'gainst the rocks
Of dark damnation broke, and music made
Of melancholy sort ; and over head,
And all around, wind warred with wind, storm howled
To storm, and lightning forked lightning crossed,
And thunder answered thunder, muttering sounds
Of sullen wrath ; and far as sight could pierce,
Or down descend in caves of hopeless depth,
Through all that dungeon of unfading fire,
I saw most miserable beings walk,
Burning continually, yet unconsumed ;
For ever wasting, yet enduring still ;
Dying perpetually, yet never dead.
Some wandered lonely in the desert flames,
And some in fell encounter fiercely met,
With curses loud, and blasphemies, that made
The cheek of darkness pale ; and as they fought,
And cursed, and gnashed their teeth, and wished to die,
Their hollow eyes did utter streams of wo.
And there were groans that ended not, and sighs
That always sighed, and tears that ever wept,
And ever fell, but not in Mercy's sight.
And Sorrow, and Repentance, and Despair,
Among them walked, and to their thirsty lips
Presented frequent cups of burning gall.
And as I listened, I heard these beings curse
Almighty God, and curse the Lamb, and curse
The earth, the resurrection morn, and seek,
And ever vainly seek, for utter death.
And to their everlasting anguish still,
The thunders from above responding spoke
These words, which, through the caverns of perdition
Forlornly echoing, fell on every ear :
"Ye knew your duty, but ye did it not."
And back again recoiled a deeper groan.
A deeper groan ! Oh, what a groan was that !

I waited not, but swift on speediest wing,
With unaccustomed thoughts conversing, back
Retraced my venturous path from dark to light.
'Then up ascending, long ascending up,
I hasted on; though whiles the chiming spheres,
By God's own finger touched to harmony,
Held me delaying, till I here arrived,
Drawn upward by the eternal love of God,
Of wonder full and strange astonishment,
At what in yonder den of darkness dwells,
Which now your higher knowledge will unfold.

They answering said. To ask and to bestow
Knowledge, is much of heaven's delight; and now
Most joyfully what thou requir'st we would;
For much of new and unaccountable
Thou bringst. Something indeed we heard before,
In passing conversation slightly touched,
Of such a place; yet, rather to be taught,
Than teaching, answer, what thy marvel asks,
We need; for we ourselves, though here are but
Of yesterday, creation's younger sons.
But there is one, an ancient bard of Earth,
Who, by the stream of life, sitting in bliss,
Has oft beheld the eternal years complete
The mighty circle round the throne of God;
Great in all learning, in all wisdom great,
And great in song; whose harp in lofty strain
Tells frequently of what thy wonder craves,
While round him, gathering, stand the youth of heaven,
With truth and melody delighted both.
To him this path directs, an easy path,
And easy flight will bring us to his seat.

So saying, they linked hand in hand, spread out
Their golden wings, by living breezes fanned,
And over heaven's broad champaign sailed serene.

O'er hill and valley, clothed with verdure green,
That never fades ; and tree, and herb, and flower,
That never fades ; and many a river, rich
With nectar, winding pleasantly, they passed ;
And mansion of celestial mould, and work
Divine. And oft delicious music, sung
By saint and angel bands that walked the vales,
Or mountain tops, and harped upon their harps,
Their ear inclined, and held by sweet constraint
Their wing ; not long, for strong desire awaked
Of knowledge that to holy use might turn,
Still pressed them on to leave what rather seemed Pleasure, due only when all duty's done.

And now beneath them lay the wished-for spot,
The sacred bower of that renowned bard ;
That ancient bard, ancient in days and song ;
But in immortal vigour young, and young
In rosy health ; to pensive solitude
Retiring oft, as was his wont on earth.

Fit was the place, most fit, for holy musing.
Upon a little mount, that gently rose,
He sat, clothed in white robes ; and o'er his head
A laurel tree, of lustiest, eldest growth,
Stately and tall, and shadowing far and wide,—
Not fruitless, as on earth, but bloomed, and rich
With frequent clusters, ripe to heavenly taste,—
Spread its eternal boughs, and in its arms
A myrtle of unfading leaf embraced—
The rose and lily, fresh with fragrant dew,
And every flower of fairest cheek, around Him, smiling flocked. Beneath his feet, fast by,
And round his sacred hill, a streamlet walked,
Warbling the holy melodies of heaven ;
The hallowed zephyrs brought him incense sweet ;
And out before him opened, in prospect long,

The river of life, in many a winding make Descending from the lofty throne of God,
That with excessive glory closed the scene.

Of Adam's race he was, and lonely sat,
By chance that day, in meditation deep,
Reflecting much of time, and earth, and man.
And now to pensive, now to cheerful notes,
He touched a harp of wondrous melody.
A golden harp it was, a precious gift,
Which, at the day of judgment, with the crown
Of life, he had received from God's own hand,
Reward due to his service done on earth.

He sees their coming, and with greeting kind,
And welcome, not of hollow forged smiles,
And ceremonious compliment of phrase,
But of the heart sincere, into his bower
Invites. Like greeting they returned. Not bent
In low obeisance, from creature most Unfit to creature ; but with manly form
Upright they entered in ; though high his rank,
His wisdom high, and mighty his renown.
And thus, deferring all apology,
The two their new companion introduced.

Ancient in knowledge ! bard of Adam's race !
We bring thee one, of us inquiring what
We need to learn, and with him wish to learn.
His asking will direct thy answer best.

Most ancient bard ! began the new arrived,
Few words will set my wonder forth, and guide
Thy wisdom's light to what in me is dark.

Equipped for heaven, I left my native place.
But first beyond the realms of light I bent
My course ; and there, in utter darkness, far

Remote, I beings saw forlorn in wo,
Burning continually, yet unconsumed.
And there were groans that ended not, and sighs
That always sighed, and tears that ever wept
And ever fell, but not in Mercy's sight.
And still I heard these wretched beings curse
Almighty God, and curse the Lamb, and curse
The earth, the resurrection morn, and seek,
And ever vainly seek, for utter death.
And from above the thunders answered still,
"Ye knew your duty, but ye did it not."
And every where throughout that horrid den,
I saw a form of excellence, a form
Of beauty without spot, that naught could see
And not admire, admire and not adore.
And from its own essential beams it gave
Light to itself, that made the gloom more dark.
And every eye in that infernal pit
Beheld it still; and from its face—how fair!
O, how exceeding fair!—for ever sought,
But ever vainly sought, to turn away.
That image, as I guess, was Virtue; for Naught else hath God given countenance so fair.
But why in such a place it should abide?
What place it is? What beings there lament?
Whence came they? and for what their endless groan?
Why curse they God? why seek they utter death?
And chief, what means the resurrection morn?
My youth expects thy reverend age to tell.

Thou rightly deemst, fair youth, began the bard.
The form thou sawst was Virtue, ever fair.
Virtue, like God, whose excellent majesty,
Whose glory virtue is, is omnipresent.
No being, once created rational,
Accountable, endowed with moral sense,
With sapience of right and wrong endowed,
And charged, however fallen, debased, destroyed;

However lost, forlorn, and miserable ;
 In guilt's dark shrouding wrapped, however thick ;
 However drunk, delirious, and mad,
 With sin's full cup ; and with whatever damned,
 Unnatural diligence it work and toil,
 Can banish Virtue from its sight, or once
 Forget that she is fair. Hides it in night,
 In central night ; takes it the lightning's wing,
 And flies for ever on, beyond the bounds
 Of all ; drinks it the maddest cup of sin ,
 Dives it beneath the ocean of despair ;
 It dives, it drinks, it flies, it hides in vain.
 For still the eternal beauty, image fair,
 Once stamped upon the soul, before the eye
 All lovely stands, nor will depart ; so God
 Ordains ; and lovely to the worst she seems,
 And ever seems ; and as they look, and still Must ever look, upon her loveliness,
 Remembrance dire of what they were, of what
 They might have been, and bitter sense of what
 They are, polluted, ruined, hopeless, lost,
 With most repenting torment rend their hearts.
 So God ordains, their punishment severe,
 Eternally inflicted by themselves.
 'Tis this, this Virtue hovering evermore
 Before the vision of the damned, and in Upon their monstrous moral nakedness
 Casting unwelcome light, that makes their wo,
 That makes the essence of the endless flame.
 Where this is, there is hell, darker than aught
 That he, the bard three-visioned, darkest saw.

The place thou sawst was hell ; the groans thou heardst
 The wailings of the damned, of those who would Not be redeemed, and at the judgment day,
 Long past, for unrepented sins were damned.
 The seven loud thunders which thou heardst, declare

The eternal wrath of the Almighty God.
But whence, or why they came to dwell in wo,
Why they curse God, what means the glorious morn
Of resurrection, these a longer tale
Demand, and lead the mournful lyre far back
Through memory of sin and mortal man.
Yet haply not rewardless we shall trace
The dark disastrous years of finished Time
Sorrows remembered sweeten present joy.
Nor yet shall all be sad ; for God gave peace,
Much peace, on earth, to all who feared his name.

But first it needs to say, that other style
And other language than thy ear is wont,
Thou must expect to hear, the dialect
Of man. For each in heaven a relish holds
Of former speech, that points to whence he came.
But whether I of person speak, or place,
Event or action, moral or divine ;
Or things unknown compare to things unknown ;
Allude, imply, suggest, apostrophize ;
Or touch, when wandering through the past, on moods
Of mind thou never feltst ; the meaning still,
With easy apprehension, thou shalt take.
So perfect here is knowledge, and the strings
Of sympathy so tuned, that every word
That each to other speaks, though never heard
Before, at once is fully understood,
And every feeling uttered, fully felt.

So shalt thou find, as from my various song,
That backward rolls o'er many a tide of years,
Directly or inferred, thy asking, thou,
And wondering doubt, shalt learn to answer, while
I sketch in brief the history of man.

COURSE OF TIME.

BOOK II.

THIS said, he waked the golden harp, and thus,
While on him inspiration breathed, began.

As from yon everlasting hills that gird
Heaven northward, I thy course espied, I judge
Thou from the arctic regions came? Perhaps Thou noticed on thy way a little orb,
Attended by one moon, her lamp by night,
With her fair sisterhood of planets seven,
Revolving round their central sun; she third
In place, in magnitude the fourth. That orb,
New made, new named, inhabited anew,— Though whiles we sons of Adam visit still,
Our native place, not changed so far but we
Can trace our ancient walks, the scenery
Of childhood, youth, and prime, and hoary age,
But scenery most of suffering and wo,—
That little orb, in days remote of old,
When angels yet were young, was made for man,
And titled Earth, her primal virgin name;—
Created first so lovely, so adorned
With hill, and dale, and lawn, and winding vale,
Woodland, and stream, and lake, and rolling seas,
Green mead, and fruitful tree, and fertile grain,
And herb and flower; so lovely, so adorned
With numerous beasts of every kind, with fowl

Of every wing and every tuneful note,
And with all fish that in the multitude
Of waters swam ; so lovely, so adorned,
So fit a dwelling place for man, that, as
She rose, complete, at the creating word,
The morning stars, the sons of God, aloud
Shouted for joy ; and God, beholding, saw
The fair design, that from eternity
His mind conceived, accomplished, and, well pleased,
His six days finished work most good pronounced,
And man declared the sovereign prince of all.

All else was prone, irrational, and mute,
And unaccountable, by instinct led.
But man He made of angel form erect,
To hold communion with the heavens above ;
And on his soul impressed his image fair,
His own similitude of holiness,
Of virtue, truth, and love ; with reason high
To balance right and wrong, and conscience quick
To choose or to reject ; with knowledge great,
Prudence and wisdom, vigilance and strength,
To guard all force or guile ; and, last of all,
The highest gift of God's abundant grace,
With perfect, free, unbiassed will. Thus man
Was made upright, immortal made, and crowned
The king of all ; to eat, to drink, to do
Freely and sovereignly his will entire.
By one command alone restrained, to prove,
As was most just, his filial love sincere,
His loyalty, obedience due, and faith.
And thus the prohibition ran, expressed,
As God is wont, in terms of plainest truth.

Of every tree that in the garden grows
Thou mayest freely eat ; but of the tree
That knowledge hath of good and ill, eat not,
Nor touch ; for in the day thou eatest, thou

Shalt die. Go, and this one command obey,
Adam, live and be happy, and, with thy Eve,
Fit consort, multiply and fill the earth.

Thus they, the representatives of men,
Were placed in Eden, choicest spot of earth.
With royal honour and with glory crowned,
Adam, the Lord of all, majestic walked,
With godlike countenance sublime, and form
Of lofty towering strength ; and by his side
Eve, fair as morning star, with modesty
Arrayed, with virtue, grace, and perfect love :
In holy marriage wed, and eloquent
Of thought and comely words, to worship God
And sing his praise, the Giver of all good :
Glad, in each other glad, and glad in hope ;
Rejoicing in their future happy race.

O lovely, happy, blest, immortal pair !
Pleased with the present, full of glorious hope.
But short, alas, the song that sings their bliss !
Henceforth the history of man grows dark !
Shade after shade of deepening gloom descends ;
And Innocence laments her robes defiled.
Who farther sings, must change the pleasant lyre
To heavy notes of wo. Why ! dost thou ask,
Surprised ? The answer will surprise thee more.
Man sinned ; tempted, he ate the guarded tree ;—
Tempted of whom thou afterwards shalt hear ;—
Audacious, unbelieving, proud, ungrateful,
He ate the interdicted fruit, and fell ;
And in his fall, his universal race ;
For they in him by delegation were,
In him to stand or fall, to live or die.

Man most ingrate ! so full of grace, to sin,
Here interposed the new arrived, so full
Of bliss, to sin against the Gracious One !

The holy, just, and good ! the Eternal Love !
 Unseen, unheard, unthought of wickedness !
 Why slumbered vengeance ? No, it slumbered not.
 The ever just and righteous God would let
 His fury loose, and satisfy his threat.

That had been just, replied the reverend bard,
 But done, fair youth, thou ne'er hadst met me here.
 I ne'er had seen yon glorious throne in peace.

Thy powers are great, originally great,
 And purified even at the fount of light.
 Exert them now, call all their vigour out ;
 Take room, think vastly, meditate intensely,
 Reason profoundly ; send conjecture forth,
 Let fancy fly, stoop down, ascend ; all length,
 All breadth explore, all moral, all divine ;
 Ask prudence, justice, mercy ask, and might ;
 Weigh good with evil, balance right with wrong ;
 With virtue vice compare, hatred with love ;
 God's holiness, God's justice, and God's truth,
 Deliberately and cautiously compare
 With sinful, wicked, vile, rebellious man ;
 And see if thou canst punish sin, and let Mankind go free. Thou failest ; be not surprised.
 I bade thee search in vain. Eternal love,
 Harp, lift thy voice on high ! eternal love,
 Eternal, sovereign love, and sovereign grace,
 Wisdom, and power, and mercy infinite,
 The Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, God,
 Devised the wondrous plan, devised, achieved,
 And in achieving made the marvel-more.
 Attend, ye heavens ! ye heaven of heavens ! attend,
 Attend and wonder, wonder evermore !
 When man had fallen, rebelled, insulted God ;
 Was most polluted, yet most madly proud ;
 Indebted infinitely, yet most poor ;
 Captive to sin, yet willing to be bound.

To God's incensed justice and hot wrath
Exposed, due victim of eternal death
And utter wo—Harp, lift thy voice on high !
Ye everlasting hills ! ye angels ! bow,
Bow, ye redeemed of men !—God was made flesh,
And dwelt with man on earth ! the Son of God,
Only begotten and well beloved, between Men and his Father's justice interposed ;
Put human nature on ; His wrath sustained ;
And in their name suffered, obeyed, and died,
Making his soul an offering for sin ;
Just for unjust, and innocence for guilt,
By doing, suffering, dying unconstrained,
Save by omnipotence of boundless grace,
Complete atonement made to God appeased ;
Made honourable his insulted law,
Turning the wrath aside from pardoned man.
Thus Truth with Mercy met, and Righteousness,
Stooping from highest heaven, embraced fair Peace,
That walked the earth in fellowship with Love.

O love divine ! O mercy infinite !
The audience here in glowing rapture broke,
O love, all height above, all depth below,
Surpassing far all knowledge, all desire,
All thought ! The Holy One for sinners dies !
The Lord of life for guilty rebels bleeds,
Quenches eternal fire with blood divine !
Abundant mercy ! overflowing grace !
There, whence I came, I something heard of men.
Their name had reached us, and report did speak
Of some abominable horrid thing,
Of desperate offence they had committed.
And something too of wondrous grace we heard.
And oft of our celestial visitants
What man, what God had done, inquired ; but they,
Forbid, our asking never met directly,
Exhorting still to persevere upright,

And we should hear in heaven, though greatly blest
 Ourselves, new wonders of God's wondrous love.
 This hinting, keener appetite to know
 Awaked; and as we talked, and much admired
 What new we there should learn, we hasted each
 To nourish virtue to perfection up,
 That we might have our wondering resolved,
 And leave of louder praise to greater deeds
 Of loving kindness due. Mysterious love!
 God was made flesh, and dwelt with men on earth!
 Blood holy, blood divine for sinners shed!
 My asking ends, but makes my wonder more.
 Saviour of men! henceforth be thou my theme;
 Redeeming love, my study day and night.
 Mankind were lost, all lost, and all redeemed!

Thou errst again, but innocently errst,
 Not knowing sin's depravity, nor man's Sincere and persevering wickedness.
 All were redeemed? Not all, or thou hadst heard
 No human voice in hell. Many refused,
 Although beseeched, refused to be redeemed,
 Redeemed from death to life, from woe to bliss!

Canst thou believe my song when thus I sing?
 When man had fallen, was ruined, hopeless, lost—
 Ye choral harps! ye angels that excel
 In strength! and loudest, ye redeemed of men!
 To God, to Him that sits upon the throne
 On high, and to the Lamb, sing honour, sing
 Dominion, glory, blessing sing, and praise!—
 When man had fallen, was ruined, hopeless, lost,
 Messiah, Prince of Peace, Eternal King,
 Died, that the dead might live, the lost be saved.
 Wonder, O heavens! and be astonished, earth!
 Thou ancient, thou forgotten earth! ye worlds admire!
 Admire and be confounded! and thou hell,
 Deepen thy eternal groan!—men would not be

Redeemed,—I speak of many, not of all,—
Would not be saved for lost, have life for death !

Mysterious song ! the new arrived exclaimed,
Mysterious mercy ! most mysterious hate !
To disobey was mad, this madder far,
Incurable insanity of will !
What now but wrath could guilty men expect ?
What more could love, what more could mercy do ?

No more, resumed the bard, no more they could.
Thou hast seen hell. The wicked there lament :
And why ? for love and mercy twice despised.
The husbandman, who sluggishly forgot
In spring to plough and sow, could censure none,
Though winter clamoured round his empty barns.
But he who, having thus neglected, did
Refuse, when autumn came, and famine threatened,
To reap the golden field that charity
Bestowed ; nay, more obdurate, proud, and blind,
And stupid still, refused, though much beseeched,
And long entreated, even with Mercy's tears,
To eat what to his very lips was held,
Cooked temptingly,—he certainly, at least,
Deserved to die of hunger, unbemoaned.
So did the wicked spurn the grace of God ;
And so were punished with the second death.
The first, no doubt, punishment less severe
Intended ; death, belike, of all entire.
But this incurred, by God discharged, and life
Freely presented, and again despised,
Despised, though bought with Mercy's proper blood,
'Twas this dug hell, and kindled all its bounds
With wrath and inextinguishable fire.

Free was the offer, free to all, of life
And of salvation ; but the proud of heart,
Because 'twas free, would not accept ; and still

To merit wished ; and choosing, thus unshipped,
Uncompassed, unprovisioned, and bestormed,
To swim a sea of breadth immeasurable,
They scorned the goodly bark, whose wings the breath
Of God's eternal Spirit filled for heaven,
That stopped to take them in, and so were lost.

What wonders dost thou tell ! To merit, how !
Of creature meriting in sight of God,
As right of service done, I never heard
Till now. We never fell ; in virtue stood
Upright, and persevered in holiness ;
But stood by grace, by grace we persevered.
Ourselves, our deeds, our holiest, highest deeds
Unworthy aught ; grace worthy endless praise.
If we fly swift, obedient to his will,
He gives us wings to fly ; if we resist
Temptation, and ne'er fall, it is his shield
Omnipotent that wards it off ; if we,
With love unquenchable, before him burn,
'Tis he that lights and keeps alive the flame.
Men surely lost their reason in their fall,
And did not understand the offer made.

They might have understood, the bard replied ;
They had the Bible. Hast thou ever heard
Of such a book ? The author, God himself ;
The subject, God and man, salvation, life
And death—eternal life, eternal death—
Dread words ! whose meaning has no end, no bounds—
Most wondrous book ! bright candle of the Lord !
Star of eternity ! the only star
By which the bark of man could navigate
The sea of life, and gain the coast of bliss
Securely ! only star which rose on Time,
And, on its dark and troubled billows, still,
As generation, drifting swiftly by,
Succeeded generation, threw a ray

Of heaven's own light, and to the hills of God,
The eternal hills, pointed the sinner's eye.
By prophets, seers, and priests, and sacred bards,
Evangelists, apostles, men inspired,
And by the Holy Ghost anointed, set
Apart and consecrated to declare
To Earth the counsels of the Eternal One,
This book, this holiest, this sublimest book,
Was sent. Heaven's will, Heaven's code of laws entire,
To man, this book contained ; defined the bounds
Of vice and virtue, and of life and death ;
And what was shadow, what was substance taught.
Much it revealed ; important all ; the least
Worth more than what else seemed of highest worth,
But this of plainest, most essential truth :
That God is one, eternal, holy, just,
Omnipotent, omniscient, infinite ;
Most wise, most good, most merciful and true ;
In all perfection most unchangeable :
That man, that every man of every clime
And hue, of every age and every rank,
Was bad, by nature and by practice bad ;
In understanding blind, in will perverse,
In heart corrupt ; in every thought, and word,
Imagination, passion, and desire,
Most utterly depraved throughout, and ill,
In sight of Heaven, though less in sight of man ;
At enmity with God his maker born,
And by his very life an heir of death :
That man, that every man was, farther, most
Unable to redeem himself, or pay
One mite of his vast debt to God ; nay, more,
Was most reluctant and averse to be
Redeemed, and sin's most voluntary slave :
That Jesus, Son of God, of Mary born
In Bethlehem, and by Pilate crucified
On Calvary, for man thus fallen and lost,
Died ; and, by death, life and salvation bought,

And perfect righteousness, for all who should
In his great name believe : That He, the third
In the eternal Essence, to the prayer
Sincere should come, should come as soon as asked,
Proceeding from the Father and the Son,
To give faith and repentance, such as God
Accepts ; to open the intellectual eyes,
Blinded by sin ; to bend the stubborn will,
Perversely to the side of wrong inclined,
To God and his commandments, just and good ;
The wild, rebellious passions to subdue,
And bring them back to harmony with heaven ;
To purify the conscience, and to lead
The mind into all truth, and to adorn
With every holy ornament of grace,
And sanctify the whole renewed soul,
Which henceforth might no more fall totally,
But persevere, though erring oft, amidst
The mists of Time, in piety to God,
And sacred works of charity to men :
That he who thus believed, and practised thus,
Should have his sins forgiven, however vile ;
Should be sustained at mid-day, morn, and even,
By God's omnipotent, eternal grace :
And in the evil hour of sore disease,
Temptation, persecution, war, and death,—
For temporal death, although unstinged, remained,— Beneath the shadow of the Almighty's wings
Should sit unhurt, and at the judgment-day,
Should share the resurrection of the just,
And reign with Christ in bliss for evermore :
That all, however named, however great,
Who would not thus believe, nor practise thus,
But in their sins impenitent remained,
Should in perpetual fear and terror live ;
Should die unpardoned, unredeemed, unsaved ;
And, at the hour of doom, should be cast out
To utter darkness in the night of hell,

By mercy and by God abandoned, there
To reap the harvests of eternal wo.

This did that book declare in obvious phrase,
In most sincere and honest words, by God
Himself selected and arranged, so clear,
So plain, so perfectly distinct, that none,
Who read with humble wish to understand,
And asked the Spirit, given to all who asked,
Could miss their meaning, blazed in heavenly light.

This book, this holy book, on every line
Marked with the seal of high divinity,
On every leaf bedewed with drops of love
Divine, and with the eternal heraldry
And signature of God Almighty stamped
From first to last, this ray of sacred light,
This lamp, from off the everlasting throne,
Mercy took down, and, in the night of Time
Stood, casting on the dark her gracious bow ;
And evermore beseeching men, with tears
And earnest sighs, to read, believe, and live.
And many to her voice gave ear, and read,
Believed, obeyed ; and now, as the Amen,
True, Faithful Witness swore, with snowy robes
And branchy palms, surround the fount of life,
And drink the streams of immortality,
For ever happy, and for ever young.

Many believed ; but more the truth of God
Turned to a lie, deceiving and deceived ;
Each with the accursed sorcery of sin,
To his own wish and vile propensity
Transforming still the meaning of the text.

Hear, while I briefly tell what mortals proved,
By effort vast of ingenuity,
Most wondrous, though perverse and damnable,

Proved from the Bible, which, as thou hast heard,
So plainly spoke that all could understand.
First, and not least in number, argued some,
From out this book itself, it was a lie,
A fable framed by crafty men to cheat
The simple herd, and make them bow the knee
To kings and priests. These in their wisdom left
The light revealed, and turned to fancies wild ;
Maintaining loud, that ruined, helpless man,
Needed no Saviour. Others proved that men
Might live and die in sin, and yet be saved,
For so it was decreed ; binding the will,
By God left free, to unconditional,
Unreasonable fate. Others believed
That he who was most criminal, debased,
Condemned, and dead, unaided might ascend
The heights of virtue ; to a perfect law
Giving a lame, half-way obedience, which
By useless effort only served to show
The impotence of him who vainly strove
With finite arm to measure infinite ;
Most useless effort, when to justify
In sight of God it meant, as proof of faith
Most acceptable and worthy of all praise.
Another held, and from the Bible held,
He was infallible, most fallen by such Pretence ; that none the Scriptures, open to all,
And most to humble-hearted, ought to read,
But priests ; that all who ventured to disclaim
His forged authority, incurred the wrath
Of Heaven ; and he who, in the blood of such,
Though father, mother, daughter, wife, or son,
Imbrued his hands, did most religious work,
Well pleasing to the heart of the Most High.
Others in outward rite devotion placed,
In meats, in drinks, in robe of certain shape,
In bodily abasements, bended knees ;
Days, numbers, places, vestments, words, and names ;

Absurdly in their hearts imagining,
That God, like men, was pleased with outward show.
Another, stranger and more wicked still,
With dark and dolorous labour, ill applied,
With many a gripe of conscience, and with most Unhealthy and abortive reasoning,
That brought his sanity to serious doubt,
'Mong wise and honest men, maintained that He,
First Wisdom, Great Messiah, Prince of Peace,
The second of the uncreated Three,
Was naught but man, of earthly origin :
Thus making void the sacrifice divine,
And leaving guilty men, God's holy law
Still unatoned, to work them endless death.

These are a part ; but to relate thee all
The monstrous, unbaptized fantasies,
Imaginations fearfully absurd,
Hobgoblin rites, and moon-struck reveries,
Distracted creeds, and visionary dreams,
More bodiless and hideously misshapen
Than ever fancy, at the noon of night,
Playing at will, framed in the madman's brain,
That from this book of simple truth were proved,
Were proved, as foolish men were wont to prove,
Would bring my word in doubt, and thy belief
Stagger, though here I sit and sing, within
The pale of truth, where falsehood never came.

The rest, who lost the heavenly light revealed,
Not wishing to retain God in their minds,
In darkness wandered on. Yet could they not,
Though moral night around them drew her pall
Of blackness, rest in utter unbelief.
The voice within, the voice of God, that naught
Could bribe to sleep, though steeped in sorceries
Of hell, and much abused by whisperings
Of evil spirits in the dark, announced

A day of judgment and a Judge, a day
Of misery or bliss : and, being ill
At ease, for gods they chose them stocks and stones,
Reptiles, and weeds, and beasts, and creeping things
And spirits accursed, ten thousand deities !
Imagined worse than he who craved their peace ;
And, bowing, worshipped these, as best beseeemed,
With midnight revelry obscene and loud,
With dark, infernal, devilish ceremonies,
And horrid sacrifice of human flesh,
That made the fair heavens blush. So bad was sin ;
So lost, so ruined, so depraved was man,
Created first in God's own image fair.

Oh, cursed, cursed Sin ! traitor to God,
And ruiner of man ! mother of Wo,
And Death, and Hell ! wretched, yet seeking worse ;
Polluted most, yet wallowing in the mire ;
Most mad, yet drinking Frenzy's giddy cup ;
Depth ever deepening, darkness darkening still ;
Folly for wisdom, guilt for innocence ;
Anguish for rapture, and for hope despair ;
Destroyed, destroying ; in tormenting, pained ;
Unawed by wrath, by mercy unreclaimed ;
Thing most unsightly, most forlorn, most sad,
Thy time on earth is passed, thy war with God
And holiness. But who, oh, who shall tell,
Thy unrepentable and ruinous thoughts !
Thy sighs, thy groans ! who reckon thy burning tears,
And damned looks of everlasting grief,
Where now, with those who took their part with thee,
Thou sitt'st in hell, gnawed by the eternal Worm,
To hurt no more, on all the holy hills !

That those, deserting once the lamp of truth,
Should wander ever on, from worse to worse
Erroneously, thy wender needs not ask :
But that enlightened, reasonable men,

Knowing themselves accountable, to whom
 God spoke from heaven, and by his servants warned,
 Both day and night, with earnest, pleading voice,
 Of retribution equal to their works,
 Should persevere in evil, and be lest,—
 This strangeness, this unpardonable guilt,
 Demands an answer, which my song unfolds,
 In part, directly; but, hereafter, more,
 To satisfy thy wonder, thou shalt learn,
 Inferring much from what is yet to sing.

Know, then, of men who sat in highest place,
 Exalted, and for sin by others done
 Were chargeable, the king and priests were chief.
 Many were faithful, holy, just, upright,
 Faithful to God and man, reigning renowned
 In righteousness, and, to the people, loud
 And fearless, speaking all the words of life.
 These, at the judgment-day, as thou shalt hear,
 Abundant harvest reaped. But many, too,
 Alas, how many! famous now in hell,
 Were wicked, cruel, tyrannous, and vile;
 Ambitious of themselves, abandoned, mad;
 And still from servants hasting to be gods,
 Such gods as now they serve in Erebus.
 I pass their lewd example by, that led
 So many wrong, for courtly fashion lost,
 And prove them guilty of one crime alone.
 Of every wicked ruler, prince supreme,
 Or magistrate below, the one intent,
 Purpose, desire, and struggle, day and night,
 Was evermore to wrest the crown from off
 Messiah's head, and put it on his own;
 And in His place give spiritual laws to men;
 To bind religion, free by birth, by God
 And nature free, and made accountable
 To none but God, behind the wheels of state;
 To make the holy altar, where the Prince

Of life, incarnate, bled to ransom man,
A footstool to the throne. For this they met,
Assembled, counselled, meditated, planned;
Devised in open and secret; and for this
Enacted creeds of wondrous texture, creeds
The Bible never owned, unsanctioned too,
And reprobate in heaven; but by the power
That made,—exerted now in gentler form,
Monopolizing rights and privileges,
Equal to all, and waving now the sword
Of persecution fierce, tempered in hell,—
Forced on the conscience of inferior men:
The conscience, that sole monarchy in man,
Owing allegiance to no earthly prince;
Made by the edict of creation free;
Made sacred, made above all human laws;
Holding of heaven alone; of most divine
And indefeasible authority;
An individual sovereignty, that none
Created might, unpunished, bind or touch;
Unbound, save by the eternal laws of God,
And unamenable to all below.

Thus did the uncircumcised potentates
Of earth debase religion in the sight
Of those they ruled, who, looking up, beheld
The fair celestial gift despised, enslaved;
And, mimicking the folly of the great,
With prompt docility despised her too.

The prince or magistrate, however named
Or praised, who, knowing better, acted thus,
Was wicked, and received, as he deserved,
Damnation. But the unfaithful priest, what tongue Enough shall execrate? His doctrine may
Be passed, though mixed with most unhallowed leaven,
That proved, to those who foolishly partook,
Eternal bitterness. But this was still.

His sin, beneath what cloak soever veiled,
His ever growing and perpetual sin,
First, last, and middle thought, whence every wish,
Whence every action rose, and ended both :
To mount to place, and power of worldly sort ;
To ape the gaudy pomp and equipage
Of earthly state, and on his mitred brow
To place a royal crown. For this he sold
The sacred truth to him who most would give
Of titles, benefices, honours, names ;
For this betrayed his Master ; and for this Made merchandise of the immortal souls
Committed to his care. This was his sin.

Of all who office held unfairly, none
Could plead excuse ; he least and last of all.
By solemn, awful ceremony, he
Was set apart to speak the truth entire,
By action and by word ; and round him stood
The people, from his lips expecting knowledge.
One day in seven, the Holy Sabbath termed,
They stood ; for he had sworn, in face of God
And man, to deal sincerely with their souls ;
To preach the gospel for the gospel's sake ;
Had sworn to hate and put away all pride,
All vanity, all love of earthly pomp ;
To seek all mercy, meekness, truth, and grace ;
And being so endowed himself, and taught,
In them like works of holiness to move ;
Dividing faithfully the word of life.
And oft indeed the word of life he taught ;
But practising as thou hast heard, who could Believe ? Thus was Religion wounded sore
At her own altars, and among her friends.
The people went away, and, like the priest,
Fulfilling what the prophet spoke before,
For honour strove, and wealth, and place, as if
The preacher had rehearsed an idle tale.

The enemies of God rejoiced, and loud
The unbeliever laughed, boasting a life
Of fairer character than his, who owned,
For king and guide, the undefiled One.

Most guilty, villanous, dishonest man!
Wolf in the clothing of the gentle lamb!
Dark traitor in Messiah's holy camp!
Leper in saintly garb! assassin masked
In Virtue's robe! vile hypocrite accursed.
I strive in vain to set his evil forth!
The words that should sufficiently accuse
And execrate such reprobate, had need
Come glowing from the lips of eldest hell.
Among the saddest in the den of wo, [damned.
Thou sawst him saddest, 'mong the damned, most

But why should I with indignation burn,
Not well beseeeming here, and long forgot?
Or why one censure for another's sin?
Each had his conscience, each his reason, will,
And understanding, for himself to search,
To choose, reject, believe, consider, act.
And God proclaimed from heaven, and by an oath
Confirmed, that each should answer for himself:
And as his own peculiar work should be,
Done by his proper self, should live or die.
But sin, deceitful and deceiving still,
Had gained the heart, and reason led astray.

A strange belief, that leaned its idiot back
On folly's topmost twig,—belief that God,
Most wise, had made a world, had creatures made,
Beneath his care to govern and protect,— Devoured its thousands. Reason, not the true,
Learned, deep, sober, comprehensive, sound;
But bigoted, one-eyed, short-sighted Reason,
Most zealous, and sometimes, no doubt, sincere,

Devoured its thousands. Vanity to be
Renowned for creed eccentric, devoured
Its thousands ; but a lazy, corpulent,
And over-credulous faith, that leaned on all
It met, nor asked if 'twas a reed or oak ;
Stepped on, but never earnestly inquired
Whether to heaven or hell the journey led,
Devoured its tens of thousands, and its hands
Made reddest in the precious blood of souls.

In Time's pursuits men ran till out of breath.
The astronomer soared up, and counted stars,
And gazed, and gazed upon the heaven's bright face,
Till he dropped down dim-eyed into the grave.
The numerist, in calculations deep,
Grew gray. The merchant at his desk expired.
The statesman hunted for another place,
Till death o'ertook him, and made him his prey.
The miser spent his eldest energy
In grasping for another mite. The scribe
Rubbed pensively his old and withered brow,
Devising new impediments to hold
In doubt, the suit that threatened to end too soon.
The priest collected tithes, and pleaded rights
Of decimation to the very last.
In science, learning, all philosophy,
Men laboured all their days, and laboured hard,
And, dying, sighed how little they had done.
But in religion, they at once grew wise.
A creed in print, though never understood ;
A theologic system on the shelf,
Was spiritual lore enough, and served their turn ;
But served it ill. They sinned, and never knew.
For what the Bible said of good and bad,
Of holiness and sin, they never asked.

Absurd, prodigiously absurd, to think
That man's minute and feeble faculties,

Even in the very childhood of his being,
With mortal shadows dimmed and wrapped around,
Could comprehend at once the mighty scheme,
Where rolled the ocean of eternal love ;
Where wisdom infinite its master-stroke
Displayed ; and where omnipotence, oppressed,
Did travail in the greatness of its strength ;
And everlasting justice lifted up
The sword to smite the guiltless Son of God ;
And mercy smiling bade the sinner go !
Redemption is the science and the song
Of all eternity. Archangels day
And night into its glories look. The saints,
The elders round the Throne, old in the years
Of heaven, examine it perpetually ;
And, every hour, get clearer, ampler views
Of right and wrong ; see virtue's beauty more ;
See vice more utterly depraved and vile ;
And this, with a more perfect hatred, hate ;
That daily love with a more perfect love.

But whether I for man's perdition blame
Office administered amiss, pursuit
Of pleasure false, perverted reason blind,
Or indolence that ne'er inquired ; I blame
Effect and consequence, the branch, the leaf.
Who finds the fount and bitter root, the first
And guiltiest cause whence sprung this endless wo,
Must deep descend into the human heart,
And find it there. Dread passion ! making men
On earth, and even in hell, if Mercy yet
Would stoop so low, unwilling to be saved,
If saved by grace of God. Hear, then, in brief,
What peopled hell, what holds its prisoners there.

Pride, self-adoring pride, was primal cause
Of all sin passed, all pain, all wo to come.
Unconquerable pride ! first, eldest sin,

Great fountain-head of evil ! highest source,
 Whence flowed rebellion 'gainst the Omnipotent,
 Whence hate of man to man, and all else ill.
 Pride at the bottom of the human heart
 Lay, and gave root and nourishment to all
 That grew above. Great ancestor of vice !
 Hate, unbelief, and blasphemy of God ;
 Envy and slander, malice and revenge ;
 And murder, and deceit, and every birth
 Of damned sort, was progeny of pride.
 It was the ever-moving, acting force,
 The constant aim, and the most thirsty wish
 Of every sinner unrenewed, to be
 A god ; in purple or in rags, to have Himself adored. Whatever shape or form
 His actions took, whatever phrase he threw
 About his thoughts, or mantle o'er his life,
 To be the highest, was the inward cause
 Of all ; the purpose of the heart to be Set up, admired, obeyed. But who would bow
 The knee to one who served and was dependent ?
 Hence man's perpetual struggle, night and day,
 To prove he was his own proprietor,
 And independent of his God, that what
 He had might be esteemed his own, and praised
 As such. He laboured still and tried to stand Alone, unpropped, to be obliged to none ;
 And in the madness of his pride, he bade
 His God farewell, and turned away to be
 A god himself : resolving to rely,
 Whatever came, upon his own right hand.

O desperate frenzy ! madness of the will !
 And drunkenness of the heart ! that naught could quench
 But floods of wo, poured from the sea of wrath,
 Behind which mercy set. To think to turn
 The back on life original, and live !
 The creature to set up a rival throne

In the Creator's realm! to deify
 A worm! and in the sight of God be proud!
 To lift an arm of flesh against the shafts
 Of the Omnipotent, and, midst his wrath,
 To seek for happiness!—insanity
 Most mad! guilt most complete! Seest thou those worlds

That roll at various distance round the throne
 Of God, innumerable, and fill the calm
 Of heaven with sweetest harmony, when saints
 And angels sleep? As one of these, from love
 Centripetal, withdrawing, and from light,
 And heat, and nourishment cut off, should rush
 Abandoned o'er the line that runs between Create and increate, from ruin driven
 To ruin still, through the abortive waste;
 So pride from God drew off the bad; and so
 Forsaken of him, he lets them ever try
 Their single arm against the second death;
 Amidst vindictive thunders lets them try
 The stoutness of their hearts, and lets them try
 To quench their thirst amidst the unfading fire;
 And to reap joy where he has sown despair;
 To walk alone, unguided, unbemoaned,
 Where Evil dwells, and Death, and moral Night,
 In utter emptiness to find enough;
 In utter dark find light; and find repose,
 Where God with tempest plagues for evermore.
 For so they wished it, so did pride desire.

Such was the cause that turned so many off
 Rebelliously from God, and led them on
 From vain to vainer still, in endless chase.
 And such the cause that made so many cheeks
 Pale, and so many knees to shake, when men
 Rose from the grave; as thou shalt hear anon.

COURSE OF TIME.

BOOK III.

BEHOLDST thou yonder, on the crystal sea,
Beneath the throne of God, an image fair,
And in its hand a mirror large and bright?
'Tis truth, immutable, eternal truth,
In figure emblematical expressed.
Before it Virtue stands, and smiling sees,
Well pleased, in her reflected soul, no spot.
The sons of heaven, archangel, seraph, saint,
There daily read their own essential worth;
And, as they read, take place among the just;
Or high, or low, each as his value seems.
There each his certain interest learns, his true
Capacity; and, going thence, pursues,
Unerringly, through all the tracts of thought,
As God ordains, best ends by wisest means.

The Bible held this mirror's place on earth.
But, few would read, or, reading, saw themselves.
The chase was after shadows, phantoms strange,
That in the twilight walked of Time, and mocked
The eager hunt, escaping evermore.
Yet with so many promises and looks
Of gentle sort, that he whose arms returned
Empty a thousand times, still stretched them out,
And, grasping, brought them back again unfilled.

In rapid outline thou hast heard of man,
His death, his offered life, that life by most Despised, the Star of God, the Bible, scorned,
That else to happiness and heaven had led,
And saved my lyre from narrative of wo.
Hear now more largely of the ways of Time,
The fond pursuits and vanities of men.

“ Love God, love truth, love virtue, and be happy ;
These were the words first uttered in the ear
Of every being rational made, and made
For thought, or word, or deed accountable.
Most men the first forgot, the second none.
Whatever path they took, by hill or vale,
By night or day, the universal wish,
The aim, and sole intent, was happiness.
But, erring from the heaven-appointed path,
Strange tracks indeed they took through barren wastes,
And up the sandy mountain climbing toiled,
Which pining lay beneath the curse of God,
And naught produced. Yet did the traveller look
And point his eye before him greedily,
As if he saw some verdant spot, where grew
The heavenly flower, where sprung the well of life,
Where undisturbed felicity reposed ;
Though Wisdom’s eye no vestige could discern,
That Happiness had ever passed that way.

Wisdom was right, for still the terms remained Unchanged, unchangeable, the terms on which True peace was given to man, unchanged as God,
Who, in his own essential nature, binds
Eternally to virtue happiness,
Nor lets them part through all his universe.

Philosophy, as thou shalt hear, when she Shall have her praise, her praise and censure too,
Did much, refining and exalting man ;

But could not nurse a single plant that bore
 True happiness. From age to age she toiled,
 Shed from her eyes the mist that dimmed them still,
 Looked forth on man, explored the wild and tame,
 The savage and polite, the sea and land,
 And starry heavens; and then retired far back
 To meditation's silent, shady seat;
 And there sat pale, and thoughtfully, and weighed
 With wary, most exact, and scrupulous care,
 Man's nature, passions, hopes, propensities,
 Relations, and pursuits, in reason's scale;
 And searched and weighed, and weighed and searched again,
 And many a fair and goodly volume wrote,
 That seemed well worded too, wherein were found
 Uncountable receipts, pretending each,
 If carefully attended to, to cure
 Mankind of folly, to root out the briers,
 And thorns, and weeds, that choked the growth of joy;
 And showing too, in plain and decent phrase,
 Which sounded much like Wisdom's, how to plant,
 To shelter, water, culture, prune, and rear
 The tree of happiness; and oft their plans
 Were tried; but still the fruit was green and sour

Of all the trees that in Earth's vineyard grew,
 And with their clusters tempted man to pull
 And eat, one tree, one tree alone, the true
 Celestial manna bore, which filled the soul,
 The tree of holiness, of heavenly seed,
 A native of the skies; though stunted much
 And dwarfed, by Time's cold, damp, ungenial soil,
 And chilling winds, yet yielding fruit so pure,
 So nourishing and sweet, as, on his way,
 Refreshed the pilgrim; and begot desire
 Unquenchable to climb the arduous path
 To where her sister plants, in their own clime,
 Around the fount, and by the stream of life,

Blooming beneath the Sun that never sets,
Bear fruit of perfect relish fully ripe.

To plant this tree, uprooted by the fall,
To earth the Son of God descended, shed
His precious blood ; and on it evermore,
From off his living wings, the Spirit shook
The dews of heaven, to nurse and hasten its growth.
Nor was this care, this infinite expense,
Not needed to secure the holy plant.
To root it out, and wither it from earth,
Hell strove with all its strength, and blew with all
Its blasts ! and Sin, with cold, consumptive breath,
Involved it still in clouds of mortal damp.
Yet did it grow, thus kept, protected thus ;
And bear the only fruit of true delight ;
The only fruit worth plucking under heaven.

But, few, alas ! the holy plant could see,
For heavy mists that Sin around it threw Perpetually ; and few the sacrifice
Would make, by which alone its clusters stooped,
And came within the reach of mortal man.
For this, of him who would approach and eat,
Was rigorously exacted to the full :
To tread and bruise beneath the foot the world
Entire ; its prides, ambitions, hopes, desires ;
Its gold and all its brodered equipage ;
To loose its loves and friendships from the heart,
And cast them off ; to shut the ear against
Its praise, and all its flatteries abhor ;
And, having thus behind him thrown what seemed
So good and fair, then must he lowly kneel,
And with sincerity, in which the Eye
That slumbers not, nor sleeps, could see no lack,
This prayer pray : " Lord, God ! thy will be done, Thy holy will, howe'er it cross my own."
Hard labour this for flesh and blood ! too hard

For most it seemed. So, turning, they the tree
Derided as mere bramble, that could bear
No fruit of special taste ; and so set out
Upon ten thousand different routes to seek
What they had left behind, to seek what they Had lost. For still as something once possessed
And lost, true happiness appeared. All thought
They once were happy ; and even while they smoked
And panted in the chase, believed themselves
More miserable to-day than yesterday,
To-morrow than to-day. When youth complained,
The ancient sinner shook his hoary head,
As if he meant to say, Stop till you come
My length, and then you may have cause to sigh.
At twenty, cried the boy, who now had seen
Some blemish in his joys, How happily
Plays yonder child that busks the mimic babe,
And gathers gentle flowers, and never sighs !
At forty, in the fervour of pursuit,
Far on in disappointment's dreary vale,
The grave and sage-like man looked back upon
The stripling youth of plump unseared hope,
Who galloped gay and briskly up behind,
And, moaning, wished himself eighteen again.
And he, of threescore years and ten, in whose Chilled eye, fatigued with gaping after hope,
Earth's freshest verdure seemed but blasted leaves,
Praised childhood, youth, and manhood ; and denounced
Old age alone as barren of all joy.
Decisive proof that men had left behind
The happiness they sought, and taken a most Erroneous path ; since every step they took
Was deeper mire. Yet did they onward run,
Pursuing Hope that danced before them still,
And beckoned them to proceed ; and with their hands,
That shook and trembled piteously with age,
Grasped at the lying Shade, even till the earth
Beneath them broke, and wrapped them in the grave.

Sometimes indeed, when Wisdom in their ear
Whispered, and with its disenchanting wand,
Effectually touched the sorcery of their eyes,
Directly pointing to the holy tree,
Where grew the food they sought, they turned, surprised.

That they had missed so long what now they found
As one upon whose mind some new and rare
Idea glances, and retires as quick,
Ere memory has time to write it down ;
Stung with the loss, into a thoughtful cast,
He throws his face, and rubs his vexed brow ;
Searches each nook and corner of his soul
With frequent care ; reflects, and re-reflects,
And tries to touch relations that may start
The fugitive again ; and oft is foiled ;
Till something like a seeming chance, or flight
Of random fancy, when expected least,
Calls back the wandered thought, long sought in vain ;
Then does uncommon joy fill all his mind ;
And still he wonders, as he holds it fast,
What lay so near he could not sooner find :
So did the man rejoice, when from his eye
The film of folly fell, and what he, day
And night, and far and near, had idly searched,
Sprung up before him suddenly displayed ;
So wondered why he missed the tree so long.

But, few returned from folly's giddy chase,
Few heard the voice of Wisdom, or obeyed.
Keen was the search, and various, and wide,
Without, within, along the flowery vale,
And up the rugged cliff, and on the top
Of mountains high, and on the ocean wave.
Keen was the search, and various, and wide,
And ever and anon a shout was heard :
"Ho ! here's the tree of life ! come, eat, and live !"
And round the new discoverer quick they flocked

In multitudes, and plucked, and with great haste
Devoured ; and sometimes in the lips 'twas sweet,
And promised well ; but, in the belly gall.
Yet after him that cried again, Ho ! here's
The tree of life ! again they ran, and pulled,
And chewed again, and found it bitter still.
From disappointment on to disappointment,
Year after year, age after age, pursued,
The child, the youth, the hoary-headed man,
Alike pursued, and ne'er grew wise. For it
Was folly's most peculiar attribute,
And native act, to make experience void.

But hastily, as pleasures tasted, turned
To loathing and disgust, they needed not Even such experiment to prove them vain.
In hope or in possession, Fear, alike,
Boding disaster, stood. Over the flower
Of fairest sort, that bloomed beneath the sun,
Protected most, and sheltered from the storm,
The Spectre, like a dark and thunderous cloud,
Hung dismally, and threatened, before the hand
Of him that wished, could pull it, to descend,
And o'er the desert drive its withered leaves ;
Or, being pulled, to blast it unenjoyed,
While yet he gazed upon its loveliness
And just began to drink its fragrance up.

Gold many hunted, sweat and bled for gold ;
Waked all the night, and laboured all the day.
And what was this allurements dost thou ask ?
A dust dug from the bowels of the earth,
Which, being cast into the fire, came out
A shining thing that fools admired, and called
A god ; and in devout and humble plight
Before it kneeled, the greater to the less ;
And on its altar sacrificed ease, peace,
Truth, faith, integrity ; good conscience, friends,

Love, charity, benevolence, and all
The sweet and tender sympathies of life ;
And, to complete the horrid murderous rite,
And signalize their folly, offered up
Their souls and an eternity of bliss,
To gain them—what?—an hour of dreaming joy,
A feverish hour that hastened to be done,
And ended in the bitterness of woe.

Most, for the luxuries it bought, the pomp,
The praise, the glitter, fashion, and renown,
This yellow phantom followed and adored.
But there was one in folly farther gone,
With eye awry, incurable, and wild,
The laughing-stock of devils and of men,
And by his guardian angel quite given up,—
The miser, who with dust inanimate
Held wedded intercourse. Ill guided wretch !
Thou mightst have seen him at the midnight hour,
When good men slept, and in light winged dreams
Ascended up to God,—in wasteful hall,
With vigilance and fasting worn to skin
And bone, and wrapped in most debasing rags,—
Thou mightst have seen him bending o'er his heaps
And holding strange communion with his gold ;
And as his thievish fancy seemed to hear
The night-man's foot approach, starting alarmed,
And in his old, decrepit, withered hand,
That palsy shook, grasping the yellow earth
To make it sure. Of all God made upright,
And in their nostrils breathed a living soul,
Most fallen, most prone, most earthy, most debased ;
Of all that sold Eternity for Time,
None bargained on so easy terms with Death.
Illustrious fool ! nay, most inhuman wretch !
He sat among his bags, and, with a look
Which hell might be ashamed of, drove the poor

Away unalmsed, and midst abundance died,
Sorest of evils ! died of utter want.

Before this Shadow, in the vales of earth,
Fools saw another glide, which seemed of more
Intrinsic worth. Pleasure her name ; good name, Though ill applied. A thousand forms she took,
A thousand garbs she wore ; in every age
And clime, changing, as in her votaries changed
Desire ; but, inwardly, the same in all.
Her most essential lineaments we trace ;
Her general features everywhere alike.

Of comely form she was, and fair of face ;
And underneath her eyelids sat a kind
Of witching sorcery that nearer drew
Whoever, with unguarded look, beheld ;
A dress of gaudy hue loosely attired
Her loveliness ; her air and manner frank,
And seeming free of all disguise ; her song
Enchanting ; and her words, which sweetly dropped,
As honey from the comb, most large of promise,
Still prophesying days of new delight,
And rapturous nights of undecaying joy ;
And in her hand, where'er she went, she held
A radiant cup that seemed of nectar full ;
And by her side, danced fair, delusive Hope.
The fool pursued, enamoured ; and the wise
Experienced man, who reasoned much and thought,
Was sometimes seen laying his wisdom down,
And vying with the stripling in the chase.

Nor wonder thou, for she was really fair,
Decked to the very taste of flesh and blood,
And many thought her sound within, and gay
And healthy at the heart : but thought amiss.
For she was full of all disease : her bones
Were rotten ; Consumption licked her blood, and drank

Her marrow up ; her breath smelled mortally ,
And in her bowels plague and fever lurked ;
And in her very heart, and reins, and life,
Corruption's worm gnawed greedily unseen.

Many her haunts. Thou mightst have seen her now
With Indolence, lolling on the mid-day couch,
And whispering drowsy words ; and now at dawn,
Loudly and rough, joining the sylvan horn ;
Or sauntering in the park, and to the tale
Of slander giving ear ; or sitting fierce,
Rude, blasphemous, malicious, raving, mad,
Where fortune to the fickle die was bound.

But chief she loved the scene of deep debauch,
Where revelry, and dance, and frantic song,
Disturbed the sleep of honest men ; and where
The drunkard sat, she entered in, well pleased,
With eye brimful of wanton mirthfulness,
And urged him still to fill another cup.

And at the shadowy twilight, in the dark
And gloomy night, I looked, and saw her come
Abroad, arrayed in harlot's soft attire ;
And walk without in every street, and lie
In wait at every corner, full of guile :
And as the unwary youth of simple heart,
And void of understanding, passed, she caught
And kissed him, and with lips of lying said,
I have peace-offerings with me ; I have paid
My vows this day ; and therefore came I forth
To meet thee, and to seek thee diligently,
To seek thy face, and I have found thee here.
My bed is decked with robes of tapestry,
With carved work and sheets of linen fine ;
Perfumed with aloes, myrrh, and cinnamon.
Sweet are stolen waters ! pleasant is the bread
In secret eaten ! the goodman is from home.

Come, let us take our fill of love till morn
Awake ; let us delight ourselves with loves.
With much fair speech, she caused the youth to yield ;
And forced him with the flattering of her tongue.
I looked, and saw him follow to her house,
As goes the ox to slaughter ; as the fool
To the correction of the stocks ; or bird
That hastes into the subtle fowler's snare,
And knows not, simple thing, 'tis for its life.
I saw him enter in, and heard the door
Behind them shut ; and in the dark, still night,
When God's unsleeping eye alone can see,
He went to her adulterous bed. At morn
I looked, and saw him not among the youths.
I heard his father mourn, his mother weep,
For none returned that went with her. The dead
Were in her house, her guests in depths of hell.
She wove the winding-sheet of souls, and laid
Them in the urn of everlasting death.

Such was the Shadow fools pursued on earth,
Under the name of pleasure ; fair outside,
Within corrupted, and corrupting still.
Ruined and ruinous, her sure reward,
Her total recompense, was still, as he,
The bard, recorder of Earth's Seasons, sung,
" Vexation, disappointment, and remorse."
Yet at her door the young and old, and some
Who held high character among the wise,
Together stood, and strove among themselves,
Who first should enter, and be ruined first.

Strange competition of immortal souls !
To sweat for death ! to strive for misery !
But think not Pleasure told her end was death.
Even human folly then had paused at least,
And given some signs of hesitation ; nor
Arrived so hot, and out of breath, at wo.

Though contradicted every day by facts
That sophistry itself would stumble o'er,
And to the very teeth a liar proved,
Ten thousand times, as if unconscious still
Of inward blame, she stood and waved her hand,
And pointed to her bower, and said to all
Who passed, Take yonder flowery path, my steps
Attend ; I lead the smoothest way to heaven ;
This world receive as surety for the next :
And many simple men, most simple, though
Renowned for learning much, and wary skill,
Believed, and turned aside, and were undone.

Another leaf of finished Time we turn,
And read of fame, terrestrial fame, which died,
And rose not at the resurrection morn ;
Not that by virtue earned, the true renown,
Begun on earth, and lasting in the skies,
Worthy the lofty wish of seraphim,—
The approbation of the Eye that sees
The end from the beginning, sees from cause
To most remote effect. Of it we read
In book of God's remembrance, in the book
Of life, from which the quick and dead were judged,
The book that lies upon the Throne, and tells
Of glorious acts by saints and angels done ;
The record of the holy, just, and good.

Of all the phantoms fleeting in the mist
Of Time, though meagre all, and ghostly thin,
Most unsubstantial, unessential shade
Was earthly Fame. She was a voice alone,
And dwelt upon the noisy tongues of men.
She never thought, but gabbled ever on,
Applauding most what least deserved applause.
The motive, the result, was naught to her.
The deed alone, though dyed in human gore,
And steeped in widow's tears, if it stood out

To prominent display, she talked of much,
 And roared around it with a thousand tongues.
 As changed the wind her organ, so she changed
 Perpetually; and whom she praised to-day,
 Vexing his ear with acclamations loud,
 To-morrow blamed, and hissed him out of sight.

Such was her nature, and her practice such.
 But, O! her voice was sweet to mortal ears,
 And touched so pleasantly the strings of pride
 And vanity, which in the heart of man
 Were ever strung harmonious to her note,
 That many thought, to live without her song
 Was rather death than life. To live unknown,
 Unnoticed, unrenowned! to die unpraised,
 Unepitaphed! to go down to the pit,
 And moulder into dust among vile worms,
 And leave no whispering of a name on earth!—
 Such thought was cold about the heart, and chilled
 The blood. Who could endure it? who could choose
 Without a struggle, to be swept away
 From all remembrance, and have part no more
 With living men? Philosophy failed here,
 And self-approving pride. Hence it became
 The aim of most, and main pursuit, to win
 A name, to leave some vestige as they passed,
 That following ages might discern, they once
 Had been on earth, and acted something there.

Many the roads they took, the plans they tried.
 The man of science to the shade retired,
 And laid his head upon his hand, in mood
 Of awful thoughtfulness, and dived, and dived
 Again, deeper and deeper still, to sound
 The cause remote; resolved, before he died,
 To make some grand discovery, by which
 He should be known to all posterity.

And in the silent vigils of the night,
When uninspired men reposed, the bard,
Ghastly of countenance, and from his eye
Oft streaming wild unearthly fire, sat up,
And sent imagination forth, and searched
The far and near, heaven, earth, and gloomy hell,
For fiction new, for thought, unthought before ;
And when some curious, rare idea peered
Upon his mind, he dipped his hasty pen,
And by the glimmering lamp, or moonlight beam
That through his lattice peeped, wrote fondly down,
What seemed in truth imperishable song.

And sometimes too, the reverend divine,
In meditation deep of holy things
And vanities of Time, heard Fame's sweet voice
Approach his ear ; and hung another flower,
Of earthly sort, about the sacred truth ;
And ventured whiles to mix the bitter text,
With relish suited to the sinner's taste.

And oft-times too, the simple hind, who seemed Ambitionless, arrayed in humble garb,
While round him, spreading, fed his harmless flock,
Sitting was seen, by some wild warbling brook,
Carving his name upon his favourite staff ;
Or, in ill-favoured letters, tracing it
Upon the aged thorn, or on the face
Of some conspicuous, oft-frequented stone,
With persevering, wondrous industry ;
And hoping, as he toiled amain, and saw
The characters take form, some other wight,
Long after he was dead and in the grave,
Should loiter there at noon, and read his name.

In purple some, and some in rags, stood forth
For reputation. Some displayed a limb

Well-fashioned ; some, of lowlier mind, a cane
Of curious workmanship and marvellous twist.
In strength some sought it, and in beauty more.
Long, long, the fair one laboured at the glass,
And, being tired, called in auxiliar skill,
To have her sails, before she went abroad,
Full spread and nicely set, to catch the gale
Of praise ; and much she caught, and much deserved,
When outward loveliness was index fair
Of purity within : but, oft, alas !
The bloom was on the skin alone ; and when
She saw, sad sight ! the roses on her cheek
Wither, and heard the voice of Fame retire
And die away, she heaved most piteous sighs,
And wept most lamentable tears ; and whiles,
In wild delirium, made rash attempt,
Unholy mimicry of Nature's work !
To re-create, with frail and mortal things,
Her withered face. Attempt how fond and vain !
Her frame itself soon mouldered down to dust ;
And, in the land of deep forgetfulness,
Her beauty and her name were laid beside
Eternal silence and the loathsome worm ;
Into whose darkness flattery ventured not ;
Where none had ears to hear the voice of Fame.

Many the roads they took, the plans they tried ;
And awful oft the wickedness they wrought.
To be observed, some scrambled up to thrones,
And sat in vestures dripping wet with gore.
The warrior dipped his sword in blood, and wrote
His name on lands and cities desolate.
The rich bought fields, and houses built, and raised
The monumental piles up to the clouds,
And called them by their names : and, strange to tell !
Rather than be unknown, and pass away
Obscurely to the grave, some, small of soul,
That else had perished unobserved, acquired

Considerable renown by oaths profane ;
By jesting boldly with all sacred things ;
And uttering fearlessly what'er occurred ;
Wild, blasphemous, positionable thoughts,
That Satan in them moved ; by wiser men
Suppressed, and quickly banished from the mind.

Many the roads they took, the plans they tried.
But all in vain. Who grasped at earthly fame, Grasped wind ; nay worse, a serpent grasped, that through
His hand slid smoothly, and was gone ; but left
A sting behind which wrought him endless pain.
For oft her voice was old Abaddon's lure,
By which he charmed the foolish soul to death.

So happiness was sought in pleasure, gold,
Renown, by many sought. But should I sing
Of all the trifling race, my time, thy faith
Would fail, of things erectly organized,
And having rational, articulate voice,
And claiming outward brotherhood with man,
Of him that laboured sorely, in his sweat
Smoking afar, then hurried to the wine,
Deliberately resolving to be mad ;
Of him who taught the ravenous bird to fly
This way or that, thereby supremely blest ;
Or rode in fury with the howling pack,
Affronting much the noble animal,
He spurred into such company ; of him
Who down into the bowels of the earth
Descended deeply, to bring up the wreck
Of some old earthen ware, which having stewed,
With every proper care, he home returned
O'er many a sea and many a league of land,
Triumphantly to show the marvellous prize ;
And him that vexed his brain, and theories built
Of gossamer upon the brittle winds,

Perplexed exceedingly why shells were found
Upon the mountain tops, but wondering not Why shells were found at all, more wondrous still.
Of him who strange enjoyment took in tales
Of fairy folk, and sleepless ghosts, and sounds
Unearthly, whispering in the ear of night
Disastrous things; and him who still foretold
Calamity which never came, and lived
In terror all his days of comets rude,
That should unmannerly and lawless drive
Athwart the path of earth, and burn mankind;
As if the appointed hour of doom, by God
Appointed, ere its time should come! as if Too small the number of substantial ills,
And real fears, to vex the sons of men.
These, had they not possessed immortal souls,
And been accountable, might have been passed
With laughter, and forgot; but, as it was,
And is, their folly asks a serious tear.

Keen was the search, and various, and wide,
For happiness. Take one example more,
So strange; that common fools looked on amazed;
And wise and sober men together drew,
And trembling stood; and angels in the heavens
Grew pale, and talked of vengeance as at hand;
The sceptic's route, the unbeliever's, who,
Despising reason, revelation, God,
And kicking 'gainst the pricks of conscience, rushed
Deliriously upon the bossy shield
Of the Omnipotent; and in his heart
Purposed to deify the idol chance;
And laboured hard,—oh, labour worse than naught!—
And toiled with dark and crooked reasoning,
To make the fair and lovely earth, which dwelt
In sight of Heaven, a cold and fatherless,
Forsaken thing, that wandered on, forlorn,
Undestined, uncompassioned, unupheld;

A vapour eddying in the whirl of chance,
And soon to vanish everlastingly.
He travailed sorely, and made many a tack,
His sails oft shifting, to arrive,—dread thought!—
Arrive at utter nothingness; and have
Being no more, no feeling, memory,
No lingering consciousness that e'er he was.
Guilt's midnight wish! last, most abhorred thought!
Most desperate effort of extremest sin!
Others, pre-occupied, ne'er saw true Hope:
He, seeing, aimed to stab her to the heart,
And with infernal chymistry to wring
The last sweet drop from sorrow's cup of gall;
To quench the only ray that cheered the earth,
And leave mankind in night which had no star.
Others the streams of Pleasure troubled; he Toiled much to dry her very fountain head.
Unpardonable man! sold under sin!
He was the devil's pioneer, who cut
The fences down of Virtue, sapped her walls,
And opened a smooth and easy way to death.
Traitor to all existence, to all life!
Soul-suicide! determined foe of being!
Intended murderer of God, Most High!
Strange road, most strange! to seek for happiness!
Hell's mad-houses are full of such, too fierce,
Too furiously insane, and desperate,
To rage unbound 'mong evil spirits damned.

Fertile was earth in many things, not least
In fools, who mercy both and judgment scorned,
Scorned love, experience scorned, and onward rushed
To swift destruction, giving all reproof,
And all instruction, to the winds; and much
Of both they had, and much despised of both.

Wisdom took up her harp, and stood in place
Of frequent concourse, stood in every gate,

By every way, and walked in every street ;
And, lifting up her voice, proclaimed : " Be wise,
Ye fools ! be of an understanding heart ;
Forsake the wicked, come not near his house,
Pass by, make haste, depart and turn away.
Me follow, me, whose ways are pleasantness,
Whose paths are peace, whose end is perfect joy."
The Seasons came and went, and went and came,
To teach men gratitude ; and as they passed,
Gave warning of the lapse of Time, that else
Had stolen unheeded by. The gentle Flowers,
Retired, and, stooping o'er the wilderness,
Talked of humility, and peace, and love.
The Dews came down unseen at evening-tide,
And silently their bounties shed, to teach
Mankind unostentatious charity.
With arm in arm the forest rose on high,
And lesson gave of brotherly regard.
And, on the rugged mountain-brow exposed,
Bearing the blast alone, the ancient oak
Stood, lifting high his mighty arm, and still
To courage in distress exhorted loud.
The flocks, the herds, the birds, the streams, the breeze,
Attuned the heart to melody and love.
Mercy stood in the cloud, with eye that wept
Essential love ; and, from her glorious bow,
Bending to kiss the earth in token of peace,
With her own lips, her gracious lips, which God
Of sweetest accent made, she whispered still,
She whispered to Revenge, Forgive, forgive.
The Sun, rejoicing round the earth, announced
Daily the wisdom, power, and love of God.
The Moon awoke, and from her maiden face,
Shedding her cloudy locks, looked meekly forth,
And with her virgin Stars walked in the heavens,
Walked nightly there, conversing as she walked,
Of purity, and holiness, and God.
In dreams and visions, sleep instructed much.

Day uttered speech to day, and night to night
Taught knowledge. Silence had a tongue; the grave,
The darkness, and the lonely waste, had each
A tongue, that ever said, Man! think of God!
Think of thyself! think of eternity!
Fear God, the thunders said, Fear God, the waves.
Fear God, the lightning of the storm replied.
Fear God, deep loudly answered back to deep:
And, in the temples of the Holy One,
Messiah's messengers, the faithful few,
Faithful 'mong many false, the Bible opened,
And cried, Repent! repent ye sons of men!
Believe, be saved; and reasoned awfully
Of temperance, righteousness, and judgment soon
To come, of ever-during life and death:
And chosen bards from age to age awoke
The sacred lyre, and full on Folly's ear,
Numbers of righteous indignation poured:
And God, omnipotent, when mercy failed,
Made bare his holy arm, and with the stroke
Of vengeance smote; the fountains of the deep
Broke up, heaven's windows opened, and sent on men
A flood of wrath, sent plague and famine forth;
With earthquake rocked the world beneath, with storms
Above laid cities waste, and turned fat lands
To barrenness, and with the sword of war
In fury marched, and gave them blood to drink.
Angels remonstrated, Mercy beseeched,
Heaven smiled and frowned, Hell groaned, Time fled,
Death shook
His dart, and threatened to make repentance vain,— Incredible assertion! men rushed on Determinedly to ruin; shut their ears,
Their eyes, to all advice, to all reproof;
O'er mercy and o'er judgment, downward rushed
To misery; and,—most incredible
Of all!—to misery rushed along the way
Of disappointment and remorse, where still

At every step, adders, in pleasure's foam,
 Stung mortally ; and Joys,—whose bloomy cheeks
 Seemed glowing high with immortality,
 Whose bosoms prophesied superfluous bliss,—
 While in the arms received, and locked in close
 And riotous embrace, turned pale, and cold,
 And died, and swelled of putrefaction rank ;
 Turned, in the very moment of delight,
 A loathsome, heavy corpse, that with the clear
 And hollow eyes of death, stared horribly.

All tribes, all generations of the earth,
 Thus wantonly to ruin drove alike.
 We heard indeed of golden and silver days,
 And of primeval innocence unstained :
 A pagan tale ! but by baptised herds,
 Philosophers, and statesmen, who were still Held wise and cunning men, talked of so much,
 That most believed it so, and asked not why.

The pair, the family first made, were ill ;
 And for their great peculiar sin, incurred
 The Curse, and left it due to all their race ;
 And bold example gave of every crime,
 Hate, murder, unbelief, reproach, revenge.
 A time, 'tis true, there came, of which thou soon
 Shalt hear, the Sabbath Day, the Jubilee
 Of earth, when righteousness and peace prevailed.
 This time except, who writes the history
 Of men, and writes it true, must write them bad ;
 Who reads, must read of violence and blood.
 The man, who could the story of one day
 Peruse, the wrongs, oppressions, cruelties,
 Deceits, and perjuries, and vanities,
 Rewarded worthlessness, rejected worth,
 Assassinations, robberies, thefts, and wars,
 Disastrous accidents, life thrown away,

Divinity insulted, Heaven despised,
Religion scorned,—and not been sick at night,
And sad, had gathered greater store of mirth,
Than ever wise man in the world could find.

One cause of folly, one especial cause,
Was this: Few knew what wisdom was, though well
Defined in God's own words, and printed large,
On heaven and earth in characters of light,
And sounded in the ear by every wind.

Wisdom is humble, said the voice of God.
'Tis proud, the world replied. Wisdom, said God,
Forgives, forbears, and suffers, not for fear
Of man, but God. Wisdom revenges, said
The world, is quick and deadly of resentment,
Thrusts at the very shadow of affront,
And hastes, by death, to wipe its honour clean.
Wisdom, said God, loves enemies, entreats,
Solicits, begs for peace. Wisdom, replied
The world, hates enemies, will not ask peace,
Conditions spurns, and triumphs in their fall.
Wisdom mistrusts itself, and leans on Heaven,
Said God. It trusts and leans upon itself,
The world replied. Wisdom retires, said God,
And counts it bravery to bear reproach;
And shame, and lowly poverty, upright;
And weeps with all who have just cause to weep.
Wisdom, replied the world, struts forth to gaze,
Treads the broad stage of life with clamorous foot,
Attracts all praises, counts it bravery
Alone to wield the sword, and rush on death;
And never weeps, but for its own disgrace.
Wisdom, said God, is highest, when it stoops
Lowest before the Holy Throne; throws down
Its crown, abased; forgets itself, admires,
And breathes adoring praise. There Wisdom stoops,

Indeed, the world replied, there stoops, because
It must, but stoops with dignity ; and thinks
And meditates the while of inward worth.

Thus did Almighty God, and thus the world,
Wisdom define : and most the world believed,
And boldly called the truth of God a lie.
Hence, he that to the worldly wisdom shaped
His character, became the favourite
Of men, was honourable termed, a man
Of spirit, noble, glorious, lofty soul !
And as he crossed the earth in chase of dreams,
Received prodigious shouts of warm applause.
Hence, who to godly wisdom framed his life,
Was counted mean, and spiritless, and vile ;
And as he walked obscurely in the path
Which led to heaven, fools hissed with serpent tongue,
And poured contempt upon his holy head,
And poured contempt on all who praised his name.

But false as this account of wisdom was,
The world's I mean, it was its best, the creed
Of sober, grave, and philosophic men,
With much research and cogitation framed,
Of men, who with the vulgar scorned to sit.

The popular belief seemed rather worse,
When heard replying to the voice of truth.

The wise man, said the Bible, walks with God ;
Surveys, far on, the endless line of life ;
Values his soul, thinks of eternity,
Both worlds considers, and provides for both ;
With reason's eye his passions guards ; abstains
From evil ; lives on hope, on hope, the fruit
Of faith ; looks upward, purifies his soul,
Expands his wings, and mounts into the sky ;

Passes the sun, and gains his father's house,
And drinks with angels from the fount of bliss.

The multitude aloud replied,—replied
By practice, for they were not bookish men,
Nor apt to form their principles in words,—
The wise man, first of all, eradicates,
As much as possible, from out his mind,
All thought of death, God, and eternity ;
Admires the world, and thinks of Time alone ;
Avoids the Bible, all reproof avoids ;
Rocks Conscience, if he can, asleep ; puts out
The eye of Reason, prisons, tortures, binds,
And makes her thus, by violence and force,
Give wicked evidence against herself ;
Lets passion loose, the substance leaves, pursues
The shadow vehemently, but ne'er o'ertakes ;
Puts by the cup of holiness and joy ;
And drinks, carouses deeply, in the bowl
Of death ; grovels in dust, pollutes, destroys,
His soul ; is miserable to acquire
More misery ; deceives to be deceived ;
Strives, labours, to the last, to shun the truth ;
Strives, labours, to the last, to damn himself ;
Turns desperate, shudders, groans, blasphemes, and dies,
And sinks—where could he else ?—to endless woe ;
And drinks the wine of God's eternal wrath.

The learned thus, and thus the unlearned world,
Wisdom defined. In sound they disagreed ;
In substance, in effect, in end, the same ;
And equally to God and truth opposed,
Opposed as darkness to the light of heaven.
Yet were there some, that seemed well-meaning men,
Who systems planned, expressed in supple words,
Which praised the man as wisest, that in one
United both ; pleased God, and pleased the world ;

And with the saint, and with the sinner, had,
 Changing his garb, unseen, a good report.
 And many thought their definition best;
 And in their wisdom grew exceeding wise.

Union abhorred! dissimulation vain!
 Could Holiness embrace the harlot Sin?
 Could life wed death? Could God with Mammon dwell?

Oh, foolish men! oh, men for ever lost!
 In spite of mercy lost, in spite of wrath!
 In spite of Disappointment and Remorse,
 Which made the way to ruin, ruinous!

Hear what they were: The progeny of Sin,
 Alike, and oft combined; but differing much
 In mode of giving pain. As felt the gross,
 Material part, when in the furnace cast,
 So felt the soul, the victim of Remorse.
 It was a fire which on the verge of God's Commandments burned, and on the vitals fed
 Of all who passed. Who passed, there met Remorse.
 A violent fever seized his soul; the heavens
 Above, the earth beneath, seemed glowing brass,
 Heated seven times; he heard dread voices speak,
 And mutter horrid prophecies of pain,
 Severer and severer yet to come;
 And as he writhed and quivered, scorched within,
 The Fury round his torrid temples flapped
 Her fiery wings, and breathed upon his lips
 And parched tongue the withered blasts of hell.
 It was the suffering begun, thou sawst
 In symbol of the Worm that never dies.

The other, Disappointment, rather seemed Negation of delight. It was a thing
 Sluggish and torpid, tending towards death.
 Its breath was cold, and made the sportive blood,

Stagnant, and dull, and heavy, round the wheels
Of life. The roots of that whereon it blew,
Decayed, and with the genial soil no more
Held sympathy ; the leaves, the branches drooped,
And mouldered slowly down to formless dust ;
Not tossed and driven by violence of winds,
But withering where they sprung, and rotting there
Long disappointed, disappointed still,
The hopeless man, hopeless in his main wish,
As if returning back to nothing, felt ;
In strange vacuity of being hung,
And rolled and rolled his eye on emptiness,
That seemed to grow more empty every hour.

One of this mood I do remember well.
We name him not,—what now are earthly names ?—
In humble dwelling born, retired, remote ;
In rural quietude, 'mong hills, and streams,
And melancholy deserts, where the Sun
Saw, as he passed, a shepherd only, here
And there, watching his little flock, or heard
The ploughman talking to his steers ; his hopes,
His morning hopes, awoke before him, smiling,
Among the dews and holy mountain airs ;
And fancy coloured them with every hue
Of heavenly loveliness. But soon his dreams
Of childhood fled away, those rainbow dreams,
So innocent and fair, that withered Age,
Even at the grave, cleared up his dusty eye,
And, passing all between, looked fondly back
To see them once again, ere he departed :
These fled away, and anxious thought, that wished
To go, yet whither knew not well to go,
Possessed his soul, and held it still awhile.
He listened, and heard from far the voice of fame,
Heard and was charmed ; and deep and sudden vow
Of resolution, made to be renowned ;
And deeper vowed again to keep his vow.

His parents saw, his parents, whom God made
Of kindest heart, saw, and indulged his hope.
The ancient page he turned, read much, thought much,
And with old bards of honourable name
Measured his soul severely ; and looked up
To fame, ambitious of no-second place.
Hope grew from inward faith, and promised fair.
And out before him opened many a path
Ascending, where the laurel highest waved
Her branch of endless green. He stood admiring,
But stood, admired, not long. The harp he seized,
The harp he loved, loved better than his life,
The harp which uttered deepest notes, and held
The ear of thought a captive to its song.
He searched and meditated much, and whiles,
With rapturous hand, in secret, touched the lyre,
Aiming at glorious strains ; and searched again
For theme deserving of immortal verse ;
Chose now, and now refused, unsatisfied ;
Pleased, then displeased, and hesitating still.

Thus stood his mind, when round him came a cloud,
Slowly and heavily it came, a cloud
Of ills, we mention not. Enough to say,
'Twas cold, and dead, impenetrable gloom.
He saw its dark approach, and saw his hopes,
One after one, put out, as nearer still
It drew his soul ; but fainted not at first,
Fainted not soon. He knew the lot of man
Was trouble, and prepared to bear the worst ;
Endure whate'er should come, without a sigh
Endure, and drink, even to the very dregs,
The bitterest cup that Time could measure out ;
And, having done, look up, and ask for more.

He called philosophy, and with his heart
Reasoned. He called religion too, but called Reluctantly, and therefore was not heard.

Asham'd to be o'ermatch'd by earthly woes,
He sought, and sought, with eye that dimm'd apace.
To find some avenue to light, some place
On which to rest a hope ; but sought in vain.
Darker and darker still the darkness grew.
At length he sunk, and Disappointment stood
His only comforter, and mournfully
Told all was pass'd. His interest in life,
In being, ceased : and now he seem'd to feel,
And shudder'd as he felt, his powers of mind
Decaying in the spring-time of his day.
The vigorous, weak became, the clear, obscure.
Memory gave up her charge, Decision reeled,
And from her flight, Fancy return'd, return'd
Because she found no nourishment abroad.
The blue heavens wither'd, and the moon, and sun,
And all the stars, and the green earth, and morn
And evening, wither'd ; and the eyes, and smiles,
And faces, of all men and women, wither'd ;
Wither'd to him ; and all the universe,
Like something which had been, appear'd ; but now
Was dead and mouldering fast away. He tried
No more to hope, wish'd to forget his vow,
Wish'd to forget his harp ; then ceased to wish.
That was his last. Enjoyment now was done.
He had no hope, no wish, and scarce a fear.
Of being sensible, and sensible
Of loss, he as some atom seem'd, which God
Had made superfluously, and need'd not
To build creation with ; but back again
To nothing threw, and left it in the void,
With everlasting sense that once it was.

Oh ! who can tell what days, what nights, he spent,
Of tideless, waveless, sailless, shoreless wo !
And who can tell how many, glorious once,
To others and themselves of promise full,
Conducted to this pass of human thought,

This wilderness of intellectual death,
Wasted and pined, and vanished from the earth,
Leaving no vestige of memorial there !

It was not so with him. When thus he lay,
Forlorn of heart, withered and desolate,
As leaf of Autumn, which the wolfish winds,
Selecting from its falling sisters, chase,
Far from its native grove, to lifeless wastes,
And leave it there alone, to be forgotten
Eternally, God passed in mercy by,—
His praise be ever new !—and on him breathed,
And bade him live, and put into his hands
A holy harp, into his lips a song,
That rolled its numbers down the tide of Time .
Ambitious now but little, to be praised
Of men alone ; ambitious most, to be Approved of God, the Judge of all ; and have
His name recorded in the book of life.

Such things were Disappointment and Remorse.
And oft united both, as friends severe,
To teach men wisdom ; but the fool, untaught,
Was foolish still. His ear he stopped, his eyes
He shut, and blindly, deafly obstinate,
Forced desperately his way from wo to wo.

One place, one only place, there was on earth,
Where no man e'er was fool, however mad.
"Men may live fools, but fools they cannot die."
Ah! 'twas a truth most true ; and sung in Time,
And to the sons of men, by one well known
On earth for lofty verse and lofty sense.
Much hast thou seen, fair youth, much heard ; but thou
Hast never seen a death-bed, never heard
A dying groan. Men saw it often. 'Twas sad,
To all most sorrowful and sad ; to guilt,
'Twas anguish, terror, darkness, without bow.

But, oh! it had a most convincing tongue,
A potent oratory, that secured
Most mute attention; and it spoke the truth
So boldly, plainly, perfectly distinct,
That none the meaning could mistake, or doubt;
And had withal a disenchanting power,
A most omnipotent and wondrous power,
Which in a moment broke, for ever broke,
And utterly dissolved, the charms, and spells,
And cunning sorceries of earth and hell.
And thus it spoke to him who ghastly lay,
And struggled for another breath: Earth's cup
Is poisoned; her renown, most infamous;
Her gold, seem as it may, is really dust;
Her titles, slanderous names; her praise, reproach,
Her strength, an idiot's boast; her wisdom, blind;
Her gain, eternal loss; her hope, a dream;
Her love, her friendship, enmity with God;
Her promises, a lie; her smile, a harlot's;
Her beauty, paint, and rotten within; her pleasures,
Deadly assassins masked; her laughter, grief;
Her breasts, the sting of Death; her total sum,
Her all, most utter vanity; and all
Her lovers mad, insane most grievously,
And most insane because they know it not.

Thus did the mighty reasoner, Death, declare,
And volumes more; and in one word confirmed
The Bible whole, Eternity is all.
But few spectators, few believed, of those Who staid behind. The wisest, best of men,
Believed not to the letter full; but turned,
And on the world looked forth, as if they thought
The well-trimmed hypocrite had something still
Of inward worth. The dying man alone,
Gave faithful audience, and the words of Death,
To the last jot, believed, believed and felt;
But oft, alas! believed and felt too late.

And had Earth, then, no joys, no native sweets,
No happiness, that one, who spoke the truth,
Might call her own? She had; true, native sweets,
Indigenous delights, which up the tree
Of holiness, embracing as they grew,
Ascended, and bore fruit of heavenly taste;
In pleasant memory held, and talked of oft,
By yonder Saints, who walk the golden streets
Of New Jerusalem, and compass round
The Throne, with nearest vision blessed. Of these,
Hereafter, thou shalt hear, delighted hear;—
One page of beauty in the life of man.

COURSE OF TIME.

BOOK IV.

THE world had much of strange and wonderful,
In passion much, in action, reason, will,
And much in Providence, which still retired
From human eye, and led Philosophy,
That ill her ignorance liked to own, through dark
And dangerous paths of speculation wild.
Some striking features, as we pass, we mark,
In order such as memory suggests.

One passion prominent appears, the lust
Of power, which oft-times took the fairer name
Of liberty, and hung the popular flag
Of freedom out. Many, indeed, its names.
When on the throne it sat, and round the neck
Of millions riveted its iron chain,
And on the shoulders of the people laid
Burdens unmerciful, its title took
Of tyranny, oppression, despotism ;
And every tongue was weary cursing it.
When in the multitude it gathered strength,
And, like an ocean bursting from its bounds,
Long beat in vain, went forth resistlessly,
It bore the stamp and designation, then,
Of popular fury, anarchy, rebellion ;

And honest men bewailed all order void ;
All laws annulled ; all property destroyed ;
The venerable, murdered in the streets ;
The wise, despised ; streams, red with human blood ,
Harvests, beneath the frantic foot trod down ;
Lands, desolate ; and famine at the door .

These are a part ; but other names it had ;
Innumerable as the shapes and robes it wore.
But under every name, in nature still Invariably the same, and always bad.
We own, indeed, that oft against itself
It fought, and sceptre both and people gave
An equal aid ; as long exemplified
In Albion's isle, Albion, queen of the seas ;
And in the struggle, something like a kind
Of civil liberty grew up, the best
Of mere terrestrial root ; but, sickly, too,
And living only, strange to tell ! in strife
Of factions equally contending ; dead,
That very moment dead, that one prevailed.

Conflicting cruelly against itself,
By its own hand it fell ; part slaying part.
And men who noticed not the suicide,
Stood wondering much, why earth from age to age,
Was still enslaved ; and erring causes gave.

This was earth's liberty, its nature this,
However named, in whomsoever found,—
And found it was in all of woman born,—
Each man to make all subject to his will ;
To make them do, undo, eat, drink, stand, move,
Talk, think, and feel, exactly as he chose.
Hence the eternal strife of brotherhoods,
Of individuals, families, commonwealths.
The root from which it grew was pride ; bad root,
And bad the fruit it bore. Then wonder not,

That long the nations from it richly reaped
 Oppression, slavery, tyranny, and war ;
 Confusion, desolation, trouble, shame.
 And, marvellous though it seem, this monster, when
 It took the name of slavery, as oft
 It did, had advocates to plead its cause ;
 Beings that walked erect, and spoke like men ;
 Of Christian parentage descended, too,
 And dipped in the baptismal font, as sign
 Of dedication to the Prince who bowed
 To death, to set the sin-bound prisoner free.

Unchristian thought ! on what pretence so'er
 Of right, inherited, or else acquired ;
 Of loss, or profit, or what plea you name,
 To buy and sell, to barter, whip, and hold
 In chains, a being of celestial make ;
 Of kindred form, of kindred faculties,
 Of kindred feelings, passions, thoughts, desires ;
 Born free, and heir of an immortal hope ;
 Thought villanous, absurd, detestable !
 Unworthy to be harboured in a fiend !
 And only overreached in wickedness
 By that, birth, too, of earthly liberty,
 Which aimed to make a reasonable man
 By legislation think, and by the sword
 Believe. This was that liberty renowned,
 Those equal rights of Greece and Rome, where men,
 All, but a few, were bought, and sold, and scourged,
 And killed, as interest or caprice enjoined ;
 In after times talked of, written of, so much,
 That most, by sound and custom led away,
 Believed the essence answered to the name.
 Historians on this theme were long and warm.
 Statesmen, drunk with the fumes of vain debate,
 In lofty swelling phrase, called it perfection.
 Philosophers its rise, advance, and fall,
 Traced carefully : and poets kindled still,

As memory brought it up ; their lips were touched
 With fire, and uttered words that men adored.
 Even he, true bard of Zion, holy man !
 To whom the Bible taught this precious verse,,"
 "He is the freeman whom the truth makes free,"
 By fashion, though by fashion little swayed,
 Scarce kept his harp from pagan freedom's praise.

The captive prophet, whom Jehovah gave
 The future years, described it best, when he Beheld it rise in vision of the night :
 A dreadful beast, and terrible, and strong
 Exceedingly, with mighty iron teeth ;
 And, lo, it brake in pieces, and devoured,
 And stamped the residue beneath its feet !

True liberty was Christian, sanctified,
 Baptized, and found in Christian hearts alone ;
 First-born of Virtue, daughter of the skies,
 Nursling of truth divine, sister of all
 The graces, meekness, holiness, and love ;
 Giving to God, and man, and all below,
 That symptom showed of sensible existence,
 Their due, unasked ; fear to whom fear was due ;
 To all, respect, benevolence, and love :
 Companion of religion, where she came,
 There freedom came ; where dwelt, there freedom dwelt,
 Ruled where she ruled, expired where she expired.

"He was the freeman whom the truth made free,"
 Who, first of all, the bands of Satan broke ;
 Who broke the bands of sin ; and for his soul,
 In spite of fools, consulted seriously ;
 In spite of fashion, persevered in good ;
 In spite of wealth or poverty, upright ;
 Who did as reason, not as fancy, bade ;
 Who heard temptation sing, and yet turned not
 Aside ; saw Sin bedeck her flowery bed,

And yet would not go up ; felt at his heart
 The sword unsheathed, yet would not sel the truth ;
 Who, having power, had not the will to hurt ;
 Who blushed alike to be, or have a slave ;
 Who blushed at naught but sin, feared naught but God :
 Who, finally, in strong integrity
 Of soul, 'midst want, or riches, or disgrace,
 Uplifted, calmly sat, and heard the waves
 Of stormy folly breaking at his feet,
 Now shrill with praise, now hoarse with foul reproach,
 And both despised sincerely ; seeking this Alone, The approbation of his God,
 Which still with conscience witnessed to his peace.

This, this is freedom, such as angels use,
 And kindred to the liberty of God.
 First-born of Virtue, daughter of the skies !
 The man, the state, in whom she ruled, was free ;
 All else were slaves of Satan, Sin, and Death.

Already thou hast something heard of good
 And ill, of vice and virtue, perfect each ;
 Of those redeemed, or else abandoned quite ;
 And more shalt hear, when, at the judgment-day,
 The characters of mankind we review.
 Seems aught which thou hast heard astonishing ?
 A greater wonder now thy audience asks ;
 Phenomena in all the universe,
 Of moral being most anomalous,
 Inexplicable most, and wonderful.
 I'll introduce thee to a single heart,
 A human heart. We enter not the worst,
 But one by God's renewing Spirit touched,
 A Christian heart, awaked from sleep of sin.
 What seest thou here ? what markst ? Observe it well
 Will, passion, reason, hopes, fears, joy, distress,
 Peace, turbulence, simplicity, deceit,
 Good, ill, corruption, immortality,

A temple of the Holy Ghost, and yet
Oft lodging fiends ; the dwelling-place of all
The heavenly virtues, charity and truth,
Humility, and holiness, and love ;
And yet the common haunt of anger, pride,
Hatred, revenge, and passions foul with lust ;
Allied to heaven, yet parleying oft with hell ;
A soldier listed in Messiah's band,
Yet giving quarter to Abaddon's troops ;
With seraphs drinking from the well of life,
And yet carousing in the cup of death ;
An heir of heaven, and walking thitherward,
Yet casting back a covetous eye on earth ;
Emblem of strength, and weakness ; loving now
And now abhorring sin ; indulging now,
And now repenting sore ; rejoicing now,
With joy unspeakable, and full of glory ;
Now weeping bitterly, and clothed in dust ;
A man willing to do, and doing not ;
Doing, and willing not ; embracing what
He hates, what most he loves abandoning ;
Half saint, and sinner half ; half life, half death ;
Commixture strange of heaven, and earth, and hell .

What seest thou here ? what markst ? A battle-field,
Two banners spread, two dreadful fronts of war
In shock of opposition fierce, engaged.
God, angels, saw whole empires rise in arms,
Saw kings exalted, heard them tumble down,
And others raised,—and heeded not ; but here
God, angels, looked ; God, angels, fought ; and Hell,
With all his regions, fought : here, error fought
With truth, with darkness light, and life with death ;
And here, not kingdoms, reputations, worlds,
Were won ; the strife was for eternity,
The victory was never-ending bliss,
The badge, a chaplet from the tree of life.

While thus, within, contending armies strove,
Without, the Christian had his troubles too.
For, as by God's unalterable laws,
And ceremonial of the Heaven of Heavens,
Virtue takes place of all, and worthiest deeds
Sit highest at the feast of bliss ; on earth,
The opposite was fashion's rule polite.
Virtue the lowest place at table took,
Or served, or was shut out ; the Christian still
Was mocked, derided, persecuted, slain ;
And Slander, worse than mockery, or sword,
Or death, stood nightly by her horrid forge,
And fabricated lies to stain his name,
And wound his peace ; but still he had a source
Of happiness, that men could neither give Nor take away. The avenues that led
To immortality before him lay.
He saw, with faith's far reaching eye, the fount
Of life, his Father's house, his Saviour God,
And borrowed thence to help his present want.

Encountered thus with enemies, without,
Within, like bark that meets opposing winds
And floods, this way, now that, she steers athwart,
Tossed by the wave, and driven by the storm ;
But still the pilot, ancient at the helm,
The harbour keeps in eye ; and after much
Of danger passed, and many a prayer rude,
He runs her safely in : so was the man
Of God beset, so tossed by adverse winds ;
And so his eye upon the land of life
He kept. Virtue grew daily stronger, sin
Decayed ; his enemies, repulsed, retired ;
Till, at the stature of a perfect man
In Christ arrived, and with the Spirit filled,
He gained the harbour of eternal rest.

But think not virtue, else than dwells in God
Essentially, was perfect, without spot.
Examine yonder suns. At distance seen,
How bright they burn ! how gloriously they shine,
Mantling the worlds around in beamy light !
But nearer viewed, we through their lustre see
Some dark behind ; so virtue was on earth,
So is in heaven, and so shall always be.
Though good it seem, immaculate, and fair
Exceedingly, to saint or angel's gaze,
The uncreated Eye, that searches all,
Sees it imperfect ; sees, but blames not ; sees,
Well pleased, and best with those who deepest dive
Into themselves, and know themselves the most ;
Taught thence in humbler reverence to bow
Before the Holy One ; and oftener view
His excellence, that in them still may rise,
And grow his likeness, growing evermore.

Nor think that any, born of Adam's race,
In his own proper virtue, entered heaven.
Once fallen from God and perfect holiness,
No being, unassisted, e'er could rise,
Or sanctify the sin-polluted soul.
Oft was the trial made, but vainly made.
So oft as men, in earth's best livery clad,
However fair, approached the gates of heaven,
And stood presented to the eye of God,
Their impious pride so oft his soul abhorred.
Vain hope ! in patch-work of terrestrial grain,
To be received into the courts above !
As vain as towards yonder suns to soar,
On wing of waxen plumage, melting soon.

Look round, and see those numbers infinite,
That stand before the Throne, and in their hands
Palms waving high, as token of victory

For battles won. These are the sons of men
 Redeemed, the ransomed of the Lamb of God.
 All these, and millions more of kindred blood,
 Who now are out on messages of love,
 All these, their virtue, beauty, excellence,
 And joy, are purchase of redeeming blood ;
 Their glory, bounty of redeeming love.

O Love divine! Harp, lift thy voice on high !
 Shout, angels! shout aloud, ye sons of men !
 And burn, my heart, with the eternal flame !
 My lyre, be eloquent with endless praise !
 O Love divine ! immeasurable Love !
 Stooping from heaven to earth, from earth to hell,
 Without beginning, endless, boundless Love!
 Above all asking, giving far, to those
 Who naught deserved, who naught deserved but death !
 Saving the vilest ! saving me ! O Love
 Divine ! O Saviour God ! O Lamb, once slain !
 At thought of thee, thy love, thy flowing blood,
 All thoughts decay ; all things remembered fade ;
 All hopes return ; all actions done by men
 Or angels, disappear, absorbed and lost ;
 All fly, as from the great white Throne which he,
 The prophet, saw, in vision wrapped, the heavens
 And earth, and sun, and moon, and starry host,
 Confounded, fled, and found a place no more.

One glance of wonder, as we pass, deserve
 The books of Time. Productive was the world
 In many things, but most in books. Like swarms
 Of locusts, which God sent to vex a land
 Rebellious long, admonished long in vain,
 Their numbers they poured annually on man,
 From heads conceiving still. Perpetual birth !
 Thou wonderst how the world contained them all :
 Thy wonder stay. Like men, this was their doom.
 That dust they were, and should to dust return.'

And oft their fathers, childless and bereaved, Wept o'er their graves, when they themselves were green.

And on them fell, as fell on every age,
As on their authors fell, oblivious Night,
Which o'er the past lay, darkling, heavy, still,
Impenetrable, motionless, and sad,
Having his dismal, leaden plumage stirred
By no remembrancer, to show the men
Who after came what was concealed beneath.

The story-telling tribe, alone, outran
All calculation far, and left behind,
Lagging, the swiftest numbers. Dreadful, even
To fancy, was their never-ceasing birth;
And room had lacked, had not their life been short.
Excepting some, their definition take
Thou thus, expressed in gentle phrase, which leaves
Some truth behind: A Novel was a book
Three-volumed, and once read, and oft crammed full
Of poisonous error, blackening every page,
And oftener still, of trifling, second-hand
Remark, and old, diseased, putrid thought,
And, miserable incident, at war
With nature, with itself and truth at war;
Yet charming still the greedy reader on,
Till done, he tried to recollect his thoughts,
And nothing found, but dreaming emptiness.
These, like ephemera, sprung, in a day,
From lean and shallow-soiled brains of sand,
And in a day expired; yet, while they lived,
Tremendous oft-times was the popular roar;
And cries of—Live for ever! struck the skies.

One kind alone remained, seen through the gloom
And sullen shadow of the past: as lights
At intervals they shone, and brought the eye,
That backward travelled, upward, till arrived

At him, who, on the hills of Midian, sang
The patient man of Uz; and from the lyre
Of angels, learned the early dawn of Time.
Not light and momentary labour these,
But discipline and self-denial long,
And purpose stanch, and perseverance, asked,
And energy that inspiration seemed.
Composed of many thoughts, possessing each
Innate and underived vitality;
Which, having fitly shaped, and well arranged
In brotherly accord, they builded up;
A stately superstructure, that, nor wind,
Nor wave, nor shock of falling years, could move;
Majestic and indissolubly firm;
As ranks of veteran warriors in the field,
Each by himself alone and singly seen,
A tower of strength; in massy phalanx knit,
And in embattled squadron rushing on,
A sea of valour, dread, invincible.

Books of this sort, or sacred, or profane,
Which virtue helped, were titled, not amiss,
"The medicine of the mind:" who read them, read
Wisdom, and was refreshed; and on his path
Of pilgrimage, with healthier step advanced.

In mind, in matter, much was difficult
To understand. But, what in deepest night
Retired, inscrutable, mysterious, dark,—
Was evil, God's decrees, and deeds decreed,
Responsible: why God, the just and good,
Omnipotent and wise, should suffer sin
To rise: why man was free, accountable;
Yet God foreseeing, overruling all.
Where'er the eye could turn, whatever tract
Of moral thought it took, by reason's torch,
Or Scripture's led, before it still this mount
Sprung up, impervious, insurmountable,

Above the human stature rising far ;
Horizon of the mind, surrounding still
The vision of the soul with clouds and gloom.
Yet did they oft attempt to scale its sides,
And gain its top. Philosophy, to climb,
With all her vigour, toiled from age to age ;
From age to age, Theology, with all
Her vigour, toiled ; and vagrant Fancy toiled.
Not weak and foolish only, but the wise,
Patient, courageous, stout, sound-headed man,
Of proper discipline, of excellent wind,
And strong of intellectual limb, toiled hard ;
And oft above the reach of common eye
Ascended far, and seemed well nigh the top ,
But only seemed ; for still another top
Above them rose, till, giddy grown and mad,
With gazing at these dangerous heights of God,
They tumbled down, and in their raving said,
They o'er the summit saw. And some believed ,
Believed a lie ; for never man on earth,
That mountain crossed, or saw its farther side.
Around it lay the wreck of many a Sage,
Divine, Philosopher ; and many more
Fell daily, undeterred by millions fallen ;
Each wondering why he failed to comprehend
God, and with finite measure infinite.
To pass it, was no doubt desirable ;
And few of any intellectual size,
That did not, some time in their day, attempt ;
But all in vain ; for as the distant hill,
Which on the right or left, the traveller's eye
Bounds, seems advancing as he walks, and oft
He looks, and looks, and thinks to pass ; but still
It forward moves, and mocks his baffled sight,
Till night descends, and wraps the scene in gloom,
So did this moral height the vision mock ;
So lifted up its dark and cloudy head,
Before the eye, and met it evermore,

And some, provoked, accused the righteous God.
 Accused of what? hear human boldness now!
 Hear guilt, hear folly, madness, all extreme!
 Accused of what? the God of truth accused
 Of cruelty, injustice, wickedness.
 Abundant sin! because a mortal man,
 A worm, at best, of small capacity,
 With scarce an atom of Jehovah's works
 Before him, and with scarce an hour to look Upon them, should presume to censure God,
 The infinite and uncreated God!
 To sit, in judgment, on Himself, his works,
 His providence! and try, accuse, condemn!
 If there is aught, thought or to think, absurd,
 Irrational and wicked, this is more,
 This most; the sin of devils, or of those
 To devils growing fast. Wise men and good
 Accused themselves, not God; and put their hands
 Upon their mouths, and in the dust adored.

The Christian's faith had many mysteries too;
 The uncreated holy Three in One,
 Divine incarnate, human in divine;
 The inward call; the Sanctifying Dew
 Coming unseen, unseen departing thence;
 Anew creating all, and yet not heard;
 Compelling, yet not felt. Mysterious these,
 Not that Jehovah to conceal them wished,
 Not that religion wished. The Christian faith,
 Unlike the timorous creeds of pagan priests,
 Was frank, stood forth to view, invited all,
 To prove, examine, search, investigate,
 And gave herself a light to see her by.
 Mysterious these, because too large for eye
 Of man, too long for human arm to mete.

Go to yon mount, which on the north side stands
 Of New Jerusalem, and lifts its head

Serene in glory bright, except the hill,
The Sacred Hill of God, whereon no foot
Must tread, highest of all creation's walks,
And overlooking all, in prospect vast,
From out the ethereal blue. That cliff ascend,
Gaze thence, around thee look ; naught now impedes
Thy view ; yet still thy vision, purified
And strong although it be, a boundary meets ;
Or rather, thou wilt say, thy vision fails
To gaze throughout illimitable space,
And find the end of infinite : and so
It was with all the mysteries of faith.
God set them forth unveiled to the full gaze
Of man, and asked him to investigate ;
But Reason's eye, however purified,
And on whatever tall and goodly height
Of observation placed, to comprehend
Them fully, sought in vain : in vain seeks still ;
But wiser now and humbler, she concludes,
From what she knows already of his love
All gracious, that she cannot understand ;
And gives him credit, reverence, praise for all.

Another feature in the ways of God,
That wondrous seemed, and made some men complain,
Was the unequal gift of worldly things.
Great was the difference, indeed, of men
Externally, from beggar to the prince.
The highest take and lowest, and conceive
The scale between. A noble of the earth,
One of its great, in splendid mansion dwelt ;
Was robed in silk and gold ; and every day
Fared sumptuously ; was titled, honoured, served.
Thousands his nod awaited, and his will
For law received. Whole provinces his march Attended, and his chariot drew, or on
Their shoulders bore aloft the precious man.
Millions, abased, fell prostrate at his feet :

And millions more thundered adoring praise.
As far as eye could reach, he called the land
His own, and added yearly to his fields.
Like tree that of the soil took healthy root,
He grew on every side, and towered on high,
And over half a nation, shadowing wide,
He spread his ample boughs. Air, earth, and sea,
Nature entire, the brute, and rational,
To please him ministered, and vied among Themselves, who most should his desires prevent,
Watching the moving of his rising thoughts,
Attentively, and hasting to fulfil.
His palace rose and kissed the gorgeous clouds.
Streams bent their music to his will, trees sprung.
The native waste put on luxuriant robes ;
And plains of happy cottages cast out
Their tenants, and became a hunting-field.
Before him bowed the distant isles, with fruits
And spices rare ; the South her treasures brought,
The East and West sent ; and the frigid North
Came with her offering of glossy furs.
Musicians soothed his ear with airs select :
Beauty held out her arms ; and every man
Of cunning skill, and curious device,
And endless multitudes of liveried wights,
His pleasure waited with obsequious look.
And when the wants of nature were supplied,
And common-place extravagances filled,
Beyond their asking ; and caprice itself,
In all its zig-zag appetites, gorged full,
The man new wants and new expenses planned
Nor planned alone. Wise, learned, sober men,
Of cogitation deep, took up his case,
And planned for him new modes of folly wild ;
Contrived new wishes, wants, and wondrous means
Of spending with despatch ; yet, after all,
His fields extended still, his riches grew,
And what seemed splendour infinite, increased.

So lavishly upon a single man
Did Providence his bounties daily shower.

Turn now thy eye, and look on Poverty ;
Look on the lowest of her ragged sons.
We find him by the way, sitting in dust ;
He has no bread to eat, no tongue to ask,
No limbs to walk, no home, no house, no friend.
Observe his goblin cheek, his wretched eye ;
See how his hand, if any hand he has,
Involuntary opens, and trembles forth,
As comes the traveller's foot ; and hear his groan,
His long and lamentable groan, announce
The want that gnaws within. Severely now
The sun scorches and burns his old bald head
The frost now glues him to the chilly earth.
On him hail, rain, and tempest, rudely beat ;
And all the winds of heaven, in jocular mood,
Sport with his withered rags, that, tossed about,
Display his nakedness to passers by,
And grievously burlesque the human form.
Observe him yet more narrowly. His limbs,
With palsy shaken, about him, blasted lie ;
And all his flesh is full of putrid sores
And noisome wounds, his bones, of racking pains.
Strange vesture this for an immortal soul !
Strange retinue to wait a lord of earth !
It seems as Nature, in some surly mood,
After debate and musing long, had tried
How vile and miserable thing her hand
Could fabricate, then made this meagre man .
A sight so full of perfect misery,
That passengers their faces turned away,
And hasted to be gone ; and delicate
And tender women took another path.

This great disparity of outward things
Taught many lessons ; but this taught in chief,

Though learned by few : That God no value set,
That man should none, on goods of worldly kind!
On transitory, frail, external things,
Of migratory, ever-changing sort :
And further taught, that in the soul alone,
The thinking, reasonable, willing soul,
God placed the total excellence of man ;
And meant him evermore to seek it there.

But stranger still the distribution seemed
Of intellect, though fewer here complained ,
Each with his share, upon the whole, content.
One man there was, and many such you might Have met, who never had a dozen thoughts
In all his life, and never changed their course ;
But told them o'er, each in its customed place,
From morn till night, from youth to hoary age.
Little above the ox that grazed the field,
His reason rose ; so weak his memory,
The name his mother called him by, he scarce
Remembered ; and his judgment so untaught,
That what at evening played along the swamp,
Fantastic, clad in robe of fiery hue,
He thought the devil in disguise, and fled
With quivering heart and winged footsteps home.
The word philosophy he never heard,
Or science ; never heard of liberty,
Necessity, or laws of gravitation ;
And never had an unbelieving doubt.
Beyond his native vale he never looked ;
But thought the visual line, that girt him round,
The world's extreme ; and thought the silver Moon,
That nightly o'er him led her virgin host,
No broader than his father's shield. He lived,— Lived where his father lived, died where he died,
Lived happy, and died happy, and was saved.
Be not surprised. He loved and served his God.

There was another, large of understanding,
 Of memory infinite, of judgment deep,
 Who knew all learning, and all science knew ;
 And all phenomena, in heaven and earth,
 Traced to their causes ; traced the labyrinths
 Of thought, association, passion, will ;
 And all the subtle, nice affinities
 Of matter traced, its virtues, motions, laws ;
 And most familiarly and deeply talked
 Of mental, moral, natural, divine.
 Leaving the earth at will, he soared to heaven,
 And read the glorious visions of the skies ;
 And to the music of the rolling spheres
 Intelligently listened ; and gazed far back
 Into the awful depths of Deity ;
 Did all that mind assisted most could do ;
 And yet in misery lived, in misery died,
 Because he wanted holiness of heart.

A deeper lesson this to mortals taught,
 And nearer cut the branches of their pride
 That not in mental, but in moral worth,
 God excellence placed ; and only to the good,
 To virtue, granted happiness, alone.

Admire the goodness of Almighty God !
 He riches gave, he intellectual strength,
 To few, and therefore none commands to be
 Or rich, or learned ; nor promises reward
 Of peace to these. On all, He moral worth
 Bestowed, and moral tribute asked from all.
 And who that could not pay ? who born so poor,
 Of intellect so mean, as not to know
 What seemed the best ; and, knowing, might not do ?
 As not to know what God and conscience bade,
 And what they bade not able to obey ?
 And he, who acted thus, fulfilled the law

Eternal, and its promise reaped of peace ;
 Found peace this way alone : who sought it else,
 Sought mellow grapes beneath the icy Pole,
 Sought blooming roses on the cheek of death,
 Sought substance in a world of fleeting shades

Take one example, to our purpose quite.
 A man of rank, and of capacious soul,
 Who riches had and fame, beyond desire,
 An heir of flattery, to titles born,
 And reputation, and luxurious life :
 Yet, not content with ancestral name,
 Or to be known because his fathers were,
 He on this height hereditary stood,
 And, gazing higher, purposed in his heart
 To take another step. Above him seemed,
 Alone, the mount of song, the lofty seat
 Of canonized bards ; and thitherward,
 By nature taught, and inward melody,
 In prime of youth, he bent his eagle eye.
 No cost was spared. What books he wished, he read ;
 What sage to hear, he heard ; - what scenes to see,
 He saw. And first in rambling school-boy days
 Britannia's mountain-walks, and heath-girt lakes,
 And story-telling glens, and founts, and brooks,
 And maids, as dew-drops pure and fair, his soul
 With grandeur filled, and melody, and love.
 Then travel came, and took him where he wished.
 He cities saw, and courts, and princely pomp ;
 And mused alone on ancient mountain-brows ;
 And mused on battle-fields, where valour fought
 In other days ; and mused on ruins grey
 With years ; and drank from old and fabulous wells,
 And plucked the vine that first-born prophets plucked
 And mused on famous tombs, and on the wave
 Of Ocean mused, and on the desert waste ;
 The heavens and earth of every country saw.
 Where'er the old inspiring Genii dwelt,

Aught that could rouse, expand, refine the soul,
Thither he went, and meditated there.

He touched his harp, and nations heard, entranced,
As some vast river of unfailing source,
Rapid, exhaustless, deep, his numbers flowed,
And opened new fountains in the human heart.
Where Fancy halted, weary in her flight,
In other men, his, fresh as morning, rose,
And soared untrodden heights, and seemed at home,
Where angels bashful looked. Others, though great,
Beneath their argument seemed struggling while ;
He from above descending stooped to touch
The loftiest thought ; and proudly stooped, as though
It scarce deserved his verse. With Nature's self
He seemed an old acquaintance, free to jest
At will with all her glorious majesty.
He laid his hand upon "the Ocean's mane,"
And played familiar with his hoary locks ;
Stood on the Alps, stood on the Apennines,
And with the thunder talked, as friend to friend ;
And wove his garland of the lightning's wing,
In sportive twist, the lightning's fiery wing,
Which, as the footsteps of the dreadful God,
Marching upon the storm in vengeance, seemed ;
Then turned, and with the grasshopper, who sung
His evening song beneath his feet, conversed.
Suns, moons, and stars, and clouds, his sisters were ;
Rocks, mountains, meteors, seas, and winds, and storms,
His brothers, younger brothers, whom he scarce
As equals deemed. All passions of all men,
The wild and tame, the gentle and severe ;
All thoughts, all maxims, sacred and profane ;
All creeds, all seasons, Time, Eternity ;
All that was hated, and all that was dear ;
All that was hoped, all that was feared, by man ;
He tossed about, as tempest, withered leaves,
Then, smiling, looked upon the wreck he made.

With terror now he froze the cowering blood,
 And now dissolved the heart in tenderness ;
 Yet would not tremble, would not weep himself ;
 But back into his soul retired, alone,
 Dark, sullen, proud, gazing contemptuously
 On hearts and passions prostrate at his feet.
 So Ocean from the plains his waves had late
 To desolation swept, retired in pride,
 Exulting in the glory of his might,
 And seemed to mock the ruin he had wrought.

As some fierce comet of tremendous size,
 To which the stars did reverence, as it passed,
 So he through learning and through fancy took
 His flight sublime, and on the loftiest top
 Of Fame's dread mountain sat ; not soiled and worn,
 As if he from the earth had laboured up ;
 But as some bird of heavenly plumage fair,
 He looked, which down from higher regions came,
 And perched it there, to see what lay beneath.

The nations gazed, and wondered much, and praised.
 Critics before him fell in humble plight,
 Confounded fell, and made debasing signs
 To catch his eye, and stretched, and swelled themselves
 To bursting nigh, to utter bulky words
 Of admiration vast : and many, too,
 Many that aimed to imitate his flight,
 With weaker wing, unearthly fluttering made,
 And gave abundant sport to after days.

Great man ! the nations gazed, and wondered much,
 And praised ; and many called his evil good.
 Wits wrote in favour of his wickedness,
 And kings to do him honour took delight.
 Thus, full of titles, flattery, honour, fame,
 Beyond desire, beyond ambition, full,
 He died. He died of what ? Of wretchedness ;—

Drank every cup of joy, heard every trumpet
Of fame, drank early, deeply drank, drank draughts
That common millions might have quenched ; then died
Of thirst, because there was no more to drink
His goddess, Nature, wooed, embraced, enjoyed,
Fell from his arms, abhorred ; his passions died,
Died, all but dreary, solitary Pride ;
And all his sympathies in being died.
As some ill-guided bark, well built and tall,
Which angry tides cast out on desert shore,
And then, retiring, left it there to rot
And moulder in the winds and rains of heaven ;
So he, cut from the sympathies of life,
And cast ashore from pleasure's boisterous surge,
A wandering, weary, worn, and wretched thing,
Scorched, and desolate, and blasted soul,
A gloomy wilderness of dying thought,—
Repined, and groaned, and withered from the earth.
His groanings filled the land, his numbers filled ;
And yet he seemed ashamed to groan :—Poor man!—
Ashamed to ask, and yet he needed help.

Proof this, beyond all lingering of doubt,
That not with natural or mental wealth,
Was God delighted, or his peace secured ;
That not in natural or mental wealth,
Was human happiness or grandeur found.
Attempt how monstrous, and how surely vain !
With things of earthly sort, with aught but God,
With aught but moral excellence, truth, and love,
To satisfy and fill the immortal soul !
Attempt, vain inconceivably ! attempt,
To satisfy the Ocean with a drop,
To marry Immortality to Death,
And with the unsubstantial Shade of Time,
To fill the embrace of all Eternity !

COURSE OF TIME.

BOOK V.

PRAISE God, ye servants of the Lord ! praise God,
Ye angels strong ! praise God, ye sons of men !
Praise him who made, and who redeemed your souls,
Who gave you hope, reflection, reason, will ;
Minds that can pierce eternity remote,
And live at once on future, present, past :
Can speculate on systems yet to make,
And back recoil on ancient days of Time,
Of Time, soon past, soon lost among the shades
Of buried years. Not so the actions done
In Time, the deeds of reasonable men.
As if engraven with pen of iron grain,
And laid in flinty rock, they stand, unchanged,
Written on the various pages of the past :
If good, in rosy characters of love ;
If bad, in letters of vindictive fire.

God may forgive, but cannot blot them out.
Systems begin and end, Eternity
Rolls on his endless years, and men, absolved
By mercy from the consequence, forget
The evil deed, and God imputes it not ;
But neither systems ending nor begun,

Eternity that rolls his endless years,
Nor men absolved, and sanctified. and washed .
By mercy from the consequence, nor yet
Forgetfulness, nor God imputing not,
Can wash the guilty deed, once done, from out
The faithful annals of the past ; who reads,
And many read, there finds it, as it was,
And is, and shall for ever be,—a dark,
Unnatural, and loathly moral spot.

The span of Time was short, indeed ; and now
Three-fourths were past, the last begun, and on Careering to its close, which soon we sing.
But first our promise we redeem, to tell
The joys of Time, her joys of native growth ;
And briefly must, what longer tale deserves.

Wake, dear remembrances ! wake, childhood-days !
Loves, friendships, wake ! and wake, thou morn and even !
Sun ! with thy orient locks, night, moon, and stars !
And thou, celestial bow ! and all ye woods,
And hills, and vales, first trod in dawning life,
And hours of holy musing, wake ! wake, earth !
And, smiling to remembrance, come, and bring,
For thou canst bring, meet argument for song
Of heavenly harp, meet hearing for the ear
Of heavenly auditor, exalted high.

God gave much peace on earth, much holy joy ;
Oped fountains of perennial spring, whence flowed
Abundant happiness to all who wished
To drink ; not perfect bliss ;—that dwells with us.
Beneath the eyelids of the Eternal One,
And sits at his right hand alone ;—but such
As well deserved the name, abundant joy ;
Pleasures, on which the memory of saints
Of highest glory, still delights to dwell.

It was, we own, subject of much debate,
 And worthy men stood on opposing sides,
 Whether the cup of mortal life had more
 Of sour or sweet. Vain question this, when asked
 In general terms, and worthy to be left
 Unsolved. If most was sour, the drinker, not
 The cup, we blame. Each in himself the means
 Possessed to turn the bitter sweet, the sweet
 To bitter. Hence, from out the self-same fount,
 One nectar drank, another draughts of gall.
 Hence, from the self-same quarter of the sky,
 One saw ten thousand angels look and smile ;
 Another saw as many demons frown.
 One discord heard, where harmony inclined Another's ear. The sweet was in the taste,
 The beauty in the eye, and in the ear
 The melody ; and in the man,—for God
 Necessity of sinning laid on none,—
 To form the taste, to purify the eye,
 And tune the ear, that all he tasted, saw,
 Or heard, might be harmonious, sweet, and fair.
 Who would, might groan ; who would, might sing for joy.

Nature lamented little. Undevoured
 By spurious appetites, she found enough,
 Where least was found ; with gleanings satisfied,
 Or crumbs, that from the hand of luxury fell ;
 Yet seldom these she ate, but ate the bread
 Of her own industry, made sweet by toil ;
 And walked in robes that her own hand had spun ;
 And slept on down her early rising bought.
 Frugal and diligent in business, chaste
 And abstinent, she stored for helpless age,
 And, keeping in reserve her spring-day health,
 And dawning reliques of life, she drank
 Her evening cup with excellent appetite ;
 And saw her earliest sun decline, as fair
 As rose her earliest morn, and pleased as well.

Whether in crowds or solitudes, in streets
Or shady groves, dwelt Happiness, it seems
In vain to ask, her nature makes it vain,
Though poets much, and hermits talked, and sung
Of brooks, and crystal founts, and weeping dews,
And myrtle bowers, and solitary vales,
And with the nymph made assignations there,
And wooed her with the love-sick oaten reed ;
And sages too, although less positive,
Advised their sons to court her in the shade.
Delirious babble all ! Was happiness,
Was self-approving, God-approving joy,
In drops of dew, however pure ? in gales,
However sweet ? in wells, however clear ?
Or groves, however thick with verdant shade ?

True, these were of themselves exceeding fair :
How fair at morn and even ! worthy the walk
Of loftiest mind, and gave, when all within
Was right, a feast of overflowing bliss ;
But were the occasion, not the cause of joy.
They waked the native fountains of the soul,
Which slept before ; and stirred the holy tides
Of feeling up, giving the heart to drink
From its own treasures draughts of perfect sweet.

The Christian faith, which better knew the heart
Of man, him thither sent for peace, and thus
Declared : Who finds it, let him find it there ;
Who finds it not, for ever let him seek
In vain ; 'tis God's most holy, changeless will.

True Happiness had no localities,
No tones provincial, no peculiar garb.
Where Duty went, she went, with Justice went,
And went with Meekness, Charity, and Love.
Where'er a tear was dried, a wounded heart
Bound up, a bruised spirit with the dew

Of sympathy anointed, or a pang
 Of honest suffering soothed, or injury
 Repeated oft, as oft by love forgiven ;
 Where'er an evil passion was subdued,
 Or Virtue's feeble embers fanned ; where'er
 A sin was heartily abjured, and left ;
 Where'er a pious act was done, or breathed
 A pious prayer, or wished a pious wish ;
 There was a high and holy place, a spot
 Of sacred light, a most religious fane,
 Where Happiness, descending, sat and smiled.

But these apart, in sacred memory lives
 The morn of life, first morn of endless days,
 Most joyful morn ! nor yet for naught the joy.
 A being of eternal date commenced,
 A young immortal then was born ! and who Shall tell what strange variety of bliss
 Burst on the infant soul, when first it looked Abroad on God's creation fair, and saw
 The glorious earth and glorious heaven, and face
 Of man sublime, and saw all new, and felt
 All new ! when thought awoke, thought never more
 To sleep ! when first it saw, heard, reasoned, willed,
 And triumphed in the warmth of conscious life !

Nor happy only, but the cause of joy,
 Which those who never tasted always mourned.
 What tongue !—no tongue shall tell what bliss o'er flowed

The mother's tender heart, while round her hung
 The offspring of her love, and lisped her name,
 As living jewels dropped unstained from heaven,
 That made her fairer far, and sweeter seem,
 Than every ornament of costliest hue !
 And who hath not been ravished, as she passed
 With all her playful band of little ones,
 Like Luna, with her daughters of the sky,

Walking in matron majesty and grace?
 All who had hearts here pleasure found : and oft
 Have I, when tired with heavy task,—for tasks
 Were heavy in the world below,—relaxed
 My weary thoughts among their guiltless sports,
 And led them by their little hands a-field,
 And watched them run and crop the tempting flower,—
 Which oft, unasked, they brought me, and bestowed
 With smiling face, that waited for a look
 Of praise,—and answered curious questions, put
 In much simplicity, but ill to solve ;
 And heard their observations strange and new,
 And settled whiles their little quarrels, soon
 Ending in peace, and soon forgot in love.
 And still I looked upon their loveliness,
 And sought through nature for similitudes
 Of perfect beauty, innocence, and bliss,
 And fairest imagery around me thronged ;
 Dew-drops at day-spring on a seraph's locks,
 Roses that bathe about the well of life,
 Young Loves, young Hopes, dancing on Morning's cheek,
 Gems leaping in the coronet of Love !
 So beautiful, so full of life, they seemed
 As made entire of beams of angels' eyes.
 Gay, guileless, sportive, lovely, little things !
 Playing around the den of Sorrow, clad
 In smiles, believing in their fairy hopes,
 And thinking man and woman true ! all joy,
 Happy all day, and happy all the night !

Hail, holy Love ! thou word that sums all bliss,
 Gives and receives all bliss, fullest when most Thou givest ! spring-head of all felicity,
 Deepest when most is drawn ! emblem of God !
 O'erflowing most when greatest numbers drink !
 Essence that binds the uncreated Three,
 Chain that unites creation to its Lord,
 Centre to which all being gravitates,

Eternal, ever-growing, happy Love !
 Enduring all, hoping, forgiving all ;
 Instead of law, fulfilling every law ;
 Entirely blest, because thou seekst no more,
 Hopest not, nor fearest ; but on the present livest,
 And holdst perfection smiling in thy arms.
 Mysterious, infinite, exhaustless Love !
 On earth mysterious, and mysterious still
 In heaven ! sweet chord, that harmonizes all
 The harps of Paradise ! the spring, the well,
 That fills the bowl and banquet of the sky !

But why should I to thee of Love divine ?
 Who happy, and not eloquent of Love ?
 Who holy, and, as thou art, pure, and not
 A temple where her glory ever dwells,
 Where burn her fires, and beams her perfect eye ?

Kindred to this, part of this holy flame,
 Was youthful love—the sweetest boon of Earth.
 Hail, Love ! first Love, thou word that sums all bliss !
 The sparkling cream of all Time's blessedness,
 The silken down of happiness complete !
 Discerner of the ripest grapes of joy,
 She gathered, and selected with her hand,
 All finest relishes, all fairest sights,
 All rarest odours, all divinest sounds,
 All thoughts, all feelings dearest to the soul ;
 And brought the holy mixture home, and filled
 The heart with all superlatives of bliss.
 But, who would that expound, which words transcends,
 Must talk in vain. Behold a meeting scene
 Of early love, and thence infer its worth.

It was an eve of Autumn's holiest mood.
 The corn fields, bathed in Cynthia's silver light,
 Stood ready for the reaper's gathering hand ;
 And all the Winds slept soundly. Nature seemed,

In silent contemplation, to adore
Its Maker. Now and then, the aged leaf
Fell from its fellows, rustling to the ground ;
And, as it fell, bade man think on his end.
On vale and lake, on wood and mountain high,
With pensive wing outspread, sat heavenly Thought,
Conversing with itself. Vesper looked forth,
From out her western hermitage, and smiled ;
And up the east, unclouded, rode the Moon
With all her Stars, gazing on earth intense,
As if she saw some wonder walking there.

Such was the night, so lovely, still, serene,
When, by a hermit thorn that on the hill
Had seen a hundred flowery ages pass,
A damsel kneeled to offer up her prayer,
Her prayer nightly offered, nightly heard.
This ancient thorn had been the meeting place
Of love, before his country's voice had called
The ardent youth to fields of honour far
Beyond the wave : and hither now repaired,
Nightly, the maid, by God's all-seeing eye
Seen only, while she sought this boon alone
" Her lover's safety, and his quick return."
In holy, humble attitude she kneeled,
And to her bosom, fair as moonbeam, pressed
One hand, the other lifted up to heaven.
Her eye, upturned, bright as the star of morn,
As violet meek, excessive ardour streamed,
Wafting away her earnest heart to God.
Her voice, scarce uttered, soft as Zephyr sighs
On morning lily's cheek, though soft and low,
Yet heard in heaven, heard at the mercy-seat.
A tear-drop wandered on her lovely face ;
It was a tear of faith and holy fear,
Pure as the drops that hang at dawning-time,
On yonder willows by the stream of life.
On her the Moon looked steadfastly ; the Stars,

That circle nightly round the eternal Throne,
Glanced down, well pleased ; and Everlasting Love
Gave gracious audience to her prayer sincere.

Oh, had her lover seen her thus alone,
Thus holy, wrestling thus, and all for him !
Nor did he not : for oft-times Providence,
With unexpected joy the fervent prayer
Of faith surprised. Returned from long delay
With glory crowned of righteous actions won,
The sacred thorn, to memory dear, first sought
The youth, and found it at the happy hour,
Just when the damsel kneeled herself to pray.
Wrapped in devotion, pleading with her God,
She saw him not, heard not his foot approach
All holy images seemed too impure
To emblem her he saw. A seraph kneeled,
Beseeching for his ward, before the Throne,
Seemed fittest, pleased him best. Sweet was the thought !
But sweeter still the kind remembrance came,
That she was flesh and blood, formed for himself,
The plighted partner of his future life.
And as they met, embraced, and sat, embowered,
In woody chambers of the starry night,
Spirits of love about them ministered,
And God, approving, blessed the holy joy !

Nor unremembered is the hour when friends
Met. Friends, but few on earth, and therefore dear,
Sought oft, and sought almost as oft in vain ;
Yet always sought, so native to the heart,
So much desired, and coveted by all.
Nor wonder thou,—thou wonderest not nor needst.
Much beautiful, and excellent, and fair
Was seen beneath the sun ; but naught was seen
More beautiful, or excellent, or fair,
Than face of faithful friend, fairest when seen
In darkest day ; and many sounds were sweet,

Most ravishing, and pleasant to the ear ;
But sweeter none than voice of faithful friend,
Sweet always, sweetest, heard in loudest storm.
Some I remember, and will ne'er forget ;
My early friends, friends of my evil day ;
Friends in my mirth, friends in my misery too ;
Friends given by God in mercy and in love ;
My counsellors, my comforters, and guides ;
My joy in grief, my second bliss in joy,
Companions of my young desires ; in doubt,
My oracles, my wings in high pursuit.
Oh, I remember, and will ne'er forget,
Our meeting spots, our chosen, sacred hours,
Our burning words that uttered all the soul,
Our faces beaming with unearthly love ;
Sorrow with sorrow sighing, hope with hope
Exulting, heart embracing heart entire.
As birds of social feather helping each
His fellow's flight, we soared into the skies,
And cast the clouds beneath our feet, and Earth
With all her tardy, leaden-footed Cares,
And talked the speech and ate the food of heaven !
These I remember, these selectest men,
And would their names record ; but what avails
My mention of their name ? Before the Throne
They stand illustrious 'mong the loudest harps,
And will receive thee glad, my friend and theirs.
For all are friends in heaven, all faithful friends !
And many friendships, in the days of Time
Begun, are lasting here, and growing still ;
So grows ours evermore, both theirs and mine.

Nor is the hour of lonely walk forgot,
In the wide desert, where the view was large.
Pleasant were many scenes, but most to me
The solitude of vast extent, untouched
By hand of art, where Nature sowed, herself,
And reaped her crops ; whose garments were the clouds ,

Whose minstrels, brooks ; whose lamps, the moon and stars ;

Whose organ-choir, the voice of many waters ;
Whose banquets, morning dews ; whose heroes, storms ;
Whose warriors, mighty winds ; whose lovers, flowers ;
Whose orators, the thunderbolts of God ;
Whose palaces, the everlasting hills ;
Whose ceiling, heaven's unfathomable blue ;
And from whose rocky turrets, battled high,
Prospect immense spread out on all sides round,
Lost now between the welkin and the main,
Now walled with hills that slept above the storm.

Most fit was such a place for musing men,
Happiest sometimes when musing without aim.
It was, indeed, a wondrous sort of bliss
The lonely bard enjoyed, when forth he walked,
Unpurposed ; stood, and knew not why ; sat down,
And knew not where ; arose, and knew not when ;
Had eyes, and saw not ; ears, and nothing heard ;
And sought—sought neither heaven nor earth—sought naught,

Nor meant to think ; but ran, meantime, through vast
Of visionary things, fairer than aught
That was ; and saw the distant tops of thoughts,
Which men of common stature never saw,
Greater than aught that largest words could hold,
Or give idea of, to those who read.
He entered in to Nature's holy place,
Her inner chamber, and beheld her face
Unveiled ; and heard unutterable things,
And incommunicable visions saw ;
Things then unutterable, and visions then
Of incommunicable glory bright ;
But by the lips of after ages formed
To words, or by their pencil pictured forth ;
Who, entering farther in, beheld again,
And heard unspeakable and marvellous things,

Which other ages in their turn revealed,
And left to others, greater wonders still.

The earth abounded much in silent wastes
Nor yet is heaven without its solitudes,
Else incomplete in bliss, whither who will
May oft retire, and meditate alone,
Of God, redemption, holiness, and love ;
Nor needs to fear a setting sun, or haste
Him home from rainy tempest unforeseen,
Or, sighing, leave his thoughts for want of time.

But whatsoever was both good and fair,
And highest relish of enjoyment gave,
In intellectual exercise was found,
When gazing through the future, present, past,
Inspired, thought linked to thought, harmonious flowed
In poetry—the loftiest mood of mind ;
Or when philosophy the reason led
Deep through the outward circumstance of things ;
And saw the master-wheels of Nature move ;
And travelled far along the endless line
Of certain and of probable ; and made,
At every step, some new discovery,
That gave the soul sweet sense of larger room.
High these pursuits, and sooner to be nanted,
Deserved ; at present, only named, again
To be resumed, and praised in longer verse.

Abundant and diversified above
All number, were the sources of delight ;
As infinite as were the lips that drank ;
And to the pure, all innocent and pure ;
The simplest still to wisest men the best.
One made acquaintanceship with plants and flowers,
And happy grew in telling all their names ;
One classed the quadrupeds ; a third, the fowls ;
Another found in minerals his joy :

And I have seen a man, a worthy man,
In happy mood conversing with a fly ;
And as he, through his glass, made by himself,
Beheld its wondrous eye and plumage fine,
From leaping scarce he kept, for perfect joy.

And from my path I with my friend have turned,
A man of excellent mind and excellent heart,
And climbed the neighbouring hill, with arduous step,
Fetching from distant cairn, or from the earth
Digging, with labour sure, the ponderous stone,
Which, having carried to the highest top,
We downward rolled ; and as it strove, at first,
With obstacles that seemed to match its force,
With feeble, crooked motion to and fro
Wavering, he looked with interest most intense,
And prayed almost ; and as it gathered strength,
And straightened the current of its furious flow,
Exulting in the swiftness of its course,
And, rising now with rainbow-bound immense,
Leaped down careering o'er the subject plain,
He clapped his hands in sign of boundless bliss,
And laughed and talked, well paid for all his toil .
And when at night the story was rehearsed,
Uncommon glory kindled in his eye.

And there were, too,—Harp ! lift thy voice on high,
And run in rapid numbers o'er the face
Of Nature's scenery,—and there were day
And night, and rising suns and setting suns,
And clouds that seemed like chariots of saints,
By fiery coursers drawn, as brightly hued
As if the glorious, bushy, golden locks
Of thousand cherubim had been shorn off,
And on the temples hung of Morn and Even.
And there were moons, and stars, and darkness streaked
With light ; and voice and tempest heard secure,
And there were seasons coming evermore,

And going still, all fair, and always new,
With bloom, and fruit, and fields of hoary grain.
And there were hills of flock, and groves of song,
And flowery streams, and garden walks embowered,
Where, side by side, the rose and lily bloomed ;
And sacred founts, wild harps, and moonlight glens,
And forests vast, fair lawns, and lonely oaks,
And little willows sipping at the brook ;
Old wizard haunts, and dancing seats of mirth ;
Gay festive bowers, and palaces in dust ;
Dark owlet nooks, and caves, and battled rocks ;
And winding valleys, roofed with pendent shade ;
And tall and perilous cliffs, that overlooked
The breadth of Ocean, sleeping on his waves ;
Sounds, sights, smells, tastes, the heaven and earth, profuse

In endless sweets, above all praise of song :
For not to use alone did Providence
Abound ; but large example gave to man
Of grace, and ornament, and splendour rich,
Suited abundantly to every taste,
In bird, beast, fish, winged and creeping thing,
In herb, and flower, and in the restless change,
Which, on the many-coloured seasons, made
The annual circuit of the fruitful earth.
Nor do I aught of earthly sort remember,—
If partial feeling to my native place
Lead not my lyre astray,—of fairer view,
And comelier walk, than the blue mountain-paths,
And snowy cliffs of Albion renowned ;
Albion, an isle long blessed with gracious laws,
And gracious kings, and favoured much of Heaven,
Though yielding oft penurious gratitude.
Nor do I of that isle remember aught
Of prospect more sublime and beautiful,
Than Scotia's northern battlement of hills,
Which first I from my father's house behold,
At dawn of life ; beloved in memory still,

And standard still of rural imagery.
What most resembles them, the fairest seems,
And stirs the eldest sentiments of bliss;
And, pictured on the tablet of my heart,
Their distant shapes eternally remain,
And in my dreams their cloudy tops arise.

Much of my native scenery appears,
And presses forward to be in my song;
But must not now, for much behind awaits
Of higher note. Four trees I pass not by,
Which o'er our house their evening shadow threw,
Three ash, and one of elm. Tall trees they were,
And old, and had been old a century
Before my day. None living could say aught
About their youth; but they were goodly trees:
And oft I wondered,—as I sat and thought
Beneath their summer shade, or, in the night
Of winter, heard the spirits of the wind
Growling among their boughs,—how they had grown
So high, in such a rough, tempestuous place;
And when a hapless branch, torn by the blast,
Fell down, I mourned, as if a friend had fallen.

These I distinctly hold in memory still,
And all the desert scenery around.
Nor strange, that recollection there should dwell,
Where first I heard of God's redeeming love;
First felt and reasoned, loved and was beloved;
And first awoke the harp to holy song.

To hoar and green there was enough of joy.
Hopes, friendships, charities, and warm pursuit,
Gave comfortable flow to youthful blood.
And there were old remembrances of days,
When, on the glittering dews of orient life,
Shone sunshine hopes, unfailed, unperjured, then;
And there were childish sports, and school-boy feats,

And school-boy spots, and earnest vows of love,
Uttered, when passion's boisterous tide ran high,
Sincerely uttered, though but seldom kept :
And there were angel looks, and sacred hours
Of rapture, hours that in a moment passed,
And yet were wished to last for evermore ;
And venturous exploits, and hardy deeds,
And bargains shrewd, achieved in manhood's prime
And thousand recollections, gay and sweet,
Which, as the old and venerable man
Approached the grave, around him, smiling, flocked,
And breathed new ardour through his ebbing veins,
And touched his lips with endless eloquence,
And cheered and much refreshed his withered heart.

Indeed, each thing remembered, all but guilt,
Was pleasant, and a constant source of joy
Nor lived the old on memory alone.
He in his children lived a second life,
With them again took root, sprang with their hopes,
Entered into their schemes, partook their fears,
Laughed in their mirth, and in their gain grew rich.
And sometimes on the eldest cheek was seen
A smile as hearty as on face of youth,
That saw in prospect sunny hopes invite,
Hope's pleasures, sung to harp of sweetest note,
Harp, heard with rapture on Britannia's hills,
With rapture heard by me, in morn of life.

Nor small the joy of rest to mortal men,
Rest after labour, sleep approaching soft,
And wrapping all the weary faculties
In sweet repose. Then Fancy, unrestrained
By sense or judgment, strange confusion made
Of future, present, past, combining things
Unseemly, things unsociable in nature,
In most absurd communion, laughable,
Though sometimes vexing sore the slumbering soul.

Sporting at will, she, through her airy halls,
 With moonbeams paved, and canopied with stars,
 And tapestried with marvellous imagery,
 And shapes of glory, infinitely fair,
 Moving and mixing in most wondrous dance,— Fantastically walked, but pleased so well,
 That ill she liked the judgment's voice severe,
 Which called her home when noisy morn awoke.
 And oft she sprang beyond the bounds of Time
 On her swift pinion lifting up the souls
 Of righteous men, on high to God and heaven,
 Where they beheld unutterable things;
 And heard the glorious music of the blessed,
 Circling the throne of the Eternal Three;
 And, with the spirits unincarnate, took
 Celestial pastime, on the hills of God,
 Forgetful of the gloomy pass between.

Some dreams were useless, moved by turbid course
 Of animal disorder; not so all.
 Deep moral lessons some impressed, that naught
 Could afterwards deface: and oft in dreams,
 The master passion of the soul displayed
 His huge deformity, concealed by day,
 Warning the sleeper to beware, awake:
 And oft in dreams, the reprobate and vile,
 Unpardonable sinner,—as he seemed Toppling upon the perilous edge of hell,—
 In dreadful apparition, saw, before
 His vision pass, the shadows of the damned;
 And saw the glare of hollow, cursed eyes
 Spring from the skirts of the infernal night;
 And saw the souls of wicked men, new dead,
 By devils hearsed into the fiery gulf;
 And heard the burning of the endless flames;
 And heard the weltering of the waves of wrath;
 And sometimes, too, before his fancy, passed
 The Worm that never dies, writhing its folds

In hideous sort, and with eternal Death
Held horrid colloquy, giving the wretch
Unwelcome earnest of the wo to come.
But these we leave, as unbefitting song,
That promised happy narrative of joy.

But what of all the joys of earth was most
Of native growth, most proper to the soil,
Not elsewhere known, in worlds that never fel.,
Was joy that sprung from disappointed wo.
The joy in grief, the pleasure after pain,
Fears turned to hopes, meetings expected not,
Deliverances from dangerous attitudes,
Better for worse, and best sometimes for worst,
And all the seeming ill ending in good,—
A sort of happiness composed, which none
Has had experience of, but mortal man ;
Yet not to be despised. Look back, and one
Behold, who would not give her tear for all
The smiles that dance about the cheek of Mirth.

Among the tombs she walks at noon of night,
In miserable garb of widowhood.
Observe her yonder, sickly, pale, and sad,
Bending her wasted body o'er the grave
Of him who was the husband of her youth.
The moonbeams, trembling through these ancient yews,
That stand like ranks of mourners round the bed
Of death, fall dismally upon her face,
Her little, hollow, withered face, almost Invisible, so worn away with wo.
The tread of hasty foot, passing so late,
Disturbs her not ; nor yet the roar of mirth,
From neighbouring revelry ascending loud.
She hears, sees naught, fears naught. One thought alone
Fills all her heart and soul, half hoping, half
Remembering, sad, unutterable thought !

Uttered by silence and by tears alone.
Sweet tears ! the awful language, eloquent
Of infinite affection, far too big
For words. She sheds not many now. That grass,
Which springs so rankly o'er the dead, has drunk
Already many showers of grief ; a drop
Or two are all that now remain behind,
And, from her eye that darts strange fiery beams,
At dreary intervals, drip down her cheek,
Falling most mournfully from bone to bone.
But yet she wants not tears. That babe, that hangs
Upon her breast, that babe that never saw
Its father—he was dead before its birth—
Helps her to weep, weeping before its time,
Taught sorrow by the mother's melting voice,
Repeating oft the father's sacred name.
Be not surprised at this expense of wo !
The man she mourns was all she called her own.
The music of her ear, light of her eye,
Desire of all her heart, her hope, her fear,
The element in which her passions lived,
Dead now, or dying all : nor long shall she
Visit that place of skulls. Night after night,
She wears herself away. The moonbeam, now,
That falls upon her unsubstantial frame,
Scarce finds obstruction ; and upon her bones,
Barren as leafless boughs in winter-time,
Her infant fastens his little hands, as oft,
Forgetful, she leaves him a while unheld.
But look, she passes not away in gloom.
A light from far illumines her face, a light
That comes beyond the moon, beyond the sun—
The light of truth divine, the glorious hope
Of resurrection at the promised morn,
And meetings then which ne'er shall part again.

Indulge another note of kindred tone,
Where grief was mixed with melancholy joy.

Our sighs were numerous, and profuse our tears,
For she, we lost, was lovely, and we loved
Her much. Fresh in our memory, as fresh
As yesterday, is yet the day she died.
It was an April day; and blithely all
The youth of nature leaped beneath the sun,
And promised glorious manhood; and our hearts
Were glad, and round them danced the lightsome blood,
In healthy merriment, when tidings came,
A child was born: and tidings came again,
That she who gave it birth was sick to death.
So swift trode sorrow on the heels of joy!
We gathered round her bed, and bent our knees
In fervent supplication to the Throne
Of Mercy, and perfumed our prayers with sighs
Sincere, and penitential tears, and looks
Of self-abasement; but we sought to stay
An angel on the earth, a spirit ripe
For heaven; and Mercy, in her love, refused,
Most merciful, as oft, when seeming least!
Most gracious when she seemed the most to frown!
The room I well remember, and the bed
On which she lay, and all the faces too,
That crowded dark and mournfully around.
Her father there and mother, bending, stood;
And down their aged cheeks fell many drops
Of bitterness. Her husband, too, was there,
And brothers, and they wept; her sisters, too,
Did weep and sorrow, comfortless; and I,
Too, wept, though not to weeping given; and all
Within the house was dolorous and sad.
This I remember well; but better still,
I do remember, and will ne'er forget,
The dying eye! That eye alone was bright,
And brighter grew, as nearer death approached,
As I have seen the gentle little flower
Look fairest in the silver beam which fell,
Reflected from the thunder-cloud that soon

Came down, and o'er the desert scatter'd far
And wide its loveliness. She made a sign
To bring her babe—'twas brought, and by her placed.
She looked upon its face, that neither smiled
Nor wept, nor knew who gazed upon't; and laid
Her hand upon its little breast, and sought
For it, with look that seemed to penetrate
The heavens, unutterable blessings, such
As God to dying parents only granted,
For infants left behind them in the world.
"God keep my child!" we heard her say, and heard
No more. The Angel of the Covenant
Was come, and, faithful to his promise, stood,
Prepared to walk with her through death's dark vale.
And now her eyes grew bright, and brighter still,
Too bright for ours to look upon, suffused
With many tears, and closed without a cloud.
They set as sets the morning star, which goes
Not down behind the darkened west, nor hides
Obscured among the tempests of the sky,
But melts away into the light of heaven.

Loves, friendships, hopes, and dear remembrances,
The kind embracings of the heart, and hours
Of happy thought, and smiles coming to tears,
And glories of the heaven and starry cope
Above, and glories of the earth beneath,—
These were the rays that wandered through the gloom
Of mortal life; wells of the wilderness,
Redeeming features in the face of Time,
Sweet drops, that made the mixed cup of Earth
A palatable draught—too bitter else.

About the joys and pleasures of the world,
This question was not seldom in debate:
Whether the righteous man, or sinner, had
The greatest share, and relished them the most.
Truth gives the answer thus, gives it distinct,

Nor needs to reason long : The righteous man.
For what was he denied of earthly growth,
Worthy the name of good ? Truth answers, Naught.
Had he not appetites, and sense, and will ?
Might he not eat, if Providence allowed,
The finest of the wheat ? Might he not drink
The choicest wine ? True, he was temperate ;
But, then, was temperance a foe to peace ?
Might he not rise, and clothe himself in gold ?
Ascend, and stand in palaces of kings ?
True, he was honest still and charitable :
Were, then, these virtues foes to human peace ?
Might he not do exploits, and gain a name ?
Most true, he trode not down a fellow's right,
Nor walked up to a throne on skulls of men :
Were justice, then, and mercy, foes to peace ?
Had he not friendships, loves, and smiles, and hopes ?
Sat not around his table sons and daughters ?
Was not his ear with music pleased ? his eye
With light ? his nostrils with perfumes ? his lips
With pleasant relishes ? Grew not his herds ?
Fell not the rain upon his meadows ? reaped
He not his harvests ? and did not his heart
Revel, at will, through all the charities
And sympathies of nature, unconfined ?
And were not these all sweetened and sanctified
By dews of holiness, shed from above ?
Might he not walk through Fancy's airy halls ?
Might he not History's ample page survey ?
Might he not, finally, explore the depths
Of mental, moral, natural, divine ?
But why enumerate thus ? One word enough.
There was no joy in all created things,
No drop of sweet, that turned not in the end
To sour, of which the righteous man did not Partake ; partake, invited by the voice
Of God, his Father's voice, who gave him all
His heart's desire : and o'er the sinner still

The Christian had this one advantage more,
 That when his earthly pleasures failed,—and fail
 They always did to every soul of man,—
 He sent his hopes on high, looked up, and reached
 His sickle forth, and reaped the fields of heaven,
 And plucked the clusters from the vines of God.

Nor was the general aspect of the world
 Always a moral waste. A time there came,
 Though few believed it e'er should come ; a time,
 Typed by the Sabbath day recurring once
 In seven, and by the year of rest indulged
 Septennial to the lands on Jordan's banks ,
 A time foretold by Judah's bards in words
 Of fire, a time, seventh part of time, and set
 Before the eighth and last, the Sabbath day
 Of all the earth, when all had rest and peace.
 Before its coming many to and fro
 Ran, ran from various cause ; by many sent
 From various cause, upright and crooked both.
 Some sent and ran for love of souls, sincere ;
 And more, at instance of a holy name.
 With godly zeal much vanity was mixed ;
 And circumstance of gaudy civil pomp ;
 And speeches buying praise for praise ; and lists,
 And endless scrolls, surcharged with modest names
 That sought the public eye ; and stories, told
 In quackish phrase, that hurt their credit, even When true ; combined with wise and prudent means.
 Much wheat, much chaff, much gold, and much alloy ;
 But God wrought with the whole, wrought most with what
 To man seemed weakest means, and brought result
 Of good, from good and evil both ; and breathed
 Into the withered nations breath and life,
 The breath and life of liberty and truth,
 By means of knowledge, breathed into the soul.

Then was the evil day of tyranny,
Of kingly and of priestly tyranny,
That bruised the nations long. As yet, no state
Beneath the heavens had tasted freedom's wine,
Though loud of freedom was the talk of all.
Some groaned more deeply, being heavier tasked;
Some wrought with straw, and some without; but all
Were slaves, or meant to be; for rulers, still,
Had been of equal mind, excepting few,
Cruel, rapacious, tyrannous, and vile,
And had with equal shoulder propped the Beast.
As yet, the Church, the holy spouse of God,
In members few, had wandered in her weeds
Of mourning, persecuted, scorned reproached,
And buffeted, and killed; in members few,
'Though seeming many whiles; then fewest, oft,
When seeming most She still had hung her harp
Upon the willow-tree, and sighed, and wept
From age to age. Satan began the war,
And all his angels, and all wicked men,
Against her fought by wile, or fierce attack,
Six thousand years; but fought in vain. She stood,
Troubled on every side, but not distressed;
Weeping, but yet despairing not; cast down,
But not destroyed: for she upon the palms
Of God was graven, and precious in his sight,
As apple of his eye; and, like the bush
On Midia's mountain seen, burned unconsumed;
But to the wilderness retiring, dwelt,
Debased in sackcloth, and forlorn in tears.

As yet had sung the scarlet-coloured Whore,
Who on the breast of civil power reposed
Her harlot head, (the Church a harlot then,
When first she wedded civil power,) and drank
The blood of martyred saints,—whose priests were lords,
Whose coffers held the gold of every land,

Who held a cup of all pollutions full,
Who with a double horn the people pushed,
And raised her forehead, full of blasphemy,
Above the holy God, usurping oft
Jehovah's incommunicable names.
The nations had been dark ; the Jews had pined,
Scattered without a name, beneath the Curse ;
War had abounded, Satan raged, unchained ;
And earth had still been black with moral gloom.

But now the cry of men oppressed went up
Before the Lord, and to remembrance came
The tears of all his saints, their tears, and groans.
Wise men had read the number of the name ;
The prophet-years had rolled ; the time, and times
And half a time, were now fulfilled complete ;
The seven fierce vials of the wrath of God,
Poured by seven angels strong, were shed abroad
Upon the earth, and emptied to the dregs ;
The prophecy for confirmation stood ;
And all was ready for the sword of God.

The righteous saw, and fled without delay,
Into the chambers of Omnipotence.
The wicked mocked, and sought for erring cause,
To satisfy the dismal state of things ;
The public credit gone, the fear in time
Of peace, the starving want in time of wealth,
The insurrection muttering in the streets,
And pallid consternation spreading wide ;
And leagues, though holy termed, first ratified
In hell, on purpose made to under-prop
Iniquity, and crush the sacred truth.

Meantime, a mighty angel stood in heaven,
And cried aloud, " Associate now yourselves,
Ye princes, potentates, and men of war,

And mitred heads, associate now yourselves,
And be dispers'd ; embattle, and be broken.
Gird on your armour, and be dashed to dust.
Take counsel, and it shall be brought to naught.
Speak, and it shall not stand." And suddenly
The armies of the saints, imbannered, stood
On Zion hill ; and with them angels stood
In squadron bright, and chariots of fire ;
And with them stood the Lord, clad like a man
Of war, and to the sound of thunder, led
The battle on. Earth shook, the kingdoms shook,
The Beast, the lying Seer, dominions, fell ;
Thrones, tyrants fell, confounded in the dust,
Scattered and driven before the breath of God,
As chaff of summer threshing floor, before
The wind. Three days the battle wasting slew.
The sword was full, the arrow drunk with blood ;
And to the supper of Almighty God,
Spread in Hamonah's vale, the fowls of heaven,
And every beast, invited, came, and fed
On captains' flesh, and drank the blood of kings.

And, lo ! another angel stood in heaven,
Crying aloud with mighty voice, " Fallen, fallen,
Is Babylon the Great, to rise no more.
Rejoice, ye prophets ! over her rejoice,
Apostles ! holy men, all saints, rejoice !
And glory give to God and to the Lamb."
And all the armies of disburdened earth,
As voice of many waters, and as voice
Of thunderings, and voice of multitudes,
Answered, Amen. And every hill and rock,
And sea, and every beast, answered, Amen.
Europa answered, and the farthest bounds
Of woody Chili, Asia's fertile coasts,
And Afric's burning wastes, answered, Amen.
And Heaven, rejoicing, answered back, Amen.

Not so the wicked. They afar were heard
 Lamenting. Kings, who drank her cup of whoredoms,
 Captains, and admirals, and mighty men,
 Who lived deliciously ; and merchants, rich
 With merchandise of gold, and wine, and oil ;
 And those who traded in the souls of men,
 Known by their gaudy robes of priestly pomp ;—
 All these afar off stood, crying, Alas !
 Alas ! and wept, and gnashed their teeth, and groaned
 And, with the owl that on her ruins sat,
 Made dolorous concert in the ear of Night.
 And over her again the Heavens rejoiced,
 And Earth returned again the loud response.

Thrice happy days ! thrice blessed the man who saw
 Their dawn ! The Church and State, that long had held
 Unholy intercourse, were now divorced ;
 Princes were righteous men, judges upright ;
 And first, in general, now—for in the worst
 Of times there were some honest seers—the priest
 Sought other than the fleece among his flocks,
 Best paid when God was honoured most ; and like
 A cedar, nourished well, Jerusalem grew,
 And towered on high, and spread, and flourished fair,
 And underneath her boughs the nations lodged,
 All nations lodged, and sung the song of peace.
 From the four winds, the Jews, eased of the Curse,
 Returned, and dwelt with God in Jacob's land,
 And drank of Sharon and of Carmel's vine.
 Satan was bound, though bound, not banished quite,
 But lurked about the timorous skirts of things,
 Ill lodged, and thinking whiles to leave the earth,
 And with the wicked,—for some wicked were,— Held midnight meetings, as the saints were wont,
 Fearful of day, who once was as the sun,
 And worshipped more. The bad, but few, became
 A taunt and hissing now, as heretofore
 The good ; and, blushing, hasted out of sight.

Disease was none ; the voice of war forgot ;
The sword, a share ; a pruning-hook, the spear .
Men grew and multiplied upon the earth,
And filled the city and the waste ; and Death
Stood waiting for the lapse of tardy Age,
That mocked him long. Men grew and multiplied,
But lacked not bread ; for God his promise brought
To mind, and blessed the land with plenteous rain,
And made it blessed for dews and precious things
Of heaven, and blessings of the deep beneath,
And blessings of the sun and moon, and fruits
Of day and night, and blessings of the vale,
And precious things of the eternal hills,
And all the fulness of perpetual spring.

The prison-house, where chained felons pined,
Threw open his ponderous doors, let in the light
Of heaven, and grew into a church, where God
Was worshipped. None were ignorant, selfish none.
Love took the place of law ; where'er you met
A man, you met a friend, sincere and true.
Kind looks foretold as kind a heart within ;
Words as they sounded, meant ; and promises
Were made to be performed. Thrice happy days !
Philosophy was sanctified, and saw
Perfections that she thought a fable, long.
Revenge his dagger dropped, and kissed the hand
Of Mercy ; Anger cleared his cloudy brow,
And sat with Peace ; Envy grew red, and smiled
On Worth ; Pride stooped, and kissed Humility ;
Lust washed his miry hands, and, wedded, leaned
On chaste Desire ; and Falsehood laid aside
His many-folded cloak, and bowed to Truth ;
And Treachery up from his mining came,
And walked above the ground with righteous Faith ;
And Covetousness unclenched his sinewy hand,
And opened his door to Charity, the fair ;
Hatred was lost in Love ; and Vanity

With a good conscience pleased, her feathers cropped;
Sloth in the morning rose with Industry;
To Wisdom Folly turned; and Fashion turned Deception off, in act as good as word.
The hand that held a whip was lifted up
To bless; slave was a word in ancient books
Met, only; every man was free; and all
Feared God, and served him day and night in love.

How fair the daughter of Jerusalem then!
How gloriously from Zion Hill she looked!
Clothed with the sun, and in her train the moon,
And on her head a coronet of stars,
And girdling round her waist, with heavenly grace,
The bow of Mercy bright; and in her hand
Immanuel's cross, her sceptre and her hope.

Desire of every land! the nations came,
And worshipped at her feet; all nations came,
Flocking like doves: Columba's painted tribes,
That from Magellan to the Frozen Bay,
Beneath the Arctic, dwelt; and drank the tides
Of Amazona, prince of earthly streams;
Or slept at noon beneath the giant shade
Of Andes' mount; or, roving northward, heard
Nigara sing, from Erie's billow down
To Frontenac, and hunted thence the fur
To Labrador: and Afric's dusky swarms,
That from Morocco to Angola dwelt,
And drank the Niger from his native wells,
Or roused the lion in Numidia's groves;
The tribes that sat among the fabled cliffs
Of Atlas, looking to Atlanta's wave;
With joy and melody, arose and came.
Zara awoke and came, and Egypt came,
Casting her idol gods into the Nile.
Black Ethiopia, that, shadowless,
Beneath the Torrid burned, arose and came.

Dauma and Medra, and the pirate tribes
Of Algeri, with incense came, and pure
Offerings, annoying now the seas no more.
The silken tribes of Asia, flocking, came,
Innumerable : Ishmael's wandering race, that rode
On camels o'er the spicy tract that lay
From Persia to the Red Sea coast ; the king
Of broad Cathay, with numbers infinite,
Of many lettered casts ; and all the tribes
That dwelt from Tigris to the Ganges' wave,
And worshipped fire, or Brahma, fabled god ;
Cashmeres, Circassians, Banyans, tender race !
That swept the insect from their path, and lived
On herbs and fruits ; and those who peaceful dwell
Along the shady avenue that stretched
From Agra to Lahore ; and all the hosts
That owned the Crescent late, deluded long ;
The Tartar hordes, that roamed from Oby's bank,
Ungoverned, southward to the wondrous Wall.
The tribes of Europe came : the Greek, redeemed
From Turkish thrall, the Spaniard came, and Gaul,
And Britain with her ships, and, on his sledge,
The Laplander, that nightly watched the bear
Circling the Pole ; and those who saw the flames
Of Hecla burn the drifted snow ; the Russ, Long-whiskered, and equestrian Pole ; and those Who drank the Rhine, or lost the evening sun
Behind the Alpine towers ; and she that sat
By Arno, classic stream ; Venice, or ; Rome,
Head quarters long of sin ! first guileless now,
And meaning as she seemed, stretched forth her hands
And all the Isles of ocean rose and came,
Whether they heard the roll of banished tides,
Antipodes to Albion's wave, or watched
The Moon, ascending chalky Teneriffe,
And with Atlanta holding nightly love.
The Sun, the Moon, the Constellations, came :
Thrice twelve and ten that watched the Antarctic sleep,

Twice six that near the Ecliptic dwelt, thrice twelve
And one, that with the Streamers danced, and saw
The Hyperborean Ice guarding the Pole.
The East, the West, the South, and snowy North,
Rejoicing met, and worshipped reverently
Before the Lord, in Zion's holy hill ;
And all the places round about were blessed.

The animals, as once in Eden, lived
In peace. The wolf dwelt with the lamb, the bear
And leopard with the ox. With looks of love,
The tiger and the scaly crocodile
Together met, at Gambia's palmy wave.
Perched on the eagle's wing, the bird of song,
Singing, arose, and visited the sun ;
And with the falcon sat the gentle lark.
The little child leaped from his mother's arms,
And stroked the crested snake, and rolled unhurt
Among his speckled waves, and wished him home ,
And sauntering school-boys, slow returning, played
At eve about the lion's den, and wove,
Into his shaggy mane, fantastic flowers.
To meet the husbandman, early abroad,
Hasted the deer, and waved its woody head ,
And round his dewy steps, the hare, unscared,
Sported ; and toyed familiar with his dog.
The flocks and herds, o'er hill and valley spread,
Exulting, cropped the ever-budding herb.
The desert blossomed, and the barren sung.
Justice and Mercy, Holiness and Love,
Among the people walked, Messiah reigned,
And Earth kept Jubilee a thousand years.

COURSE OF TIME.

BOOK VI.

RESUME thy tone of wo, immortal Harp !
The song of mirth is past, the Jubilee
Is ended, and the sun begins to fade !
Soon passed, for Happiness counts not the hours.
To her a thousand years seem as a day ;
A day, a thousand years to Misery.
Satan is loose, and Violence is heard,
And Riot in the street, and Revelry
Intoxicate, and Murder, and Revenge.
Put on your armour now, ye righteous ! put
The helmet of salvation on, and gird
Your loins about with truth ; add righteousness,
And add the shield of faith, and take the sword
Of God—awake and watch !—The day is near,
Great day of God Almighty and the Lamb !
The harvest of the earth is fully ripe ;
Vengeance begins to tread the great wine-press
Of fierceness and of wrath ; and Mercy pleads,
Mercy that pleaded long, she pleads—no more !
Whence comes that darkness ? whence those yells of wo ?
What thunderings are these that shake the world ?
Why fall the lamps from heaven as blasted figs ?
Why tremble righteous men ? why angels pale ?

Why is all fear ? what has become of hope ?
God comes ! God, in his car of vengeance, comes !—
Hark ! louder on the blast, come hollow shrieks
Of dissolution ! in the fitful scowl
Of night, near and more near, angels of death
Incessant flap their deadly wings, and roar
Through all the fevered air ! the mountains rock,
The moon is sick, and all the stars of heaven
Burn feebly ! oft and sudden gleams the fire,
Revealing awfully the brow of Wrath !
The Thunder, long and loud, utters his voice,
Responsive to the Ocean's troubled growl !
Night comes, last night, the long, dark, dark, dark night,
That has no morn beyond it, and no star !
No eye of man hath seen a night like this !
Heaven's trampled Justice girds itself for fight !
Earth, to thy knees, and cry for mercy ! cry
With earnest heart, for thou art growing old
And hoary, unrepented, unforgiven !
And all thy glory mourns ! The vintage mourns !
Bashan and Carmel, mourn and weep ! and mourn,
Thou Lebanon ! with all thy cedars, mourn.
Sun ! glorying in thy strength from age to age,
So long observant of thy hour, put on
Thy weeds of wo, and tell the Moon to weep ;
Utter thy grief at mid-day, morn, and even ;
Tell all the nations, tell the Clouds that sit
About the portals of the east and west,
And wanton with thy golden locks, to wait
Thee not to-morrow, for no morrow comes !
Tell men and women, tell the new-born child,
And every eye that sees, to come, and see
Thee set behind Eternity, for thou
Shalt go to bed to-night, and ne'er awake !
Stars ! walking on the pavement of the sky,
Out-sentinels of heaven, watching the earth,
Cease dancing now ; your lamps are growing dim,
Your graves are dug among the dismal clouds,

And angels are assembling round your hier !
 Orion, mourn ! and Mazzaroth, and thou,
 Arcturus ! mourn, with all thy northern sons,
 Daughters of Pleiades ! that nightly shed
 Sweet influence, and thou, fairest of stars !
 Eye of the morning, weep ! and weep at eve !
 Weep setting, now to rise no more, " and flame
 On forehead of the dawn,"—as sung the bard,
 Great bard ! who used on Earth a seraph's lyre,
 Whose numbers wandered through eternity,
 And gave sweet foretaste of the heavenly harps !
 Minstrel of sorrow ! native of the dark,
 Shrub-loving Philomel, that wooed the Dews,
 At midnight from their starry beds, and, charmed,
 Held them around thy song till dawn awoke,
 Sad bird ! pour through the gloom thy weeping song,
 Pour all thy dying melody of grief,
 And with the turtle spread the wave of wo !
 Spare not thy reed, for thou shalt sing no more !

Ye holy bards !—if yet a holy bard
 Remain,—what chord shall serve you now ! what harp !
 What harp shall sing the dying Sun asleep,
 And mourn behind the funeral of the Moon !
 What harp of boundless, deep, exhaustless wo,
 Shall utter forth the groanings of the damned !
 And sing the obsequies of wicked souls !
 And wail their plunge in the eternal fire !—
 Hold, hold your hands ! hold, angels !—God laments,
 And draws a cloud of mourning round his throne !
 The Organ of Eternity is mute !
 And there is silence in the Heaven of Heavens !

Daughters of beauty ! choice of beings made !
 Much praised, much blamed, much loved ; but fairer far
 Than aught beheld, than aught imagined else
 Fairest, and dearer than all else most dear ;
 Light of the darksome wilderness ! to Time

As stars to night, whose eyes were spells that held
The passenger forgetful of his way,
Whose steps were majesty, whose words were song,
Whose smiles were hope, whose actions, perfect grace,
Whose love, the solace, glory, and delight
Of man, his boast, his riches, his renown ;
When found, sufficient bliss ! when lost, despair !—
Stars of creation ! images of love !
Break up the fountains of your tears, your tears,
More eloquent than learned tongue, or lyre
Of purest note ! your sunny raiment stain,
Put dust upon your heads, lament and weep,
And utter all your minstrelsy of wo !

Go to, ye wicked, weep and howl ; for all
That God hath written against you is at hand.
The cry of Violence hath reached his ear,
Hell is prepared, and Justice whets his sword.
Weep all of every name ! Begin the wo,
Ye woods, and tell it to the doleful winds,
And doleful winds, wail to the howling hills ;
And howling hills, mourn to the dismal vales,
And dismal vales, sigh to the sorrowing brooks,
And sorrowing brooks, weep to the weeping stream,
And weeping stream, awake the groaning deep ;
And let the instrument take up the song,
Responsive to the voice, harmonious wo !
Ye Heavens, great arch-way of the universe,
Put sackcloth on ; and Ocean, clothe thyself
In garb of widowhood, and gather all
Thy waves into a groan, and utter it,
Long, loud, deep, piercing, dolorous, immense
The occasion asks it !—Nature dies, and God
And angels come to lay her in the grave !

But we have overleaped our theme ; behind,
A little season waits a verse or two,
The years that followed the millennial-rest.

Bad years they were ; and first, as signal sure,
That at the core religion was diseased,
The sons of Levi strove again for place,
And eminence, and names of swelling pomp ;
Setting their feet upon the people's neck,
And slumbering in the lap of civil power,
Of civil power again tyrannical :
And second sign, sure sign, whenever seen,
That holiness was dying in a land,
The Sabbath was profaned and set at naught ;
The honest seer, who spoke the truth of God
Plainly, was left with empty walls ; and round
The frothy orator, who busked his tales
In quackish pomp of noisy words, the ear
Tickling, but leaving still the heart unprobed,
The judgment uninformed,—numbers immense
Flocked, gaping wide, with passions high inflamed ;
And on the way returning, heated, home,
Of eloquence, and not of truth, conversed—
Mean eloquence that wanted sacred truth.

Two principles from the beginning strove
In human nature, still dividing man,—
Sloth and activity ; the lust of praise,
And indolence that rather wished to sleep.
And not unfrequently in the same mind
They dubious contest held ; one gaining now,
And now the other crowned, and both again
Keeping the field, with equal combat fought.
Much different was their voice. Ambition called
To action, Sloth invited to repose.
Ambition early rose, and, being up,
Toiled ardently, and late retired to rest ;
Sloth lay till mid-day, turning on his couch,
Like ponderous door upon its weary hinge,
And, having rolled him out with much ado,
And many a dismal sigh, and vain attempt,
He sauntered out, accoutred carelessly,—

With half-oped, misty, unobservant eye,
Somniferous, that weighed the object down
On which its burden fell,—an hour or two,
Then with a groan retired to rest again.
The one, whatever deed had been achieved,
Thought it too little, and too small the praise ;
The other tried to think,—for thinking so
Answered his purpose best,—that what of great
Mankind could do had been already done ;
And therefore laid him calmly down to sleep.

Different in mode, destructive both alike.
Destructive always indolence ; and love
Of fame destructive always too, if less
Than praise of God it sought, content with less :
Even then not current, if it sought his praise
From other motive than resistless love ;
Though base, main-spring of action in the world ;
And, under name of vanity and pride,
Was greatly practised on by cunning men.
It opened the niggard's purse, clothed nakedness,
Gave beggars food, and threw the Pharisee
Upon his knees, and kept him long in act
Of prayer ; it spread the lace upon the fop,
His language trimmed, and planned his curious gait,
It stuck the feather on the gay coquette,
And on her finger laid the heavy load
Of jewellery ; it did—what did it not ?
The gospel preached, the gospel paid, and sent
The gospel ; conquered nations, cities built,
Measured the furrow of the field with nice
Directed share, shaped bulls, and cows, and rams,
And threw the ponderous stone ; and pitiful,
Indeed, and much against the grain, it dragged
The stagnant, dull, predestinated fool,
Through learning's halls, and made him labour much
Abortively, though sometimes not unpraised
He left the sage's chair, and home returned

Making his simple mother think that she Had borne a man. In schools, designed to root
Sin up, and plant the seeds of holiness
In youthful minds, it held a signal place.
The little infant man, by nature proud,
Was taught the Scriptures by the love of praise
And grew religious as he grew in fame.
And thus the principle, which out of heaven
The devil threw, and threw him down to hell,
And keeps him there, was made an instrument
To moralize and sanctify mankind,
And in their hearts beget humility ;
With what success it needs not now to say.

Destructive both we said, activity
And sloth : behold the last exemplified,
In literary man. Not all at once,
He yielded to the soothing voice of sleep ;
But, having seen a bough of laurel wave,
He effort made to climb ; and friends, and even Himself, talked of his greatness, as at hand,
And, prophesying, drew his future life.
Vain prophecy ! his fancy, taught by sloth,
Saw, in the very threshold of pursuit,
A thousand obstacles ; he halted first,
And while he halted, saw his burning hopes
Grow dim and dinner still ; ambition's self,
The advocate of loudest tongue, decayed ;
His purposes, made daily, daily broken,
Like plant uprooted oft, and set again,
More sickly grew, and daily wavered more ;
Till at the last, decision, quite worn out,
Decision, fulcrum of the mental powers,
Resigned the blasted soul to staggering chance ;
Sleep gathered fast, and weighed him downward still ;
His eye fell heavy from the mount of fame ;
His young resolves to benefit the world
Perished and were forgotten ; he shut his ear

Against the painful news of rising worth ;
And drank with desperate thirst the poppy's juice ,
A deep and mortal slumber settled down
Upon his weary faculties oppressed ;
He rolled from side to side, and rolled again ;
And snored, and groaned, and withered, and expired,
And rotted on the spot, leaving no name.

The hero best example gives of toil
Unsanctified. One word his history writes.
" He was a murderer above the laws,
And greatly praised for doing murderous deeds."
And now he grew, and reached his perfect growth ;
And also now the sluggard soundest slept
And by him lay the uninterred corpse.

Of every order, sin and wickedness,
Deliberate, cool, malicious villany,
This age, attained maturity, unknown
Before ; and seemed in travail to bring forth
Some last, enormous, monstrous deed of guilt,
Original, unprecedented guilt,
That might obliterate the memory
Of what had hitherto been done most vile.
Inventive men were paid, at public cost,
To plan new modes of sin ; the holy Word
Of God was burned, with acclamations loud ;
New tortures were invented for the good ;—
For still some good remained, as whiles through sky
Of thickest clouds, a wandering star appeared ;—
New oaths of blasphemy were framed and sworn ;
And men in reputation grew, as grew
• The stature of their crimes. Faith was not found.
Truth was not found, truth, always scarce, so scarce
That half the misery which groaned on earth,
In ordinary times, was progeny
Of disappointment, daily coming forth
From broken promises, that might have ne'er

Been made, or, being made, might have been kept ;
Justice and mercy, too, were rare, obscured
In cottage garb : before the palace door,
The beggar rotted, starving in his rags ;
And on the threshold of luxurious domes,
The orphan child laid down his head, and died ;
Nor unamusing was his piteous cry
To women, who had now laid tenderness
Aside, best pleased with sights of cruelty ;
Flocking, when fouler lusts would give them time,
To horrid spectacles of blood, where men,
Or guiltless beasts, that seemed to look to heaven
With eye imploring vengeance on the earth,
Were tortured for the merriment of kings.
The advocate for him who offered most Pleaded ; the scribe, according to the hire,
Worded the lie, adding, for every piece,
An oath of confirmation ; judges raised
One hand to intimate the sentence, death,
Imprisonment, or fine, or loss of goods,
And in the other held a lusty bribe,
Which they had taken to give the sentence wrong ;
So managing the scale of justice still,
That he was wanting found who poorest seemed.

But laymen, most renowned for devilish deeds,
Laboured at distance still behind the priest ;
He shorn his sheep, and, having packed the wool,
Sent them unguarded to the hill of wolves ;
And to the bowl deliberately sat down,
And with his mistress mocked at sacred things.

The theatre was, from the very first,
The favourite haunt of Sin, though honest men,
Some very honest, wise, and worthy men,
Maintained it might be turned to good account ;
And so perhaps it might, but never was.
From first to last it was an evil place :

And now such things were acted there, as made
The devils blush; and from the neighbourhood,
Angels and holy men, trembling, retired :
And what with dreadful aggravation crowned
This dreary time, was sin against the light.
All men knew God, and, knowing, disobeyed ;
And gloried to insult him to his face.

Another feature only we shall mark.
It was withal a highly polished age,
And scrupulous in ceremonious rite.
When stranger stranger met upon the way,
First, each to each bowed most respectfully,
And large profession made of humble service,
And then the stronger took the other's purse,
And he that stabbed his neighbour to the heart,
Stabbed him politely, and returned the blade
Reeking into its sheath with graceful air.

Meantime the earth gave symptoms of her end ;
And all the scenery above proclaimed,
That the great last catastrophe was near.
The Sun at rising staggered and fell back,
As one too early up, after a night
Of late debauch; then rose, and shone again,
Brighter than wont; and sickened again, and paused
In zenith altitude, as one fatigued ;
And shed a feeble twilight ray at moon,
Rousing the wolf before his time to chase
The shepherd and his sheep, that sought for light,
And darkness found, astonished, terrified ;
Then, out of course, rolled furious down the west,
As chariot reined by awkward charioteer ;
And, waiting at the gate, he on the earth
Gazed, as he thought he ne'er might see't again.
The bow of mercy, heretofore so fair,
Ribbed with the native hues of heavenly love,
Disastrous colours showed, unseen till now ;

Changing upon the watery gulf, from pale
To fiery red, and back again to pale ;
And o'er it hovered wings of wrath. The Moon
Swaggered in midst of heaven, grew black, and dark,
Unclouded, uneclipsed. The Stars fell down,
Tumbling from off their towers like drunken men,
Or seemed to fall ; and glimmered now, and now
Sprang out in sudden blaze and dimmed again,
As lamp of foolish virgin lacking oil.
The heavens, this moment, looked serene ; the next,
Glowed like an oven with God's displeasure hot

Nor less, below, was intimation given,
Of some disaster great and ultimate.
The tree that bloomed, or hung with clustering fruit,
Untouched by visible calamity
Of frost or tempest, died and came again.
The flower and herb fell down as sick ; then rose
And fell again. The fowls of every hue,
Crowding together, sailed on weary wing ;
And, hovering, oft they seemed about to light ;
Then soared, as if they thought the earth unsafe.
The cattle looked with meaning face on man.
Dogs howled, and seemed to see more than their masters.

And there were sights that none had seen before ;
And hollow, strange, unprecedented sounds,
And earnest whisperings ran along the hills
At dead of night ; and long, deep, endless sighs,
Came from the dreary vale ; and from the waste
Came horrid shrieks, and fierce unearthly groans,
The wail of evil spirits, that now felt
The hour of utter vengeance near at hand.
The winds from every quarter blew at once,
With desperate violence, and, whirling, took
The traveller up, and threw him down again,
At distance from his path, confounded, pale ;
And shapes, strange shapes ! in winding sheets were seen,

Gliding through night, and singing funeral songs,
And imitating sad, sepulchral rites ;
And voices talked among the clouds, and still
The words that men could catch were spoken of them,
And seemed to be the words of wonder great,
And expectation of some vast event.
Earth shook, and swam, and reeled, and opened her jaws,
By Earthquake tossed, and tumbled to and fro ;
And, louder than the ear of man had heard,
The Thunder bellowed, and the Ocean groaned.

The race of men, perplexed, but not reformed,
Flocking together, stood in earnest crowds,
Conversing of the awful state of things.
Some curious explanations gave, unlearned ;
Some tried affectedly to laugh, and some
Gazed stupidly ; but all were sad and pale,
And wished the comment of the wise. Nor less
These prodigies, occurring night and day,
Perplexed philosophy. The magi tried,—
Magi, a name not seldom given to fools,
In the vocabulary of earthly speech,—
They tried to trace them still to second cause ,
But scarcely satisfied themselves ; though round
Their deep deliberations, crowding, came,
And, wondering at their wisdom, went away,
Much quieted and very much deceived,
The people, always glad to be deceived.

These warnings passed, they, unregarded, passed ,
And all in wonted order calmly moved.
The pulse of Nature regularly beat,
And on her cheek the bloom of perfect health
Again appeared. Deceitful pulse ! and bloom
Deceitful ! and deceitful calm ! The Earth
Was old, and worn within ; but, like the man,
Who noticed not his mid-day strength decline,

Sliding so gently round the curvature
Of life, from youth to age,—she knew it not.
The calm was like the calm, which oft the man,
Dying, experienced before his death ;
The bloom was but a hectic flush, before
The eternal paleness. But all these were taken,
By this last race of men, for tokens of good ;
And blustering public News aloud proclaimed—
News always gabbling ere they well had thought—
Prosperity, and joy, and peace ; and mocked
The man who, kneeling, prayed, and trembled still
And all in earnest to their sins returned.

It was not so in heaven. The elders round
The Throne conversed about the state of man,
Conjecturing,—for none of certain knew,—
That Time was at an end. They gazed intense
Upon the Dial's face, which yonder stands
In gold, before the Sun of Righteousness,
Jehovah, and computes time, seasons, years,
And destinies, and slowly numbers o'er
The mighty cycles of eternity ;
By God alone completely understood,
But read by all, revealing much to all.
And now, to saints of eldest skill, the ray,
Which on the gnomon fell of Time, seemed sent
From level west, and hasting quickly down.
The holy Virtues, watching, saw, besides,
Great preparation going on in heaven,
Betokening great event, greater than aught
That first-created seraphim had seen.
The faithful messengers, who have for wing
The lightning, waiting, day and night, on God :
Before his face, beyond their usual speed,
On pinion of celestial light were seen,
Coming and going, and their road was still
From heaven to earth, and back again to heaven.
The angel of Mercy, bent before the Throne,

By earnest pleading, seemed to hold the hand
Of Vengeance back, and win a moment more
Of late repentance for some sinful world
In jeopardy : and, now, the hill of God,
The mountain of his majesty, rolled flames
Of fire, now smiled with momentary love,
And now again with fiery fierceness burned ;
And from behind the darkness of his Throne,
Through which created vision never saw,
The living Thunders, in their native caves,
Muttered the terrors of Omnipotence,
And ready seemed, impatient to fulfil
Some errand of exterminating wrath.

Meanwhile the Earth increased in wickedness,
And hasted daily to fill up her cup.
Satan raged loose, Sin had her will, and Death
Enough. Blood trode upon the heels of Blood,
Revenge, in desperate mood, at midnight met
Revenge, War brayed to War, Deceit deceived
Deceit, Lie cheated Lie, and Treachery
Mined under Treachery, and Perjury
Swore back on Perjury, and Blasphemy
Arose with hideous Blasphemy, and Curse
Loud answered Curse ; and drunkard, stumbling, fell
O'er drunkard fallen ; and husband husband met,
Returning each from other's bed defiled ;
Thief stole from thief, and robber on the way
Knocked robber down, and Lewdness, Violence,
And Hate, met Lewdness, Violence, and Hate.
Oh, Earth ! thy hour was come ! the last elect
Was born, complete the number of the good,
And the last sand fell from the glass of Time.
The cup of guilt was full up to the brim ;
And Mercy, weary with beseeching, had Retired behind the sword of Justice, red
With ultimate and unrepenting wrath ;
But man knew not : he o'er his bowl laughed loud,

And, prophesying, said, "To-morrow shall
 As this day be, and more abundant still!"
 As thou shalt hear—But, hark! the trumpet sounds,
 And calls to evening song; for, though with hyian
 Eternal, course succeeding course, extol
 In presence of the incarnate, holy God,
 And celebrate his never-ending praise,—
 Duly at morn and night, the multitudes
 Of men redeemed, and angels, all the hosts
 Of glory, join in universal song,
 And pour celestial harmony, from harps
 Above all number, eloquent and sweet,
 Above all thought of melody conceived.
 And now behold the fair inhabitants,
 Delightful sight! from numerous business turn,
 And round and round through all the extent of bliss
 Towards the temple of Jehovah bow,
 And worship reverently before his face!

Pursuits are various here, suiting all tastes,
 Though holy all, and glorifying God.
 Observe yon band pursue the sylvan stream:
 Mounting among the cliffs, they pull the flower,
 Springing as soon as pulled, and, marvelling, pry
 Into its veins, and circulating blood,
 And wondrous mimicry of higher life;
 Admire its colours, fragrance, gentle shape;
 And thence admire the God who made it so—
 So simple, complex, and so beautiful.

Behold yon other band, in airy robes
 Of bliss. They weave the sacred bower of rose
 And myrtle shade, and shadowy verdant bay,
 And laurel, towering high; and round their song,
 The pink and lily bring, and amaranth,
 Narcissus sweet, and jessamine; and bring
 The clustering vine, stooping with flower and fruit,
 The peach and orange, and the sparkling stream,

Warbling with nectar to their lips unasked ;
And talk the while of everlasting love.

On yonder hill, behold another band,
Of piercing, steady, intellectual eye,
And spacious forehead of sublimest thought.
They reason deep of present, future, past ;
And trace effect to cause ; and meditate
On the eternal laws of God, which bind
Circumference to centre ; and survey,
With optic tubes, that fetch remotest stars
Near them, the systems circling round immense
Innumerable. See how,—as he, the sage,
Among the most renowned in days of Time,
Renowned for large, capacious, holy soul,
Demonstrates clearly motion, gravity,
Attraction, and repulsion, still opposed ;
And dips into the deep, original,
Unknown, mysterious elements of things,—
See how the face of every auditor
Expands with admiration of the skill,
Omnipotence, and boundless love of God !

These other, sitting near the tree of life,
In robes of linen flowing white and clean,
Of holiest aspect, of divinest soul,
Angels and men,—into the glory look
Of the Redeeming Love, and turn the leaves
Of man's redemption o'er, the secret leaves,
Which none on earth were found worthy to open
And, as they read the mysteries divine,
The endless mysteries of salvation, wrought
By God's incarnate Son, they humbler bow
Before the Lamb, and glow with warmer love.

These other, there relaxed beneath the shade
Of yon embowering palms, with friendship smile,
And talk of ancient days, and young pursuits,

Of dangers passed, of godly triumphs won,
And sing the legends of their native land,
Less pleasing far than this their Father's house.

Behold that other band, half lifted up
Between the hill and dale, reclined beneath
The shadow of impending rocks, 'mong streams,
And thundering waterfalls, and waving boughs;
That band of countenance sublime and sweet,
Whose eye, with piercing, intellectual ray,
Now beams severe, or now bewildered seems,
Left rolling wild, or fixed in idle gaze,
While Fancy and the Soul are far from home;
These hold the pencil, art divine! and throw
Before the eye remembered scenes of love;
Each picturing to each the hills, and skies,
And treasured stories of the world he left;
Or, gazing on the scenery of heaven,
They dip their hand in colour's native well,
And, on the everlasting canvass, dash
Figures of glory, imagery divine,
With grace and grandeur in perfection knit.

But, whatsoe'er these spirits blessed pursue,
Where'er they go, whatever sights they see
Of glory and bliss through all the tracts of heaven
The centre, still, the figure eminent,
Whither they ever turn, on whom all eyes
Repose with infinite delight, is God,
And his incarnate Son, the Lamb once slain
On Calvary, to ransom ruined men.

None idle here. Look where thou wilt, they all
Are active, all engaged in meet pursuit;
Not happy else. Hence is it that the song
Of heaven is ever new; for daily thus,
And nightly, new discoveries are made
Of God's unbounded wisdom, power, and love,

Which give the understanding larger room,
And swell the hymn with ever-growing praise

Behold they cease ! and every face to God
Turns ; and we pause from high poetic theme,
Not worthy least of being sung in heaven ;
And on unvailed Godhead look from this,
Our oft-frequented hill. He takes the harp,
Nor needs to seek befitting phrase : unsought,
Numbers harmonious roll along the lyre ;
As river in its native bed, they flow
Spontaneous, flowing with the tide of thought.
He takes the harp—a bard of Judah leads,
This night, the boundless song, the bard that once,
When Israel's king was sad and sick to death,
A message brought of fifteen added years.
Before the Throne he stands sublime, in robes
Of glory ; and now his fingers wake the chords
To praise, which we and all in heaven repeat.

Harps of Eternity ! begin the song,
Redeemed and angel harps ! begin to God,
Begin the anthem ever sweet and new,
While I extol Him, holy, just, and good.
Life, beauty, light, intelligence, and love
Eternal, uncreated, infinite !
Unsearchable Jehovah ! God of truth,
Maker, upholder, governor of all !
Thyself unmade, ungoverned, unupheld !
Omnipotent, unchangeable, Great God !
Exhaustless fulness ! giving unimpaired !
Bounding immensity, unspread, unbound !
Highest and best ! beginning, middle, end !
All-seeing Eye ! all-seeing, and unseen !
Hearing, unheard ! all-knowing, and unknown !
Above all praise ! above all height of thought !
Proprietor of immortality !
Glory ineffable ! bliss underived !

Of old thou builtest thy throne on righteousness,
Before the morning Stars their song began,
Or silence heard the voice of praise. Thou laidst
Eternity's foundation stone, and sawst
Life and existence out of Thee begin.
Mysterious more, the more displayed, where still Upon thy glorious Throne thou sitst alone,
Hast sat alone, and shalt for ever sit
Alone, Invisible, Immortal One !
Behind essential brightness unbeheld.
Incomprehensible ! what weight shall weigh,
What measure measure Thee ! What know we more
Of Thee, what need to know, than Thou hast taught,
And bidst us still repeat, at morn and even ?—
God ! Everlasting Father ! Holy One !
Our God, our Father, our Eternal All !
Source whence we came, and whither we return ;
Who made our spirits, who our bodies made,
Who made the heaven, who made the flowery land,
Who made all made, who orders, governs all,
Who walks upon the wind, who holds the wave
In hollow of thy hand, whom thunders wait,
Whom tempests serve, whom flaming fires obey,
Who guides the circuit of the endless years,
And sitst on high, and makest creation's top
Thy footstool, and benoldst, below Thee, all—
All naught, all less than naught, and vanity.
Like transient dust that hovers on the scale,
Ten thousand worlds are scattered in thy breath.
Thou sitst on high, and measurest destinies,
And days, and months, and wide-revolving years ;
And dost according to thy holy will ;
And none can stay thy hand, and none withhold
Thy glory ; for in judgment, Thou, as well
As mercy, art exalted, day and night.
Past, present, future, magnify thy name.
Thy works all praise Thee, all thy angels praise,
Thy saints adore, and on thy altars burn

The fragrant incense of perpetual love.
They praise Thee now, their hearts, their voices praise,
And swell the rapture of the glorious song.
Harp! lift thy voice on high! shout, angels, shout!
And loudest, ye redeemed! glory to God,
And to the Lamb who bought us with his blood,
From every kindred, nation, people, tongue;
And washed, and sanctified, and saved our souls;
And gave us robes of linen pure, and crowns
Of life, and made us kings and priests to God.
Shout back to ancient Time! Sing loud, and wave
Your palms of triumph! sing, Where is thy sting,
O Death! where is thy victory, O Grave!
Thanks be to God, eternal thanks, who gave Us victory through Jesus Christ, our Lord.
Harp! lift thy voice on high! shout, angels, shout!
And loudest, ye redeemed! glory to God,
And to the Lamb, all glory and all praise,
All glory and all praise, at morn and even,
That come and go eternally, and find
Us happy still, and Thee for ever blessed!
Glory to God and to the Lamb. Amen.
For ever, and for evermore. Amen.

And those who stood upon the sea of glass,
And those who stood upon the battlements
And lofty towers of New Jerusalem,
And those who circling stood, bowing afar,
Exalted on the everlasting hills,
Thousands of thousands, thousands infinite,
With voice of boundless love, answered, Amen.
And through Eternity near, and remote,
The worlds, adoring, echoed back; Amen.
And God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost,
The One Eternal, smiled superior bliss!
And every eye, and every face in heaven,
Reflecting and reflected, beamed with love.

Nor did he not, the Virtue new arrived,
From Godhead gain an individual smile,
Of high acceptance, and of welcome high,
And confirmation evermore in good.
Meantime the landscape glowed with holy joy.
Zephyr, with wing dipped from the well of life,
Sporting through Paradise, shed living dews ;
The flowers, the spicy shrubs, the lawns, refreshed,
Breathed their selectest balm, breathed odours, such
As angels love ; and all the trees of heaven,
The cedar, pine, and everlasting oak,
Rejoicing on the mountains, clapped their hands.

COURSE OF TIME

BOOK VII.

As one who meditates at evening tide,
Wandering alone by voiceless solitudes,
And flies in fancy, far beyond the bounds
Of visible and vulgar things, and things
Discovered hitherto, pursuing tracts
As yet untravell'd and unknown, through vast
Of new and sweet imaginings ; if chance
Some airy harp, waked by the gentle sprites
Of twilight, or light touch of sylvan maid,
In soft succession fall upon his ear,
And fill the desert with its heavenly tones ;
He listens intense, and pleased exceedingly,
And wishes it may never stop ; yet when
It stops, grieves not ; but to his former thoughts
With fondest haste returns : so did the Seer,
So did his audience, after worship passed,
And praise in heaven, return to sing, to hear
Of man, not worthy less the sacred lyre,
Or the attentive ear ; and thus the bard,
Not unbesought, again resumed his song.

In customary glory bright, that morn, the Sun
Rose, visiting the earth with light, and heat,
And joy ; and seemed as full of youth and strong

To mount the steep of heaven, as when the Stars
Of morning sung to his first dawn, and night
Fled from his face ; the spacious sky received
Him, blushing as a bride, when on her looked
The bridegroom ; and, spread out beneath his eye,
Earth smiled. Up to his warm embrace, the Dews,
That all night long had wept his absence, flew
The herbs and flowers their fragrant stores unlocked
And gave the wanton breeze that, newly woke,
Revelled in sweets, and from its wings shook health,
A thousand grateful smells ; the joyous woods
Dried in his beams their locks, wet with the drops
Of night ; and all the sons of music sung
Their matin song—from arbour'd bower, the thrush,
Concerting with the lark that hymned on high.
On the green hill the flocks, and in the vale
The herds, rejoiced ; and, light of heart, the hind
Eyed amorously the milk-maid as she passed,
Not heedless, though she looked another way

No sign was there of change. All nature moved
In wonted harmony. Men, as they met,
In morning salutation, praised the day,
And talked of common things. The husbandman
Prepared the soil, and silver-tongued Hope
Promised another harvest. In the streets,
Each wishing to make profit of his neighbour,
Merchants, assembling, spoke of trying times,
Of bankruptcies, and markets glutted full,
Or, crowding to the beach, where, to their ear,
The oath of foreign accent, and the noise
Uncouth of trade's rough sons, made music sweet,
Elate with certain gain,—beheld the bark,
Expected long, enriched with other climes,
Into the harbour safely steer ; or saw,
Parting with many a weeping farewell sad,
And blessing uttered rude, and sacred pledge,
The rich laden carack, bound to distant shore,

And hopefully talked of her coming back,
With richer fraught ; or sitting at the desk,
In calculation deep and intricate
Of loss and profit balancing, relieved,
At intervals, the irksome task, with thought
Of future ease, retired in villa snug.

With subtle look, amid his parchments, sat
The lawyer, weaving his sophistries for court
To meet at mid-day. On his weary couch,
Fat Luxury, sick of the night's debauch,
Lay groaning, fretful at the obtrusive beam,
That through his lattice peeped derisively.
The restless miser had begun again
To count his heaps. Before her toilet stood
The fair, and, as with guileful skill she decked
Her loveliness, thought of the coming ball,
New lovers, or the sweeter nuptial night.
And evil men, of desperate, lawless life,
By oath of deep damnation leagued to ill
Remorselessly, fled from the face of day,
Against the innocent their counsel held,
Plotting unpardonable deeds of blood,
And villanies of fearful magnitude.
Despots, secured behind a thousand bolts,
The workmanship of fear, forged chains for man.
Senates were meeting, statesmen loudly talked
Of national resources, war and peace,
And sagely balanced empires soon to end ;
And faction's jaded minions, by the page
Paid for abuse and oft-repeated lies,
In daily prints, the thorough-fare of news,
For party schemes made interest, under cloak
Of liberty, and right, and public weal.
In holy conclave, bishops spoke of tithes,
And of the awful wickedness of men.
Intoxicate with sceptres, diadems,
And universal rule, and panting hard

For fame, heroes were leading on the brave
To battle. Men, in science deeply read,
And academic theory, foretold
Improvements vast ; and learned sceptics proved
That earth should with eternity endure—
Concluding madly, that there was no God.

No sign of change appeared : to every man
That day seemed as the past. From noontide path
The sun looked gloriously on earth, and all
Her scenes of giddy folly smiled secure,
When suddenly, alas, fair Earth ! the sun
Was wrapped in darkness, and his beams returned
Up to the throne of God, and over all
The earth came night, moonless and starless night.
Nature stood still. The seas and rivers stood,
And all the winds, and every living thing.
The cataract, that, like a giant wroth,
Rushed down impetuously, as seized, at once,
By sudden frost, with all his hoary locks,
Stood still ; and beasts of every kind stood still.
A deep and dreadful silence reigned alone !
Hope died in every breast, and on all men Came fear and trembling. None to his neighbour spoke Husband thought not of wife, nor of her child
The mother, nor friend of friend, nor foe of foe.
In horrible suspense all mortals stood ;
And, as they stood and listened, chariots were heard,
Rolling in heaven. Revealed in flaming fire,
The angel of God appeared in stature vast,
Blazing, and, lifting up his hand on high,
By Him that lives for ever, swore, that Time
Should be no more. Throughout, creation heard
And sighed ; all rivers, lakes, and seas, and woods,
Desponding waste, and cultivated vale,
Wild cave, and ancient hill, and every rock,
Sighed. Earth, arrested in her wonted path,
As ox struck by the lifted axe, when naught

Was feared, in all her entrails deeply groaned.
 A universal crash was heard, as if
 The ribs of Nature broke, and all her dark
 Foundations failed; and deadly paleness set
 On every face of man, and every heart
 Grew chill, and every knee his fellow smote.
 None spoke, none stirred, none wept; for horror held
 All motionless, and fettered every tongue.
 Again, o'er all the nations silence fell:
 And, in the heavens, robed in excessive light,
 That drove the thick of darkness far aside,
 And walked with penetration keen, through all
 The abodes of men, another angel stood,
 And blew the trump of God: Awake, ye dead,
 Be changed, ye living, and put on the garb
 Of immortality. Awake, arise!—
 The God of judgment comes! This said the voice,
 And Silence, from eternity that slept
 Beyond the sphere of the creating Word,
 And all the noise of Time, awakened, heard.
 Heaven heard, and earth, and farthest hell, through all
 Her regions of despair; the ear of Death
 Heard, and the sleep that for so long a night
 Pressed on his leaden eyelids, fled; and all
 The dead awoke, and all the living changed.

Old men, that on their staff, bending, had leaned,
 Crazy and frail, or sat, benumbed with age,
 In weary listlessness, ripe for the grave,
 Felt through their sluggish veins and withered limbs
 New vigour flow; the wrinkled face grew smooth;
 Upon the head, that Time had razored bare,
 Rose bushy locks; and as his son in prime
 Of strength and youth, the aged father stood.
 Changing herself, the mother saw her son
 Grow up, and suddenly put on the form
 Of manhood; and the wretch, that begging sat,

Limbleſs, deformed, at corner of the way,
Unmindful of his crutch, in joint and limb,
Aroſe complete ; and he, that on the bed
Of mortal ſickneſs, worn with ſore diſtreſs,
Lay breathing forth his ſoul to death, felt now
The tide of life and vigour ruſhing back ;
And, looking up, beheld his weeping wife,
And daughter fond, that o'er him, bending, ſtooped
To cloſe his eyes. The frantic madman, too,
In whoſe confuſed brain reaſon had loſt
Her way, long driven at random to and fro,
Grew ſober, and his manacles fell off.
The newly-sheeted corpeſe aroſe, and ſtared
On thoſe who dreſſed it ; and the confined dead,
That men were bearing to the tomb, awoke,
And mingled with their friends ; and armies, which
The trump ſurprized, met in the furious ſhock.
Of battle, ſaw the bleeding ranks, new fallen,
Riſe up at once, and to their ghastly cheeks
Return the ſtream of life in healthy flow ;
And as the anatomist, with all his band
Of rude diſciples, o'er the ſubject hung,
And impolitely hewed his way, through bones
And muſcles of the ſacred human form,
Expoſing barbarouſly to wanton gaze,
The myſteries of nature, joint embraced
His kindred joint, the wounded fleſh grew up,
And ſuddenly the injured man awoke,
Among their hands, and ſtood arrayed complete
In immortality—forgiving ſcarce
The inſult offered to his clay in death.

That was the hour, long wiſhed for by the good
Of univerſal Jubilee to all
The ſons of bondage : from the oppreſſor's hand
The ſcourge of violence fell, and from his back,
Healed of its ſtripes, the burden of the ſlave.

The youth of great religious soul, who sat
 Retired in voluntary loneliness,
 In reverie extravagant now wrapped,
 Or poring now on book of ancient date,
 With filial awe, and dipping oft his pen
 To write immortal things ; to pleasure deaf,
 And joys of common men, working-his way
 With mighty energy, not uninspired,
 Through all the mines of thought ; reckless of pain,
 And weariness, and wasted health, the scoff
 Of Pride, or growl of Envy's hellish brood ;
 While Fancy, voyaged far beyond the bounds
 Of years revealed, heard many a future age,
 With commendation loud, repeat his name,—
 False prophetess ! the day of change was come,—
 Behind the shadow of eternity,
 He saw his visions set of earthly fame,
 For ever set ; nor sighed, while through his veins,
 In lighter current, ran immortal life ;
 His form renewed to undecaying health ;
 To undecaying health, his soul, erewhile
 Not tuned amiss to God's eternal praise.

All men in field and city, by the way,
 On land or sea, lolling in gorgeous hall,
 Or plying at the oar ; crawling in rags
 Obscure, or dazzling in embroidered gold,
 Alone, in companies, at home, abroad ;
 In wanton merriment surprised and taken,
 Or kneeling reverently in act of prayer ;
 Or cursing recklessly, or uttering lies ;
 Or lapping greedily, from slander's cup,
 The blood of reputation ; or between
 Friendships and brotherhoods devising strife ;
 Or plotting to defile a neighbour's bed ;
 In duel met with dagger of revenge ;
 Or casting, on the widow's heritage,
 The eye of covetousness ; or, with full hand, .

On mercy's noiseless errands, unobserved,
Administering ; or meditating fraud
And deeds of horrid barbarous intent ;
In full pursuit of unexperienced hope,
Fluttering along the flowery path of youth ;
Or steeped in disappointment's bitterness,
The fevered cup that guilt must ever drink,
When parched and fainting on the road of ill ;
Beggar and king, the clown and haughty lord ;
The venerable sage, and empty fop ;
The ancient matron, and the rosy bride ;
The virgin chaste, and shrivelled harlot vile ;
The savage fierce, and man of science, mild ;
The good and evil, in a moment, all
Were changed, corruptible to incorrupt,
And mortal to immortal, ne'er to change.

And now, descending from the bowers of heaven,
Soft airs o'er all the earth, spreading, were heard,
And Hallelujahs sweet, the harmony
Of righteous souls that came to repossess
Their long-neglected bodies ; and anon
Upon the ear fell horribly the sound
Of cursing, and the yells of damned despair,
Uttered by felon spirits, that the trump
Had summoned from the burning glooms of hell
To put their bodies on, reserved for wo.

Now, starting up among the living changed,
Appeared innumerable the risen dead.
Each particle of dust was claimed : the turf,
For ages trod beneath the careless foot
Of men, rose, organized in human form ;
The monumental stones were rolled away ;
The doors of death were opened ; and in the dark
And loathsome vault, and silent charnel house,
Moving, were heard the mouldered bones that sought
Their proper place. Instinctive, every soul

Flew to its clayey part : from grass-grown mould,
 The nameless spirit took its ashes up,
 Reanimate ; and, merging from beneath
 The flattered marble, undistinguished rose
 The great, nor heeded once the lavish rhyme,
 And costly pomp of sculptured garnish vain.
 The Memphian mummy, that from age to age,
 Descending, bought and sold a thousand times,
 In hall of curious antiquary stowed,
 Wrapped in mysterious weeds, the wondrous theme
 Of many an erring tale, shook off its rags ;
 And the brown son of Egypt stood beside
 The European, his last purchaser.
 In vale remote, the hermit rose, surprised
 At crowds that rose around him, where he thought
 His slumbers had been single ; and the bard,
 Who fondly covenanted with his friend,
 To lay his bones beneath the sighing bough
 Of some old lonely tree, rising, was pressed
 By multitudes that claimed their proper dust
 From the same spot ; and he, that, richly hearsed,
 With gloomy garniture of purchased wo,
 Embalmed, in princely sepulchre was laid,
 Apart from vulgar men, built nicely round
 And round by the proud heir, who blushed to think
 His father's lordly clay should ever mix
 With peasant dust,—saw by his side awake
 The clown that long had slumbered in his arms.

The family tomb, to whose devouring mouth
 Descended sire and son, age after age,
 In long, unbroken, hereditary line,
 Poured forth, at once, the ancient father rude,
 And all his offspring of a thousand years.
 Refreshed from sweet repose, awoke the man
 Of charitable life,—awoke and sung :
 And from his prison house, slowly and sad,
 As if unsatisfied with holding near

Communion with the earth, the miser drew
His carcass forth, and gnashed his teeth, and howled
Unsolaced by his gold and silver then.
From simple stone in lonely wilderness,
That hoary lay, o'er-lettered by the hand
Of oft-frequenting pilgrim, who had taught
The willow tree to weep, at morn and even,
Over the sacred spot,—the martyr saint,
To song of seraph harp, triumphant, rose,
Well pleased that he had suffered to the death.
“The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
As sung the bard by Nature's hand anointed,
In whose capacious giant numbers rolled
The passions of old Time, fell lumbering down.
All cities fell, and every work of man,
And gave their portion forth of human dust,
Touched by the mortal finger of decay.
Tree, herb, and flower, and every fowl of heaven,
And fish, and animal, the wild and tame,
Forthwith dissolving, crumbled into dust.

Alas! ye sons of strength, ye ancient oaks,
Ye holy pines, ye elms, and cedars tall,
Like towers of God, far seen on Carmel mount,
Or Lebanon, that waved your boughs on high,
And laughed at all the winds,—your hour was come!
Ye laurels, ever green, and bays, that wont
To wreath the patriot and the poet's brow;
Ye myrtle bowers, and groves of sacred shade,
Where Music ever sung, and Zephyr fanned
His airy wing, wet with the dews of life,
And Spring for ever smiled, the fragrant haunt
Of Love, and Health, and ever-dancing Mirth,— Alas! how suddenly your verdure died,
And ceased your minstrelsy, to sing no more!
Ye flowers of beauty, penciled by the hand
Of God, who annually renewed your birth,
To gem the virgin robes of Nature chaste,

Ye smiling-featured daughters of the Sun !
Fairer than queenly bride, by Jordan's stream
Leading your gentle lives, retired, unseen ;
Or on the sainted cliffs on Zion hill
Wandering, and holding with the heavenly dew,
In holy revelry, your nightly loves,
Watched by the stars, and offering, every morn,
Your incense grateful both to God and man ;—
Ye lovely gentle things, alas ! no spring
Shall ever wake you now ! ye withered all,
All in a moment drooped, and on your roots
The grasp of everlasting winter seized !
Children of song, ye birds that dwelt in air,
And stole your notes from angels' lyres, and first
In levée of the morn, with eulogy
Ascending, hailed the advent of the dawn ;
Or, roosted on the pensive evening bough,
In melancholy numbers, sung the day
To rest ;—your little wings, failing, dissolved,
In middle air, and on your harmony
Perpetual silence fell ! Nor did his wing,
That sailed in track of gods sublime, and fanned
The sun, avail the eagle then ; quick smitten,
His plumage withered in meridian height,
And, in the valley, sunk the lordly bird,
A clod of clay. Before the ploughman fell
His steers, and in midway the furrow left.
The shepherd saw his flocks around him turn
To dust. Beneath his rider fell the steed
To ruins : and the lion in his den
Grew cold and stiff, or in the furious chase, .
With timid fawn, that scarcely missed his paws.
On earth no living thing was seen but men,
New-changed, or rising from the opening tomb.

Athens, and Rome, and Babylon, and Tyre,
And she that sat on Thames, queen of the seas,
Cities once famed on earth, convulsed through all

Their mighty ruins, threw their millions forth.
Palmyra's dead, where Desolation sat,
From age to age, well pleased in solitude,
And silence, save when traveller's foot, or owl
Of night, or fragment mouldering down to dust,
Broke faintly on his desert ear,—awoke.
And Salem, holy city, where the Prince
Of Life, by death, a second life secured
To man, and with him, from the grave, redeemed,
A chosen number brought, to retinue
His great ascent on high, and give sure pledge,
That death was foiled,—her generations, now,
Gave up, of kings and priests, and Pharisees :
Nor even the Sadducee, who fondly said,
No morn of resurrection e'er should come,
Could sit the summons ; to his ear did reach
The trumpet's voice, and, ill prepared for what
He oft had proved should never be, he rose
Reluctantly, and on his face began
To burn eternal shame. The cities, too,
Of old ensepulchred beneath the flood,
Or deeply slumbering under mountains huge,
That Earthquake, servant of the wrath of God,
Had on their wicked population thrown ;
And marts of busy trade, long ploughed and sown,
By history unrecorded, or the song .
Of bard, yet not forgotten their wickedness,
In heaven ;—poured forth their ancient multitudes,
That vainly wished their sleep had never broke.
From battle-fields, where men by millions met
To murder each his fellow, and make sport
To kings and heroes, things long since forgot,
Innumerable armies rose, unbannered all,
Unpanoplied, unpraised ; nor found a prince,
Or general, then, to answer for their crimes.
The hero's slaves, and all the scarlet troops
Of antichrist, and all that fought for rule,—
Many high-sounding names, familiar once

On earth, and praised exceedingly, but now
 Familiar most in hell, their dungeon fit,
 Where they may war eternally with God's Almighty thunderbolts, and win them pangs
 Of keener woe, ~~as~~ saw, as they sprung to life,
 The widow and the orphan ready stand,
 And helpless virgin, ravished in their sport,
 To plead against them at the coming Doom.
 The Roman legions, boasting once, how loud!
 Of liberty, and fighting bravely o'er
 The torrid and the frigid zone, the sands
 Of burning Egypt, and the frozen hills
 Of snowy Albion, to make mankind
 Their thralls, untaught that he who made or kept
 A slave could ne'er himself be truly free,—
 That morning, gathered up their dust, which lay
 Wide-scattered over half the globe; nor saw
 Their eagled banners then. Sennacherib's hosts,
 Embattled once against the sons of God,
 With insult bold, quick as the noise of mirth
 And revelry, sunk in their drunken camp,
 When death's dark angel, at the dead of night,
 Their vitals touched, and made each pulse stand still,— Awoke in sorrow; and the multitudes
 Of Gog, and all the fated crew that warred
 Against the chosen saints, in the last days,
 At Armageddon, when the Lord came down,
 Mustering his host on Israel's holy hills,
 And, from the treasures of his snow and hail,
 Rained terror, and confusion rained, and death,
 And gave to all the beasts, and fowls of heaven,
 Of captains' flesh, and blood of men of war,
 A feast of many days,—revived, and, doomed
 To second death, stood in Hamonah's vale.

Nor yet did all that fell in battle rise,
 That day, to wailing. Here and there were seen
 The patriot bands that from his guilty throne

The despot tore, unshackled nations, made
The prince respect the people's laws, drove back
The wave of proud invasion, and rebuked
The frantic fury of the multitude,
Rebelled, and fought and fell for liberty
Right understood, true heroes in the speech
Of heaven, where words express the thoughts of him
Who speaks ; not undistinguished these, though few,
That morn, arose, with joy and melody.

All woke—the north and south gave up their dead
The caravan, that in mid-journey sunk,
With all its merchandise, expected long,
And long forgot, ingulfed beneath the tide
Of death, that the wild Spirit of the winds
Swept, in his wrath, along the wilderness,
In the wide desert,—woke, and saw all calm
Around, and populous with risen men .
Nor of his relics thought the pilgrim then,
Nor merchant of his silks and spiceries.

And he, far voyaging from home and friends,
Too curious, with a mortal eye to peep
Into the secrets of the Pole, forbid
By nature, whom fierce Winter seized, and froze
To death, and wrapped in winding sheet of ice,
And sung the requiem of his shivering ghost,
With the loud organ of his mighty winds,
And on his memory threw the snow of ages,—
Felt the long-absent warmth of life return,
And shook the frozen mountain from his bed.

All rose, of every age, of every crime.
Adam and Eve, the great progenitors
Of all mankind, fair as they seemed, that morn,
When first they met in Paradise, unfallen,
Uncursed,—from ancient slumber broke, where once
Euphrates rolled his stream ; and by them stood,

In stature equal, and in soul as large,
Their last posterity, though poets sung,
And sages proved them far degenerate.

Blessed sight! not unobserved by angels, nor Unpraised,—that day, 'mong men of every tribe
And hue, from those who drank of Tenglio's stream,
To those who nightly saw the Hermit Cross,
In utmost south retired,—rising, were seen
The fair and ruddy sons of Albion's land,
How glad!—not those who travelled far and sailed,
To purchase human flesh, or wreath the yoke
Of vassalage on savage liberty,
Or suck large fortune from the sweat of slaves;
Or, with refined knavery, to cheat,
Politely villanous, untutored men
Out of their property; or gather shells,
Intaglios rude, old pottery, and store
Of mutilated gods of stone, and scraps
Of barbarous epitaphs defaced, to be Among the learned the theme of warm debate,
And infinite conjecture, sagely wrong!—
But those, denied to self, to earthly fame
Denied, and earthly wealth; who kindred left,
And home, and ease, and all the cultured joys,
Conveniences, and delicate delights,
Of ripe society; in the great cause
Of man's salvation, greatly valorous,—
The warriors of Messiah, messengers
Of peace, and light, and life, whose eye, unscaled,
Saw up the path of immortality,
Far into bliss, saw men, immortal men,
Wide wandering from the way; eclipsed in night,
Dark, moonless, moral night; living like beasts,
Like beasts descending to the grave, untaught
Of life to come, unsanctified, unsaved;
Who, strong, though seeming weak; who, warlike, though

Unarmed with bow and sword; appearing mad;
Though sounder than the schools alone e'er made:
The doctor's head; devote to God and truth,
And sworn to man's eternal weal; beyond
Repentance sworn, or thought of turning back;
And casting far behind all earthly care,
All countryships, all national regards,
And enmities, all narrow bourns of state
And selfish policy; beneath their feet
Treading all fear of opposition down,
All fear of danger, of reproach all fear,
And evil tongues;—went forth, from Britain went
A noiseless band of heavenly soldiery,
From out the armory of God equipped,
Invincible, to conquer sin, to blow
The trump of freedom in the despot's ear,
To tell the bruted slave his manhood high,
His birthright liberty, and in his hand
To put the writ of manumission, signed
By God's own signature; to drive away
From earth the dark, infernal legionry
Of superstition, ignorance, and hell;
High on the pagan hills, where Satan sat,
Encamped, and o'er the subject kingdoms threw
Perpetual night, to plant Immanuel's cross,
The ensign of the Gospel, blazing round
Immortal truth; and, in the wilderness
Of human waste, to sow eternal life;
And from the rock, where Sin, with horrid yell,
Devoured its victims unredeemed, to raise
The melody of grateful hearts to Heaven:
To falsehood, truth; to pride, humility;
To insult, meekness; pardon, to revenge;
To stubborn prejudice, unwearied zeal;
To censure, unaccusing minds; to stripes
Long suffering; to want of all things, hope;
To death, assured faith of life to come;—
Opposing. These, great worthies, rising, shone

Through all the tribes and nations of mankind,
Like Hesper, glorious once among the stars
Of twilight, and around them, flocking, stood,
Arrayed in white, the people they had saved.

Great Ocean ! too, that morning, thou the call
Of restitution heardst, and reverently
To the last trumpet's voice, in silence, listened.
Great Ocean ! strongest of creation's sons,
Unconquerable, unrepoused, untired,
That rolled the wild, profound, eternal bass,
In Nature's anthem, and made music, such
As pleased the ear of God ! original,
Unmarred, unfaded work of Deity,
And unburlesqued by mortal's puny skill,
From age to age enduring and unchanged,
Majestical, inimitable, vast,
Loud uttering satire, day and night, on each
Succeeding race, and little pompous work
Of man !—unfallen, religious, holy Sea !
Thou bowedst thy glorious head to none, fearedst none,
Heardst none, to none didst honour, but to God
Thy Maker, only worthy to receive
Thy great obeisance ! Undiscovered Sea !
Into thy dark, unknown, mysterious caves,
And secret haunts, unfathomably deep
Beneath all visible retired, none went,
And came again, to tell the wonders there.
Tremendous Sea ! what time thou lifted up
Thy waves on high, and with thy winds and storms
Strange pastime took, and shook thy mighty sides
Indignantly,—the pride of navies fell ;
Beyond the arm of help, unheard, unseen,
Sunk friend and foe, with all their wealth and war ;
And on thy shores, men of a thousand tribes,
Polite and barbarous, trembling stood, amazed,
Confounded, terrified, and thought vast thoughts
Of ruin, boundlessness, omnipotence,

Infinitude, eternity ; and thought
And wondered still, and grasped, and grasped, and grasped

Again ; beyond her reach, exerting all
The soul, to take thy great idea in,
To comprehend incomprehensible ;
And wondered more, and felt their littleness
Self-purifying, unpolluted Sea !
Lover unchangeable, thy faithful breast
For ever heaving to the lovely Moon,
That, like a shy and holy virgin, robed
In saintly white, walked nightly in the heavens,
And to the everlasting serenade
Gave gracious audience ; nor was wooed in vain.
That morning, thou, that slumbered not before,
Nor slept, great Ocean ! laid thy waves to rest,
And hushed thy mighty minstrelsy. No breath
Thy deep composure stirred, no fin, no oar ;
Like beauty newly dead, so calm, so still,
So lovely, thou, beneath the light that fell
From angel-chariots, sentinelled on high,
Reposed, and listened, and saw thy living change,
Thy dead arise. Charybdis listened, and Scylla ;
And savage Euxine, on the Thracian beach,
Lay motionless : and every battle-ship
Stood still, and every ship of merchandise,
And all that sailed, of every name, stood still.
Even as the ship of war, full-fledged, and swift,
Like some fierce bird of prey, bore on her foe,
Opposing with as fell intent, the wind
Fell withered from her wings that idly hung ;
The stormy bullet, by the cannon thrown
Uncivilly against the heavenly face
Of men, half sped, sunk harmlessly, and all
Her loud, uncircumcised, tempestuous crew,
How ill prepared to meet their God ! were changed,
Unchangeable—the pilot at the helm
Was changed, and the rough captain, while he mouthed

The huge, enormous oath. The fisherman,
That in his boat, expectant, watched his lines,
Or mended on the shore his net, and sung,
Happy in thoughtlessness, some careless air,
Heard Time depart, and felt the sudden change.
In solitary deep, far out from land,
Or steering from the port with many a cheer,
Or while returning from long voyage, fraught
With lusty wealth, rejoicing to have escaped
The dangerous main, and plagues of foreign climes,—
The merchant quaffed his native air, refreshed ;
And saw his native hills, in the sun's light,
Serenely rise ; and thought of meetings glad,
And many days of ease and honour, spent
Among his friends—unwarned man ! even then,
The knell of Time broke on his reverie,
And, in the twinkling of an eye, his hopes,
All earthly, perished all. As sudden rose,
From out their watery beds, the Ocean's dead,
Renewed ; and, on the unstirring billows, stood,
From pole to pole, thick covering all the sea—
Of every nation blent, and every age.

Wherever slept one grain of human dust,
Essential organ of a human soul,
Wherever tossed, obedient to the call
Of God's omnipotence, it hurried on
To meet its fellow particles, revived,
Rebuilt, in union indestructible.
No atom of his spoils remained to Death.
From his strong arm, by stronger arm released,
Immortal now in soul and body both,
Beyond his reach, stood all the sons of men,
And saw, behind, his valley lie, unfeared.

O Death ! with what an eye of desperate lust,
From out thy emptied vaults, thou then didst look
After the risen multitudes of all

Mankind ! Ah ! thou hadst been the terror long,
And murderer, of all of woman born.
None could escape thee ! In thy dungeon house,
Where darkness dwelt, and putrid loathsomeness,
And fearful silence, villanously still,
And all of horrible and deadly name,—
Thou satst, from age to age, insatiate,
And drank the blood of men, and gorged their flesh,
And with thy iron teeth didst grind their bones
To powder, treading out, beneath thy feet,
Their very names and memories. The blood
Of nations could not slake thy parched throat.
No bribe could buy thy favour for an hour,
Or mitigate thy ever-cruel rage
For human prey. Gold, beauty, virtue, youth,
Even helpless, swaddled innocence, failed
To soften thy heart of stone ! the infant's blood
Pleased well thy taste, and, while the mother wept,
Bereaved by thee, lonely and waste in wo,
Thy ever-grinding jaws devoured her too.

Each son of Adam's family beheld,
Where'er he turned, whatever path of life
He trode, thy goblin form before him stand,
Like trusty old assassin, in his aim
Steady and sure as eye of destiny,
With sithe, and dart, and strength invincible,
Equipped, and ever menacing his life.
He turned aside, he drowned himself in sleep,
In wine, in pleasure ; travelled, voyaged, sought
Receipts for health from all he met ; betook
To business, speculate, retired ; returned
Again to active life, again retired ;
Returned, retired again ; prepared to die,
Talked of thy nothingness, conversed of life
To come, laughed at his fears, filled up the cup,
Drank deep, refrained ; filled up, refrained again ;
Planned, built him round with splendour, won applause,

Made large alliances with men and things,
Read deep in science and philosophy,
To fortify his soul ; heard lectures prove
The present ill, and future good ; observed
His pulse beat regular, extended hope ;
Thought, dissipated thought, and thought again ;
Indulged, abstained, and tried a thousand schemes,
To ward thy blow, or hide thee from his eye ;
But still thy gloomy terrors, dipped in sin,
Before him frowned, and withered all his joy.
Still, feared and hated thing ! thy ghostly shape
Stood in his avenues of fairest hope ;
Unmannerly and uninvited, crept
Into his haunts of most select delight.
Still, on his halls of mirth, and banqueting,
And revelry, thy shadowy hand was seen
Writing thy name of—Death. Vile worm, that gnawed
The root of all his happiness terrene, the gall
Of all his sweet, the thorn of every rose
Of earthly bloom, cloud of his noon-day sky,
Frost of his spring, sigh of his loudest laugh,
Dark spot on every form of loveliness,
Rank smell amidst his rarest spiceries,
Harsh dissonance of all his harmony,
Reserve of every promise, and the if
Of all to-morrows !—now, beyond thy vale,
Stood all the ransomed multitude of men,
Immortal all : and, in their visions, saw
Thy visage grim no more. Great payment day !
Of all thou ever conquered, none was left
In thy unpeopled realms, so populous once.
He, at whose girdle hang the keys of death,
And life, not bought but with the blood of Him
Who wears, the eternal Son of God, that morn,
Dispelled the cloud that sat so long, so thick,
So heavy o'er thy vale ; opened all thy doors,
Unopened before ; and set thy prisoners free.
Vain was resistance, and to follow vain.

In thy unveiled caves, and solitudes
Of dark and dismal emptiness, thou satst,
Rolling thy hollow eyes, disabled thing !
Helpless, despised, unpitied, and unfear'd,
Like some fallen tyrant, chained in sight of all
The people ; from thee dropped thy pointless dart,
Thy terrors withered all, thy ministers,
Annihilated, fell before thy face,
And on thy maw eternal Hunger seized.

Nor yet, sad monster ! wast thou left alone.
In thy dark dens some phantoms still remained,— Ambition, Vanity, and earthly Fame,
Swollen Ostentation, meagre Avarice,
Mad Superstition, smooth Hypocrisy,
And Bigotry intolerant, and Fraud,
And wilful Ignorance, and sullen Pride,
Hot Controversy, and the subtle ghost
Of vain Philosophy, and worldly Hope,
And sweet-lipped, hollow-hearted Flattery.
All these, great personages once on earth,
And not unfollowed, nor unpraised, were left,
Thy ever-unredeemed, and with thee driven
To Erebus, through whose uncheered wastes,
Thou mayest chase them, with thy broken sinthe
Fetching vain strokes, to all eternity,
Unsatisfied, as men who, in the days
Of Time, their unsubstantial forms pursued.

COURSE OF TIME

BOOK VIII.

REANIMATED, now, and dressed in robes
Of everlasting wear, in the last pause
Of expectation, stood the human race,
Buoyant in air, or covering shore and sea,
From east to west, thick as the eared grain,
In golden autumn waved, from field to field,
Profuse, by Nilus' fertile wave, while yet
Earth was, and men were in her valleys seen.

Still, all was calm in heaven. Nor yet appeared
The Judge, nor aught appeared, save here and there
On wing of golden plumage borne at will,
A curious angel, that from out the skies
Now glanced a look on man, and then retired.
As calm was all on earth. The ministers
Of God's unsparing vengeance, waited, still Unbid. No sun, no moon, no star, gave light.
A blessed and holy radiance, travelled far
From day original, fell on the face
Of men, and every countenance revealed;
Unpleasant to the bad, whose visages
Had lost all guise of seeming happiness,
With which on earth such pains they took to hide
Their misery in. On their grim features, now

The plain, unvisored index of the soul,
The true, untampered witness of the heart,
No smile of hope, no look of vanity
Beseeching for applause, was seen ; no scowl
Of self-important, all-despising pride,
That once upon the poor and needy fell,
Like winter on the unprotected flower,
Withering their very being to decay.
No jesting mirth, no wanton leer, was seen,
No sullen lower of braggart fortitude
Defying pain, nor anger, nor revenge ;
But fear instead, and terror, and remorse ;
And chief, one passion, to its answering, shaped
The features of the damned, and in itself
Summed all the rest,—unutterable despair.

What on the righteous shone of foreign light,
Was all redundant day, they needed not.
For as, by nature, Sin is dark, and loves
The dark, still hiding from itself in gloom,
And in the darkest hell is still itself
The darkest hell, and the severest woe,
Where all is woe ; so Virtue, ever fair !
Doth by a sympathy as strong as binds
Two equal hearts, well pleased in wedded love,
For ever seek the light, for ever seek
All fair and lovely things, all beauteous forms,
All images of excellence and truth ;
And from her own essential being, pure
As flows the fount of life that spirits drink,
Doth to herself give light, nor from her beams,
As native to her as her own existence,
Can be divorced, nor of her glory shorn,—
Which now, from every feature of the just,
Divinely rayed, yet not from all alike ;
In measure, equal to the soul's advance
In virtue, was the lustre of the face.

It was a strange assembly : none, of all
 That congregation vast, could recollect
 Aught like it in the history of man. .
 No badge of outward state was seen, no mark
 Of age, or rank, or national attire,
 Or robe professional, or air of trade.
 Untitled, stood the man that once was called
 My lord, unserved, unfollowed ; and the man
 Of tithes, right reverend in the dialect
 Of Time addressed, ungowned, unbeneficed,
 Uncorpulent ; nor now, from him who bore,
 With ceremonious gravity of step,
 And face of borrowed holiness o'erlaid,
 The ponderous book before the awful priest,
 And opened and shut the pulpit's sacred gates
 In style of wonderful observancy
 And reverence excessive, in the beams
 Of sacerdotal splendour lost, or if Observed, comparison ridiculous scarce
 Could save the little, pompous, humble man
 From laughter of the people,—not from him
 Could be distinguished then the priest untithed.
 None levees held, those marts where princely smiles
 Were sold for flattery, and obeisance mean,
 Unfit from man to man ; none came or went,
 None wished to draw attention, none was poor,
 None rich, none young, none old, deformed none ;
 None sought for place or favour, none had aught
 To give, none could receive, none ruled, none served
 No king, no subject was ; unscutcheoned all,
 Uncrowned, unplumed, unhelmed, unpedigreed,
 Unlaced, uncoroneted, unbestarred.
 Nor countryman was seen, nor citizen ;
 Republican, nor humble advocate
 Of monarchy ; nor idol worshipper,
 Nor beaded papist, nor Mahometan ;
 Episcopalian none, nor presbyter ;
 Nor Lutheran, nor Calvinist, nor Jew,

Nor Greek, nor sectary of any name.
Nor, of those persons, that loud title bore,
Most high and mighty, most magnificent,
Most potent, most august, most worshipful,
Most eminent, words of great pomp, that pleased
The ear of vanity, and made the worms
Of earth mistake themselves for gods,—could one
Be seen, to claim these phrases obsolete.

It was a congregation vast of men,
Of unappendaged and unvarnished men,
Of plain, unceremonious human beings,
Of all but moral character bereaved.
His vice or virtue, now, to each remained,
Alone. All else, with their grave-clothes, men had Put off, as badges worn by mortal, not
Immortal man ; alloy that could not pass
The scrutiny of Death's refining fires ;
Dust of Time's wheels, by multitudes pursued
Of fools that shouted—Gold ! fair painted fruit,
At which the ambitious idiot jumped, while men
Of wiser mood immortal harvests reaped ;
Weeds of the human garden, sprung from earth's Adulterate soil, unfit to be transplanted,
Though by the moral botanist, too oft,
For plants of heavenly seed mistaken and nursed ,
Mere chaff, that Virtue, when she rose from earth
And waved her wings to gain her native heights,
Drove from the verge of being, leaving Vice
No mask to hide her in ; base-born of Time,
In which God claimed no property, nor had Prepared for them a place in heaven or hell.
Yet did these vain distinctions, now forgot,
Bulk largely in the filmy eye of Time,
And were exceeding fair, and lured to death
Immortal souls. But they were passed, for all
Ideal now was passed ; reality
Alone remained ; and good and bad, redeemed

And unredeemed, distinguished sole the sons
Of men. Each, to his proper self reduced,
And undisguised, was what his seeming showed.

The man of earthly fame, whom common men
Made boast of having seen, who scarce could pass
The ways of Time, for eager crowds that pressed
To do him homage, and pursued his ear
With endless praise, for deeds unpraised above,
And yoked their brutal natures, honoured much
To drag his chariot on,—unnoticed stood,
With none to praise him, none to flatter there.

Blushing and dumb, that morning, too, was seen
The mighty reasoner, he who deeply searched
The origin of things, and talked of good
And evil, much, of causes and effects,
Of mind and matter, contradicting all
That went before him, and himself, the while,
The laughing-stock of angels; diving far
Below his depth, to fetch reluctant proof,
That he himself was mad and wicked too,
When, proud and ignorant man, he meant to prove
That God had made the universe amiss,
And sketched a better plan. Ah! foolish sage!
He could not trust the word of Heaven, nor see
The light which from the Bible blazed,—that lamp
Which God threw from his palace down to earth,
To guide his wandering children home,—yet leaned
His cautious faith on speculations wild,
And visionary theories absurd,
Prodigiously, deliriously absurd,
Compared with which, the most erroneous flight
That poet ever took when warm with wine,
Was moderate conjecturing. he saw,
Weighed in the balance of eternity,
His lore how light, and wished, too late, that he Had staid at home, and learned to know himself,

And done, what peasants did, disputed less,
And more obeyed. Nor less he grieved his time
Misspent, the man of curious research,
Who travelled far through lands of hostile clime
And dangerous inhabitant, to fix
The bounds of empires passed, and ascertain
The burial-place of heroes, never born ;
Despising present things, and future too,
And groping in the dark unsearchable
Of finished years,—by dreary ruins seen,
And dungeons damp, and vaults of ancient waste,
With spade and mattock, delving deep to raise
Old vases and dismembered idols rude ;
With matchless perseverance, spelling out
Words without sense. Poor man ! he clapped his hands,
Enraptured, when he found a manuscript
That spoke of pagan gods ; and yet forgot
The God who made the sea and sky, alas !
Forgot that trifling was a sin ; stored much
Of dubious stuff, but laid no treasure up
In heaven ; on mouldered columns scratched his name,
But ne'er inscribed it in the book of life.

Unprofitable seemed, and unapproved,
That day, the sullen, self-vindictive life
Of the recluse. With crucifixes hung,
And spells, and rosaries, and wooden saints,
Like one of reason reft, he journeyed forth,
In show of miserable poverty,
And chose to beg,—as if to live on sweat
Of other men, had promised great reward ;
On his own flesh inflicted cruel wounds,
With naked foot embraced the ice, by the hour
Said mass, and did most grievous penance vile ;
And then retired to drink the filthy cup
Of secret wickedness, and fabricate
All lying wonders, by the untaught received
For revelations new. Deluded wretch !

Did he not know, that the most Holy One
Required a cheerful life and holy heart?

Most disappointed in that crowd of men,
The man of subtle controversy stood,
The bigot theologian, in minute
Distinctions skilled, and doctrines unreduced
To practice; in debate how loud! how long.
How dexterous! in Christian love how cold!
His vain conceits were orthodox alone.
The immutable and heavenly truth, revealed
By God, was naught to him, He had an art,
A kind of hellish charm, that made the lips
Of truth speak falsehood, to his liking turned
The meaning of the text, made trifles seem
The marrow of salvation; to a word,
A name, a sect, that sounded in the ear,
And to the eye so many letters showed,
But did no more,—gave value infinite;
Proved still his reasoning best, and his belief,
Though propped on fancies wild as madmen's dreams,
Most rational, most scriptural, most sound;
With mortal heresy denouncing all
Who in his arguments could see no force.
On points of faith, too fine for human sight,
And never understood in heaven, he placed
His everlasting hope, undoubting placed,
And died; and, when he opened his ear, prepared
To hear, beyond the grave, the minstrelsy
Of bliss, he heard, alas! the wail of wo.
He proved all creeds false but his own, and found,
At last, his own most false—most false, because
He spent his time to prove all others so.

O love-destroying, cursed Bigotry!
Cursed in heaven, but cursed more in hell,
Where millions curse thee, and must ever curse!
Religion's most abhorred! perdition's most

Forlorn ! God's most abandoned ! hell's most damned !
The infidel, who turned his impious war
Against the walls of Zion, on the rock
Of ages built, and higher than the clouds,
Sinned, and received his due reward ; but she Within her walls sinned more. Of Ignorance
Begot, her daughter, Persecution, walked
The earth, from age to age, and drank the blood
Of saints, with horrid relish drank the blood
Of God's peculiar children, and was drunk,
And in her drunkenness dreamed of doing good.
The supplicating hand of innocence,
That made the tiger mild, and in his wrath
The lion pause, the groans of suffering most Severe, were naught to her ; she laughed at groans :
No music pleased her more, and no repast
So sweet to her, as blood of men redeemed
By blood of Christ. Ambition's self, though mad,
And nursed on human gore, with her compared,
Was merciful. Nor did she always rage.
She had some hours of meditation, set
Apart, wherein she to her study went,
The Inquisition, model most complete
Of perfect wickedness, where deeds were done, --
Deeds ! let them ne'er be named, — and sat and planned
Deliberately, and with most musing pains,
How, to extremest thrill of agony,
The flesh, and blood, and souls of holy men,
Her victims, might be wrought ; and when she saw
New tortures of her labouring fancy born,
She leaped for joy, and made great haste to try
Their force — well pleased to hear a deeper groan.

But now her day of mirth was passed, and come
Her day to weep, her day of bitter groans,
And sorrow unbemoaned, the day of grief
And wrath retributory poured in full
On all that took her part. The man of sin,

The mystery of iniquity, her friend
 Sincere, who pardoned sin, unpardoned still,
 And in the name of God blasphemed, and did
 All wicked, all abominable things,
 Most abject stood, that day, by devils hissed,
 And by the looks of those he murdered, scorched ;
 And plagued with inward shame, that on his cheek
 Burned, while his votaries, who left the earth,
 Secure of bliss, around him, undeceived,
 Stood, undeceivable till then ; and knew,
 Too late, him fallible, themselves accursed,
 And all their passports and certificates,
 A lie : nor disappointed more, nor more
 Ashamed, the Mussulman, when he saw, gnash
 His teeth and wail, whom he expected judge.
 All these were damned for bigotry, were damned,
 Because they thought, that they alone served God,
 And served him most, when most they disobeyed.

Of those forlorn and sad, thou mightst have mark'd,
 In number most innumerable, stand
 The indolent ; too lazy these to make Inquiry for themselves, they stuck their faith
 To some well-fatted priest, with offerings bribed
 To bring them oracles of peace, and take Into his management all the concerns
 Of their eternity ; managed how well
 They knew, that day, and might have sooner known,
 That the commandment was, Search, and believe
 In Me, and not in man ; who leans on him
 Leans on a broken reed, that will pierce
 The trusted side. I am the way, the truth,
 The life, alone, and there is none besides.

This did they read, and yet refused to search,
 To search what easily was found, and, found,
 Of price uncountable. Most foolish, they Thought God with ignorance pleased, and blinded faith,

That took not root in reason, purified
With holy influence of his Spirit pure.
So, on they walked, and stumbled in the light
Of noon, because they would not open their eyes
Effect how sad of sloth ! that made them risk
Their piloting to the eternal shore,
To one who could mistake the lurid flash
Of hell for heaven's true star, rather than bow
The knee, and by one fervent word obtain
His guidance sure, who calls the stars by name
They prayed by proxy, and at second hand
Believed, and slept, and put repentance off,
Until the knock of death awoke them, when They saw their ignorance both, and him they paid
To bargain of their souls 'twixt them and God,
Fled, and began repentance without end.
How did they wish, that morning, as they stood
With blushing covered, they had for themselves
The Scripture searched, had for themselves believed,
And made acquaintance with the Judge ere then !

Great day of termination to the joys
Of sin ! to joys that grew on mortal boughs,
On trees whose seed fell not from heaven, whose top
Reached not above the clouds. From such, alone,
The epicure took all his meals. In choice
Of morsels for the body, nice he was,
And scrupulous, and knew all wines by smell
Or taste, and every composition knew
Of cookery ; but grossly drank, unskilled,
The cup of spiritual pollution up,
That sickened his soul to death, while yet his eyes
Stood out with fat. His feelings were his guide.
He ate, and drank, and slept, and took all joys,
Forbid and unforbid, as impulse urged
Or appetite, nor asked his reason why.
He said, he followed Nature still, but lied ;
For she was temperate and chaste, he full

Of wine and all adultery ; her face
Was holy, most unholy his ; her eye
Was pure, his shot unhallowed fire ; her lips
Sang praise to God, his uttered oaths profane ;
Her breath was sweet, his rank with foul debauch.
Yet pleaded he a kind and feeling heart,
Even when he left a neighbour's bed defiled.
Like migratory fowls, that flocking sailed
From isle to isle, steering by sense alone,
Whither the clime their liking best beseeemed ;
So he was guided, so he moved through good
And evil, right and wrong, but, ah ! to fate
All different : they slept in dust, unpained ;
He rose, that day, to suffer endless pain.

Cured of his unbelief, the sceptic stood,
Who doubted of his being while he breathed,
Than whom glossography itself, that spoke
Huge folios of nonsense every hour,
And left, surrounding every page, its marks
Of prodigal stupidity, scarce more
Of folly raved. The tyrant too, who sat
In grisly council, like a spider couched,
With ministers of locust countenance,
And made alliances to rob mankind,
And holy termed,—for still, beneath a name
Of pious sound, the wicked sought to veil
Their crimes,—forgetful of his right divine,
Trembled, and owned oppression was of hell ;
Nor did the uncivil robber, who unpursed
The traveller on the high-way, and cut
His throat, anticipate severer doom.

In that assembly there was one, who, while
Beneath the sun, aspired to be a fool ;
In different ages known by different names,
Not worth repeating here. Be this enough
With scrupulous care exact, he walked the rounds

Of fashionable duty, laughed when sad ;
When merry, wept ; deceiving, was deceived ;
And flattering, flattered. Fashion was his god.
Obsequiously he fell before its shrine,
In slavish plight, and trembled to offend.
If graveness suited, he was grave ; if else,
He travailed sorely, and made brief repose,
To work the proper quantity of sin.
In all submissive, to its changing shape,
Still changing, girded he his vexed frame,
And laughter made to men of sounder head.
Most circumspect he was of bows, and nods,
And salutations ; and most seriously
And deeply meditated he of dress ;
And in his dreams saw lace and ribbons fly.
His soul was naught ; he damaged it, every day,
Unceremoniously. Oh ! fool of fools !
Pleased with a painted smile, he fluttered on,
Like fly of gaudy plume, by fashion driven,
As faded leaves by Autumn's wind, till Death
Put forth his hand, and drew him out of sight.
Oh ! fool of fools ! polite to man ; to God
Most rude : yet had he many rivals, who,
Age after age, great striving made to be Ridiculous, and to forget they had
Immortal souls, that day remembered well.

As rueful stood his other half, as wan
Of cheek. Small her ambition was, but strange.
The distaff, needle, all domestic cares,
Religion, children, husband, home, were things
She could not bear the thought of, bitter drugs
That sickened her soul. The house of wanton mirth
And revelry, the mask, the dance, she loved,
And in their service soul and body spent
Most cheerfully. A little admiration,
Or true or false, no matter which, pleased her,
And o'er the wreck of fortune lost, and health,

And peace, and an eternity of bliss
Lost, made her sweetly smile. She was convinced,
That God had made her greatly out of taste ;
And took much pains to make herself anew.
Bedaubed with paint, and hung with ornaments
Of curious selection, gaudy toy !
A show unpaid for, paying to be seen !
As beggar by the way, most humbly asking
The alms of public gaze,—she went abroad.
Folly admired, and indication gave
Of envy, cold Civility made bows
And smoothly flattered, Wisdom shook his head,
And Laughter shaped his lip into a smile ;
Sobriety did stare, Forethought grew pale,
And Modesty hung down the head and blushed,
And Pity wept, as, on the frothy surge
Of fashion tossed, she passed them by, like sail
Before some devilish blast, and got no time
To think, and never thought, till on the rock
She dashed, of ruin, anguish, and despair.

O how unlike this giddy thing in Time !
And at the day of judgment how unlike,
The modest, meek, retiring dame ! Her house
Was ordered well, her children taught the way
Of life, who, rising up in honour, called
Her blessed. Best pleased to be admired at home,
And hear, reflected from her husband's praise,
Her own, she sought no gaze of foreign eye ;
His praise alone, and faithful love, and trust
Reposed, was happiness enough for her.
Yet who, that saw her pass, and heard the poor
With earnest benedictions on her steps
Attend, could from obeisance keep his eye,
Or tongue from due applause. In virtue fair,
Adorned with modesty, and matron grace
Unspeakable, and love, her face was like
The light, most welcome to the eye of man ,

Refreshing most, most honoured, most desired,
Of all he saw in the dim world below.
As Morning when she shed her golden locks,
And on the dewy top of Hermon walked,
Or Zion hill ; so glorious was her path.
Old men beheld, and did her reverence,
And bade their daughters look, and take from her
Example of their future life ; the young
Admired, and new resolve of virtue made.
And none who was her husband asked ; his air
Serene, and countenance of joy, the sign
Of inward satisfaction, as he passed
The crowd, or sat among the elders, told.
In holiness complete, and in the robes
Of saving righteousness, arrayed for heaven,
How fair, that day, among the fair, she stood !
How lovely on the eternal hills her steps !

Restored to reason, on that morn, appeared
The lunatic, who raved in chains, and asked
No mercy when he died. Of lunacy,
Innumerable were the causes ; humbled pride,
Ambition disappointed, riches lost,
And bodily disease, and sorrow, oft
By man inflicted on his brother man ;
Sorrow that made the reason drunk, and yet
Left much untasted—so the cup was filled ;
Sorrow that, like an ocean, dark, deep, rough,
And shoreless, rolled its billows o'er the soul
Perpetually, and without hope of end.

Take one example, one of female wo.
Loved by a father and a mother's love,
In rural peace she lived, so fair, so light
Of heart, so good, and young, that reason, scarce,
The eye could credit, but would doubt, as she Did stoop to pull the lily or the rose
From morning's dew, if it reality

Of flesh and blood, or holy vision, saw,
In imagery of perfect womanhood.
But short her bloom, her happiness was short.
One saw her loveliness, and, with desire
Unhallowed, burning, to her ear addressed
Dishonest words: " Her favour was his life,
His heaven; her frown his wo, his night, his death
With turgid phrase, thus wove in flattery's loom,
He on her womanish nature won, and age
Suspicionless, and ruined, and forsook.
For he a chosen villain was at heart,
And capable of deeds that durst not seek Repentance. Soon her father saw her shame,
His heart grew stone, he drove her forth to woe
And wintry winds, and with a horrid curse
Pursued her ear, forbidding all return.

Upon a hoary cliff, that watched the sea,
Her babe was found—dead. On its little cheek,
The tear that nature bade it weep, had turned
An ice-drop, sparkling in the morning beam;
And to the turf its helpless hands were frozen.
For she, the woful mother, had gone mad,
And laid it down, regardless of its fate
And of her own. Yet had she many days
Of sorrow in the world, but never wept.
She lived on alms, and carried in her hand
Some withered stalks she gathered in the spring.
When any asked the cause, she smiled and said,
They were her sisters, and would come and watch
Her grave when she was dead. She never spoke
Of her deceiver, father, mother, home,
Or child, or heaven, or hell, or God, but still
In lonely places walked, and ever gazed
Upon the withered stalks, and talked to them;
Till, wasted to the shadow of her youth,
With woe too wide to see beyond, she died—
Not unatoned for by imputed blood,

Nor by the Spirit, that mysterious works,
Unsanctified. Aloud, her father cursed,
That day, his guilty pride, which would not own
A daughter, whom the God of heaven and earth
Was not ashamed to call his own; and he,
Who ruined her, read from her holy look,
That pierced him with perdition manifold,
His sentence, burning with vindictive fire.

The judge that took a bribe; he who amiss
Pleaded the widow's cause, and by delay
Delaying ever, made the law at night
More intricate than at the dawn, and on
The morrow farther from a close, than when
The sun last set, till he who in the suit
Was poorest, by his emptied coffers, proved
His cause the worst; and he that had the bag
Of weights deceitful, and the balance false;
And he that with a fraudulent lip deceived
In buying or in selling;—these, that morn,
Found custom no excuse for sin, and knew
Plain dealing was a virtue, but too late.
And he that was supposed to do nor good
Nor ill, surprised, could find no neutral ground,
And learned, that to do nothing was to serve
The devil, and transgress the laws of God.
The noisy quack, that by profession lied,
And uttered falsehoods of enormous size,
With countenance as grave as truth beseemed;
And he that lied for pleasure, whom a lust
Of being heard and making people stare,
And a most steadfast hate of silence, drove Far wide of sacred truth, who never took
The pains to think of what he was to say,
But still made haste to speak, with weary tongue
Like copious stream for ever flowing on;—
Read clearly in the lettered heavens, what, long
Before, they might have read, For every word

Of folly, you, this day, shall give account ;
And every liar shall his portion have
Among the cursed, without the gates of life.

With groans that made no pause, lamenting there
Were seen the duellist and suicide.
This thought, but thought amiss, that of himself
He was entire proprietor ; and so,
When he was tired of Time, with his own hand,
He opened the portals of Eternity,
And sooner than the devils hoped, arrived
In hell. The other, of resentment quick,
And, for a word, a look, a gesture, deemed
Not scrupulously exact in all respect,
Prompt to revenge, went to the cited field,
For double murder armed, his own, and his
That as himself he was ordained to love.
The first, in pagan books of early times,
Was heroism pronounced, and greatly praised.
In fashion's glossary of later days,
The last was honour called, and spirit high.
Alas ! 'twas mortal spirit, honour which Forgot to wake at the last trumpet's voice,
Bearing the signature of Time alone,
Uncurrent in Eternity, and base.
Wise men suspected this before ; for they Could never understand what honour meant,
Or why that should be honour termed, which made
Man murder man, and broke the laws of God
Most wantonly. Sometimes, indeed, the grave,
And those of Christian creed imagined, spoke Admiringly of honour, lauding much
The noble youth, who, after many rounds
Of boxing, died ; or, to the pistol shot
His breast exposed, his soul to endless pain.
But they who most admired, and understood
This honour best, and on its altar laid
Their lives, most obviously were fools ; and, what

Fools only, and the wicked, understood,
The wise agreed was some delusive Shade,
That with the mist of time should disappear.

Great day of revelation ! in the grave
The hypocrite had left his mask, and stood
In naked ugliness. He was a man
Who stole the livery of the court of heaven,
To serve the devil in ; in virtue's guise,
Devoured the widow's house and orphan's bread ;
In holy phrase, transacted villanies
That common sinners durst not meddle with.
At sacred feast, he sat among the saints,
And with his guilty hands touched holiest things
And none of sin lamented more, or sighed
More deeply, or with graver countenance,
Or longer prayer, wept o'er the dying man,
Whose infant children, at the moment, he Planned how to rob. In sermon style he bought,
And sold, and lied ; and salutations made
In Scripture terms. He prayed by quantity,
And with his repetitions long and loud,
All knees were weary. With one hand he put
A penny in the urn of poverty,
And with the other took a shilling out.
On charitable lists,—those trumps which told
The public ear, who had in secret done
The poor a benefit, and half the alms
They told of, took themselves to keep them sounding,—
He blazed his name, more pleased to have it there
Than in the book of life. Seest thou the man !
A serpent with an angel's voice ! a grave
With flowers bestrewed ! and yet few were deceived.
His virtues being over-done, his face
Too grave, his prayers too long, his charities
Too pompously attended, and his speech
Larded too frequently and out of time
With serious phraseology,—were rents

That in his garments opened in spite of him,
Through which the well-accustomed eye could see
The rottenness of his heart. None deeper blushed,
As in the all-piercing light he stood, exposed,
No longer herding with the holy ones.
Yet still he tried to bring his countenance
To sanctimonious seeming; but, meanwhile,
The shame within, now visible to all,
His purpose balked. The righteous smiled; and even Despair itself some signs of laughter gave,
As ineffectually he strove to wipe
His brow, that inward guiltiness defiled.
Detected wretch! of all the reprobate,
None seemed maturer for the flames of hell,
Where still his face, from ancient custom, wears
A holy air which says to all that pass
Him by, "I was a hypocrite on earth."

That was the hour which measured out to each,
Impartially, his share of reputation,
Correcting all mistakes, and from the name
Of the good man all slanders wiping off.
Good name was dear to all. Without it, none
Could soundly sleep, even on a royal bed,
Or drink with relish from a cup of gold;
And with it, on his borrowed straw, or by
The leafless hedge, beneath the open heavens,
The weary beggar took untroubled rest.
It was a music of most heavenly tone,
To which the heart leaped joyfully, and all
The spirits danced. For honest fame, men laid
Their heads upon the block, and, while the axe
Descended, looked and smiled: It was of price
Invaluable. Riches, health, repose,
Whole kingdoms, life, were given for it, and he Who got it was the winner still; and he
Who sold it durst not open his ear, nor look
On human face, he knew himself so vile.

Yet it, with all its preciousness, was due
To Virtue, and around her should have shed,
Unasked, its savoury smell; but Vice, deformed
Itself, and ugly, and of flavour rank,
To rob fair Virtue of so sweet an incense,
And with it to anoint and salve its own
Rotten ulcers, and perfume the path that led
To death,—strove daily by a thousand means :
And oft succeeded to make Virtue sour
In the world's nostrils, and its loathly self Smell sweetly. Rumour was the messenger
Of defamation, and so swift that none
Could be the first to tell an evil tale ;
And was, withal, so infamous for lies,
That he who of her sayings, on his creed,
The fewest entered, was deemed wisest man.
The fool, and many who had credit, too,
For wisdom, grossly swallowed all she said,
Unsifted ; and although, at every word,
They heard her contradict herself, and saw
Hourly they were imposed upon and mocked,
Yet still they ran to hear her speak, and stared,
And wondered much, and stood aghast, and said
It could not be ; and, while they blushed for shame
At their own faith, and seemed to doubt, believed,
And whom they met, with many sanctions, told.
So did experience fail to teach ;—so hard
It was to learn this simple truth,—confirmed
At every corner by a thousand proofs,—
That common Fame most impudently lied.

'Twas Slander filled her mouth with lying words,
Slander, the foulest whelp of Sin. The man
In whom this spirit entered was undone.
His tongue was set on fire of hell, his heart
Was black as death, his legs were faint with haste
To propagate the lie his soul had framed,
His pillow was the peace of families

Destroyed, the sigh of innocence reproached,
Broken friendships, and the strife of brotherhoods ;
Yet did he spare his sleep, and hear the clock
Number the midnight watches, on his bed,
Devising mischief more ; and early rose,
And made most hellish meals of good men's names.

From door to door you might have seen him speed,
Or placed amidst a group of gaping fools,
And whispering in their ears, with his foul lips.
Peace fled the neighbourhood in which he made
His haunts ; and, like a moral pestilence,
Before his breath, the healthy shoots and blooms
Of social joy and happiness, decayed.
Fools only in his company were seen,
And those forsaken of God, and to themselves
Given up. The prudent shunned him and his house
As one who had a deadly moral plague.
And fain would all have shunned him at the day
Of judgment ; but in vain. All who gave ear
With greediness, or wittingly their tongues
Made herald to his lies, around him wailed ;
While on his face, thrown back by injured men,
In characters of ever-blushing shame,
Appeared ten thousand slanders, all his own.

Among the accursed, who sought a hiding place
In vain, from fierceness of Jehovah's rage,
And from the hot displeasure of the Lamb,
Most wretched, most contemptible, most vile,— Stood the false priest, and in his conscience felt
The fellest gnaw of the Undying Worm.
And so he might, for he had on his hands
The blood of souls, that would not wipe away.
Hear what he was. He swore, in sight of God
And man, to preach his master, Jesus Christ ;
Yet preached himself : he swore that love of souls,
Alone, had drawn him to the church ; yet strewed

The path that led to hell with tempting flowers,
And in the ear of sinners, as they took
The way of death, he whispered peace : he swore Away all love of lucre, all desire
Of earthly pomp ; and yet a princely seat
He liked, and to the clink of Mammon's box
Gave most rapacious ear. His prophecies,
He swore, were from the Lord ; and yet, taught lies
For gain : with quackish ointment, healed the wounds
And bruises of the soul, outside, but left,
Within, the pestilent matter unobserved,
To sap the moral constitution quite,
And soon to burst again, incurable.
He with untempered mortar daubed the walls
Of Zion, saying, Peace, when there was none.
The man who came with thirsty soul to hear
Of Jesus, went away unsatisfied ;
For he another gospel preached than Paul,
And one that had no Saviour in't ; and yet,
His life was worse. Faith, charity, and love,
Humility, forgiveness, holiness,
Were words well lettered in his sabbath creed ;
But with his life he wrote as plain, Revenge,
Pride, tyranny, and lust of wealth and power
Inordinate, and lewdness unashamed.
He was a wolf in clothing of the lamb,
That stole into the fold of God, and on
The blood of souls, which he did sell to death,
Grew fat ; and yet, when any would have turned Him out, he cried, " Touch not the priest of God."
And that he was anointed, fools believed ;
But knew, that day, he was the devil's priest,
Anointed by the hands of Sin and Death,
And set peculiarly apart to ill,—
While on him smoked the vials of perdition,
Poured measureless. Ah me ! what cursing then
Was heaped upon his head by ruined souls,
That charged him with their murder, as he stood,

With eye of all the unredeemed most sad,
Waiting the coming of the Son of Man !
But let me pause, for thou hast seen his place
And punishment, beyond the sphere of love.

Much was removed that tempted once to sin.
Avarice no gold, no wine the drunkard, saw.
But Envy had enough, as heretofore,
To fill his heart with gall and bitterness.
What made the man of envy what he was,
Was worth in others, vileness in himself,
A lust of praise, with undeserving deeds,
And conscious poverty of soul : and still
It was his earnest work and daily toil, -
With lying tongue, to make the noble seem Mean as himself. On fame's high hill he saw
The laurel spread its everlasting green,
And wished to climb ; but felt his knees too weak,
And stood, below, unhappy, laying hands
Upon the strong, ascending gloriously
The steps of honour, bent to draw them back,
Involving oft the brightness of their path,
In mists his breath had raised. Whene'er he heard,
As oft he did, of joy and happiness,
And great prosperity, and rising worth,
'Twas like a wave of wormwood o'er his soul
Rolling its bitterness. His joy was wo,
The wo of others. When, from wealth to want,
From praises to reproach, from peace to strife,
From mirth to tears, he saw a brother fall,
Or Virtue make a slip,—his dreams were sweet.
But chief with Slander, daughter of his own,
He took unhallowed pleasure. When she talked,
And with her filthy lips defiled the best,
His ear drew near ; with wide attention gaped
His mouth ; his eye, well pleased, as eager gazed
As glutton, when the dish he most desired
Was placed before him ; and a horrid mirth,

At intervals, with laughter shook his sides.
The critic, too, who, for a bit of bread,
In book that fell aside before the ink
Was dry, poured forth excessive nonsense, gave Him much delight. The critics,—some, but few,—
Were worthy men, and earned renown which had Immortal roots; but most were weak and vile.
And, as a cloudy swarm of summer flies,
With angry hum and slender lance, beset
The sides of some huge animal; so did
They buzz about the illustrious man, and fain,
With his immortal honour, down the stream
Of fame would have descended; but, alas!
The hand of Time drove them away. They were,
Indeed, a simple race of men, who had
One only art, which taught them still to say,
Whate'er was done might have been better done;
And with this art, not ill to learn, they made
A shift to live. But, sometimes too, beneath
The dust they raised, was worth a while obscured;
And then did Envy prophesy and laugh.
O Envy! hide thy bosom, hide it deep.
A thousand snakes, with black, envenomed mouths,
Nest there, and hiss, and feed through all thy heart.—

Such one I saw, here interposing, said
The new arrived, in that dark den of shame,
Whom who hath seen shall never wish to see
Again. Before him, in the infernal gloom,
That omnipresent shape of Virtue stood
On which he ever threw his eye; and, like -
A cinder that had life and feeling, seemed
His face, with inward pining, to be what
He could not be. As being that had burned
Continually, in slow-consuming fire,—
Half an eternity, and was to burn
For evermore, he looked. Oh! sight to be Forgotten! thought too horrible to think!

But say, believing in such wo to come,
Such dreadful certainty of endless pain,
Could beings of forecasting mould, as thou
Entitlest men, deliberately walk on,
Unscared, and overleap their own belief
Into the lake of ever-burning fire ?

Thy tone of asking seems to make reply,
And rightly seems : They did not so believe.
Not one of all thou sawst lament and wail
In Tophet, perfectly believed the word
Of God, else none had thither gone. Absurd,
To think that beings, made with reason, formed
To calculate, compare, choose, and reject,
By nature taught, and self, and every sense,
To choose the good, and pass the evil by,
Could, with full credence of a time to come,
When all the wicked should be really damned,
And cast beyond the sphere of light and love,
Have persevered in sin ! Too foolish this
For folly in its prime. Can aught that thinks
And wills choose certain evil, and reject
Good, in his heart believing he does so ?
Could man choose pain, instead of endless joy .
Mad supposition, though maintained by some Of honest mind. Behold a man condemned !
Either he ne'er inquired, and therefore he Could not believe ; or, else, he carelessly
Inquired, and something other than the word
Of God received into his cheated faith ;
And therefore he did not believe, but down
To hell descended, leaning on a lie.

Faith was bewildered much by men who meant
To make it clear, so simple in itself,
A thought so rudimental and so plain,
That none by comment could it plainer make.
All faith was one. In object, not in kind,

The difference lay. The faith that saved a soul,
And that which in the common truth believed,
In essence, were the same. Hear, then, what faith,
True, Christian faith, which brought salvation, was.
Belief in all that God revealed to men;
Observe, in all that God revealed to men,
In all he promised, threatened, commanded, said,
Without exception, and without a doubt.
Who thus believed, being by the Spirit touched,
As naturally the fruits of faith produced,
Truth, temperance, meekness, holiness, and love,
As human eye from darkness sought the light.
How could he else? If he, who had firm faith
The morrow's sun should rise, ordered affairs
Accordingly; if he, who had firm faith
That spring, and summer, and autumnal days,
Should pass away, and winter really come,
Prepared accordingly; if he, who saw
A bolt of death approaching, turned aside
And let it pass;—as surely did the man,
Who verily believed the word of God,
Though erring whiles, its general laws obey,
Turn back from hell, and take the way to heaven.

That faith was necessary, some alleged,
Unreined and uncontrollable by will.
Invention savouring much of hell! Indeed,
It was the master-stroke of wickedness,
Last effort of Abaddon's council dark,
To make man think himself a slave to fate,
And, worst of all, a slave to fate in faith.
For thus 'twas reasoned then: From faith alone,
And from opinion, springs all action; hence,
If faith's compelled, so is all action too:
But deeds compelled are not accountable;
So man is not amenable to God.

Arguing that brought such monstrous birth, though good

It seemed, must have been false. Most false it was,
And by the book of God condemned, throughout.
We freely own, that truth, when set before
The mind, with perfect evidence, compelled Belief; but error lacked such witness, still:
And none, who now lament in moral night,
The word of God refused on evidence
That might not have been set aside as false.
To reason, try, choose, and reject, was free.
Hence God, by faith, acquitted, or condemned;
Hence righteous men, with liberty of will,
Believed; and hence thou sawst in Erebus
The wicked, who as freely disbelieved
What else had led them to the land of life.

COURSE OF TIME.

BOOK IX.

FAIREST of those that left the calm of heaven,
And ventured down to man, with words of peace;
Daughter of Grace! known by whatever name,
Religion, Virtue, Piety, or Love
Of Holiness, the day of thy reward
Was come. Ah! thou wast long despised, despised
By those thou wooedst from death to endless life.
Modest and meek, in garments white as those
That seraphs wear, and countenance as mild
As Mercy looking on Repentance' tear;
With eye of purity, now darted up
To God's eternal throne, now humbly bent
Upon thyself, and, weeping down thy cheek,
That glowed with universal love immense,
A tear, pure as the dews that fall in heaven;
In thy left hand, the olive branch, and in Thy right, the crown of immortality;—
With noiseless foot, thou walkedst the vales of earth,
Beseeching men, from age to age, to turn
From utter death, to turn from woe to bliss;
Beseeching evermore, and evermore
Despised—not evermore despised, not now,
Not at the day of doom; most lovely then,
Most honourable, thou appeared, and most

To be desired. The guilty heard the song
Of thy redeemed, how loud ! and saw thy face
How fair ! Alas ! it was too late ! the hour
Of making friends was passed, thy favour then
Might not be sought ; but recollection, sad
And accurate, as miser counting o'er
And o'er again the sum he must lay out,
Distinctly in the wicked's ear rehearsed
Each opportunity despised and lost,
While on them gleamed thy holy look, that like
A fiery torrent went into their souls.
The day of thy reward was come, the day
Of great remuneration to thy friends,
To those, known by whatever name, who sought,
In every place, in every time, to do
Unfeignedly their Maker's will, revealed,
Or gathered else from nature's school ; well pleased
With God's applause alone, that, like a stream
Of sweetest melody, at still of night
By wanderer heard, in their most secret ear
For ever whispered, Peace ; and, as a string
Of kindred tone awoke, their inmost soul
Responsive answered, Peace ; inquiring still
And searching, night and day, to know their duty.
When known, with undisputing trust, with love
Unquenchable, with zeal, by reason's lamp
Inflamed,—performing ; and to Him, by whose Profound, all-calculating skill alone,
Results—results even of the slightest act,
Are fully grasped, with unsuspicious faith,
All consequences leaving ; to abound,
Or want, alike prepared ; who knew to be
Exalted how, and how to be abased ;
How best to live, and how to die when asked.
Their prayers sincere, their alms in secret done,
Their fightings with themselves, their abstinence
From pleasure, though by mortal eye unseen,
Their hearts of resignation to the will

Of Heaven, their patient bearing of reproach
 And shame, their charity, and faith, and hope,—
 Thou didst remember, and in full repaid.
 No bankrupt thou, who, at the bargained hour
 Of payment due, sent to his creditors
 A tale of losses and mischances, long.
 Ensured by God himself, and from the stores
 And treasures of his wealth, at will supplied,— Religion, thou alone, of all that men,
 On earth, gave credit, to be reimbursed
 On the other side the grave, didst keep thy word,
 Thy day, and all thy promises fulfilled.

As in the mind, rich with unborrowed wealth,
 Where multitudes of thoughts for utterance strive,
 And all so fair, that each seems worthy first
 To enter on the tongue, and from the lips
 Have passage forth,—selection hesitates
 Perplexed, and loses time, anxious, since all
 Cannot be taken, to take the best; and yet
 Afraid, lest what he left be worthier still;
 And grieving much, where all so goodly look,
 To leave rejected one, or in the rear
 Let any be obscured: so did the bard,
 Though not unskilled, as on that multitude
 Of men who once awoke to judgment, he Threw back reflection, hesitating pause.
 For as his harp, in tone severe, had sung
 What figure the most famous sinners made,
 When from the grave they rose unmasked; so did
 He wish to character the good; but yet,
 Among so many, glorious all, all worth
 Immortal fame, with whom begin, with whom
 To end, was difficult to choose; and long
 His auditors, upon the tiptoe raised
 Of expectation, might have kept, had not
 His eye—for so it is in heaven, that what
 Is needed always is at hand—beheld,

That moment, on a mountain near the throne
 Of God, the most renowned of the redeemed,
 Rejoicing : nor who first, who most, to praise,
 Debated more ; but thus, with sweeter note,
 Well pleased to sing, with highest eulogy,
 And first, whom God applauded most,—began.

With^e patient ear, thou now hast heard,—though whiles,
 Aside digressing, ancient feeling turned
 My lyre,—what shame the wicked had, that day,
 What wailing, what remorse ; so hear, in brief,
 How bold the righteous stood, the men redeemed,
 How fair in virtue, and in hope how glad !
 And first among the holy shone, as best
 Became, the faithful minister of God.

See where he walks on yonder mount that lifts
 Its summit high, on the right hand of bliss,
 Sublime in glory, talking with his peers
 Of the incarnate Saviour's love, and passed Affliction lost in present joy ! See how
 His face with heavenly ardour glows, and how
 His hand, enraptured, strikes the golden lyre !
 As now, conversing of the Lamb, once slain,
 He speaks ; and now, from vines that never bear
 Of winter, but in monthly harvest yield
 Their fruit abundantly, he plucks the grapes
 Of life ! But what he was on earth it most Behoves to say. Elect by God himself,
 Anointed by the Holy Ghost, and set
 Apart to the great work of saving men ;
 Instructed fully in the will divine,
 Supplied with grace in store, as need might ask,
 And with the stamp and signature of heaven,
 Truth, mercy, patience, holiness, and love,
 Accredited ;—he was a man, by God,
 The Lord, commissioned to make known to men

The eternal counsels ; in his Master's name,
To treat with them of everlasting things,
Of life, death, bliss, and wo ; to offer terms
Of pardon, grace, and peace, to the rebelled ;
To teach the ignorant soul, to cheer the sad ;
To bind, to loose, with all authority ;
To give the feeble strength, the hopeless hope,
To help the halting, and to lead the blind ;
To warn the careless, heal the sick of heart,
Arouse the indolent, and on the proud
And obstinate offender to denounce
The wrath of God. All other men, what name
Shoe'er they bore, whatever office held,
If lawful held,—the magistrate supreme,
Or else subordinate, were chosen by men,
Their fellows, and from men derived their power,
And were accountable, for all they did,
To men ; but he, alone, his office held
Immediately from God, from God received
Authority, and was to none but God
Amenable. The elders of the church,
Indeed, upon him laid their hands, and set
Him visibly apart to preach the word
Of life ; but this was merely outward rite
And decent ceremonial, performed
On all alike ; and oft, as thou hast heard,
Performed on those God never sent ; his call,
His consecration, his anointing, all
Were inward, in the conscience heard and felt
Thus, by Jehovah chosen, and ordained
To take into his charge the souls of men,
And for his trust to answer at the day
Of judgment,—great plenipotent of heaven,
And representative of God on earth,—
Fearless of men and devils ; unabashed
By sin enthroned, or mockery of a prince,
Unawed by armed legions, unseduced
By offered bribes, burning with love to souls

Unquenchable, and mindful still of his Great charge and vast responsibility ;—
High in the temple of the living God,
He stood, amidst the people, and declared
Aloud the truth, the whole revealed truth,
Ready to seal it with his blood. Divine
Resemblance most complete ! with mercy now
And love, his face, illumed, shone gloriously ;
And frowning now indignantly, it seemed
As if offended Justice, from his eye,
Streamed forth vindictive wrath ! Men heard, alarmed.
The uncircumcised infidel believed ;
Light-thoughted Mirth grew serious, and wept ;
The laugh profane sunk in a sigh of deep
Repentance, the blasphemer, kneeling, prayed,
And, prostrate in the dust, for mercy called ;
And cursed, old, forsaken sinners gnashed
Their teeth, as if their hour had been arrived.
Such was his calling, his commission such.
Yet he was humble, kind, forgiving, meek,
Easy to be entreated, gracious, mild ;
And, with all patience and affection, taught,
Rebuked, persuaded, solaced, counselled, warned,
In fervent style and manner. Needy, poor,
And dying men, like music, heard his feet
Approach their beds ; and guilty wretches took
New hope, and in his prayers wept and smiled,
And blessed him, as they died forgiven ; and all
Saw in his face contentment, in his life,
The path to glory and perpetual joy.
Deep-learned in the philosophy of heaven,
He searched the causes out of good and ill,
Profoundly calculating their effects
Far past the bounds of Time ; and balancing,
In the arithmetic of future things,
The loss and profit of the soul to all Eternity. A skilful workman he
In God's great moral vineyard : what to prune

With cautious hand he knew, what to uproot ;
What were mere weeds, and what celestial plants
Which had unfading vigour in them, knew ;
Nor knew alone, but watched them night and day,
And reared and nourished them, till fit to be Transplanted to the Paradise above.

Oh ! who can speak his praise ! great, humble man !
He in the current of destruction stood
And warned the sinner of his wo ; led on Immanuel's members in the evil day ;
And, with the everlasting arms embraced
Himself around, stood in the dreadful front
Of battle, high, and warred victoriously
With death and hell. And now was come his rest,
His triumph day. Illustrious like a sun,
In that assembly, he, shining from far,
Most excellent in glory, stood assured,
Waiting the promised crown, the promised throne,
The welcome and approval of his Lord.
Nor one alone, but many—prophets, priests,
Apostles, great reformers, all that served
Messiah faithfully, like stars appeared
Of fairest beam ; and round them gathered, clad
In white, the vouchers of their ministry—
The flock their care had nourished, fed, and saved.

Nor yet in common glory blazing, stood
The true philosopher, decided friend
Of truth and man. Determined foe of all
Deception, calm, collected, patient, wise,
And humble, undeceived by outward shape
Of things, by fashion's revelry uncharmed,
By honour unbewitched,—he left the chase
Of vanity, and all the quackeries
Of life, to fools and heroes, or whos'er
Desired them ; and with reason, much despised,
Traduced, yet heavenly reason, to the shade'

Retired—retired, but not to dream, or build
Of ghostly fancies, seen in the deep noon
Of sleep, ill-balanced theories ; retired,
But did not leave mankind ; in pity, not
In wrath, retired ; and still, though distant, kept
His eye on men ; at proper angle took
His stand to see them better, and, beyond
The clamour which the bells of folly made,
That most had hung about them, to consult
With nature, how their madness might be cured,
And how their true substantial comforts might Be multiplied. Religious man ! what God
By prophets, priests, evangelists, revealed
Of sacred truth, he thankfully received,
And, by its light directed, went in search
Of more. Before him, darkness fled ; and all
The goblin tribe, that hung upon the breasts
Of Night, and haunted still the moral gloom
With shapeless forms, and blue, infernal lights,
And indistinct, and devilish whisperings,
That the miseducated fancies vexed
Of superstitious men,—at his approach,
Dispersed, invisible. Where'er he went,
This lesson still he taught, To fear no ill
But sin, no being but Almighty God.
All-comprehending sage ! too hard alone
For him was man's salvation ; all besides,
Of use or comfort, that distinction made
Between the desperate savage, scarcely raised
Above the beast whose flesh he ate, undressed,
And the most polished of the human race,
Was product of his persevering search.
Religion owed him much, as from the false
She suffered much ; for still his main design,
In all his contemplations, was to trace
The wisdom, providence, and love of God,
And to his fellows, less observant, show
Them forth. From prejudice redeemed, with all

His passions still, above the common world,
 Sublime in reason and in aim sublime,
 He sat, and on the marvellous works of God
 Sedately thought ; now glancing up his eye,
 Intelligent, through all the starry dance,
 And penetrating now the deep remote
 Of central causes in the womb opaque
 Of matter hid ; now with inspection nice,
 Entering the mystic labyrinths of the mind,
 Where thought, of notice ever shy, behind
 Thought, disappearing, still retired ; and still,
 Thought meeting thought, and thought awakening thought,
 And mingling still with thought in endless maze,— Bewildered observation ; now, with eye
 Yet more severely purged, looking far down
 Into the heart, where passion wove a web
 Of thousand thousand threads, in grain and hue
 All different ; then, upward venturing whiles,
 But reverently, and in his hand, the light
 Revealed, near the eternal Throne, he gazed,
 Philosophizing less than worshipping.
 Most truly great ! his intellectual strength
 And knowledge vast, to men of lesser mind,
 Seemed infinite ; yet, from his high pursuits,
 And reasonings most profound, he still returned
 Home, with an humbler and a warmer heart :
 And none so lowly bowed before his God,
 As none so well His awful majesty
 And goodness comprehended ; or so well
 His own dependency and weakness knew.

How glorious now, with vision purified
 At the Essential Truth, entirely free
 From error, he, investigating still,—
 For knowledge is not found, unsought, in heaven,—
 From world to world, at pleasure, roves, on wing
 Of golden ray upborne ; or, at the feet

Of heaven's most ancient sages, sitting, hears
New wonders of the wondrous works of God!

Illustrious too, that morning, stood the man
Exalted by the people, to the throne
Of government, established on the base
Of justice, liberty, and equal right ;
Who, in his countenance sublime, expressed
A nation's majesty, and yet was meek
And humble; and in royal palace gave
Example to the meanest, of the fear
Of God, and all integrity of life
And manners; who, august, yet lowly; who,
Severe, yet gracious; in his very heart,
Detesting all oppression, all intent
Of private aggrandizement; and, the first
In every public duty, held the scales
Of justice, and as the law, which reigned in him,
Commanded, gave rewards; or, with the edge
Vindictive, smote, now light, now heavily,
According to the stature of the crime.
Conspicuous like an oak of healthiest bough,
Deep-rooted in his country's love, he stood,
And gave his hand to Virtue, helping up
The honest man to honour and renown;
And, with the look which goodness wears in wrath
Withering the very blood of Knavery,
And from his presence driving far, ashamed.

Nor less remarkable, among the blessed,
Appeared the man, who, in the senate-house
Watchful, unhired, unbribed, and uncorrupt,
And party only to the common weal,
In virtue's awful rage, pleaded for right,
With truth so clear, with argument so strong,
With action so sincere, and tone so loud
And deep, as made the despot quake behind
His adamantine gates, and every joint,

In terror, smite his fellow-joint relaxed ;
 Or, marching to the field, in burnished steel,
 While, frowning on his brow, tremendous hung
 The wrath of a whole people, long provoked,— Mustered the stormy wings of war, in day
 Of dreadful deeds ; and led the battle on,
 When Liberty, swift as the fires of heaven,
 In fury rode ; with all her hosts, and threw
 The tyrant down, or drove invasion back.
 Illustrious he—illustrious all appeared,
 Who ruled supreme in righteousness ; or held
 Inferior place, in steadfast rectitude
 Of soul. Peculiarly severe had been
 The nurture of their youth, their knowledge great,
 Great was their wisdom, great their cares, and great
 Their self-denial, and their service done
 To God and man ; and great was their reward,
 At hand, proportioned to their worthy deeds.

Breathe all thy minstrelsy, immortal Harp !
 Breathe numbers warm with love, while I rehearse—
 Delighted theme, resembling most the songs
 Which, day and night, are sung before the Lamb !—
 Thy praise, O Charity ! thy labours most
 Divine ; thy sympathy with sighs, and tears,
 And groans ; thy great, thy god-like wish, to heal
 All misery, all fortune's wounds, and make
 The soul of every living thing rejoice.
 O thou wast needed much in days of Time !
 No virtue, half so much !—None half so fair !
 To all the rest, however fine, thou gavest
 A finishing and polish, without which
 No man e'er entered heaven. Let me record
 His praise, the man of great benevolence,
 Who pressed thee closely to his glowing heart,
 And to thy gentle bidding made his feet
 Swift minister. Of all mankind, his soul
 Was most in harmony with heaven : as one

Sole family of brothers, sisters, friends,
One in their origin, one in their rights
To all the common gifts of providence,
And in their hopes, their joys, and sorrows one,
He viewed the universal human race.
He needed not a law of state, to force
Grudging submission to the law of God.
The law of love was in his heart, alive;
What he possessed, he counted not his own,
But, like a faithful steward in a house
Of public alms, what freely he received
He freely gave, distributing to all
The helpless the last mite beyond his own
Temperate support, and reckoning still the gift
But justice, due to want; and so it was,
Although the world, with compliment not ill
Applied, adorned it with a fairer name.
Nor did he wait till to his door the voice
Of supplication came, but went abroad,
With foot as silent as the starry dews,
In search of misery that pined unseen,
And would not ask. And who can tell what sights
He saw! what groans he heard, in that cold world
Below! where Sin, in league with gloomy Death,
Marched daily through the length and breadth of all
The land, wasting at will, and making earth,
Fair earth! a lazaret-house, a dungeon dark,
Where Disappointment fed on ruined Hope,
Where Guilt, worn out, leaned on the triple edge
Of want, remorse, despair; where Cruelty
Reached forth a cup of wormwood to the lips
Of Sorrow, that to deeper Sorrow wailed;
Where Mockery, and Disease, and Poverty,
Met miserable Age, erewhile sore bent
With his own burden; where the arrowy winds
Of winter pierced the naked orphan babe,
And chilled the mother's heart, who had no home,
And where, alas! in mid-time of his day,

The honest man, robbed by some villain's hand,
Or with long sickness pale, and paler yet
With want and hunger, oft drank bitter draughts
Of his own tears, and had no bread to eat.
Oh ! who can tell what sights he saw, what shapes
Of wretchedness ! or who describe what smiles
Of gratitude illumined the face of wo,
While from his hand he gave the bounty forth !
As when the Sun, to Cancer wheeling back,
Returned from Capricorn, and showed the north,
That long had lain in cold and cheerless night,
His beamy countenance ; all nature then
Rejoiced together glad ; the flower looked up
And smiled ; the forest, from his locks, shook off
The hoary frosts, and clapped his hands ; the birds
Awoke, and, singing, rose to meet the day ;
And from his hollow den, where many months
He slumbered sad in darkness, blithe and light
Of heart the savage sprung, and saw again
His mountains shine, and with new songs of love
Allured the virgin's ear : so did the house,
The prison-house of guilt, and all the abodes
Of unprovided helplessness, revive,
As on them looked the sunny messenger
Of Charity. By angels tended still,
That marked his deeds, and wrote them in the book
Of God's remembrance ; careless he to be Observed of men, or have each mite bestowed
Recorded punctually, with name and place,
In every bill of news. Pleased to do good,
He gave, and sought no more, nor questioned much
Nor reasoned, who deserved ; for well he knew
The face of need. Ah me ! who could mistake ?
The shame to ask, the want that urged within,
Composed a look so perfectly distinct
From all else human, and withal so full
Of misery, that none could pass, untouched,
And be a Christian, or thereafter claim,

In any form, the name or rights of man,
Or, at the day of judgment, lift his eye ;
While he, in name of Christ, who gave the poor
A cup of water, or a bit of bread,
Impatient for his advent, waiting stood,
Glowing in robes of love and holiness,
Heaven's fairest dress ! and round him ranged, in white,
A thousand witnesses appeared, prepared
To tell his gracious deeds before the Throne.

Nor unrenowned among the most renowned,
Nor 'mong the fairest unadmired, that morn,
When highest fame was proof of highest worth,
Distinguished stood the bard : not he, who sold
The incommunicable, heavenly gift,
To Folly, and with lyre of perfect tone,
Prepared by God himself, for holiest praise,— Vilest of traitors ! most dishonest man !—
Sat by the door of Ruin, and made there
A melody so sweet, and in the mouth
Of drunkenness and debauch, that else had croaked
In natural discordance jarring harsh,
Put so divine a song, that many turned
Aside, and entered in undone, and thought,
Meanwhile, it was the gate of heaven, so like
An angel's voice the music seemed ; nor he,
Who, whining grievously of damsel coy,
Or blaming fortune, that would nothing give
For doing naught, in indolent lament
Unprofitable, passed his piteous days,
Making himself the hero of his tale,
Deserving ill the poet's name : but he,
The bard, by God's own hand anointed, who,
To Virtue's all-delighting harmony,
His numbers tuned : who, from the fount of truth,
Poured melody, and beauty poured, and love,
In holy stream, into the human heart ;
And, from the height of lofty argument,

Who "justified the ways of God to man,"
And sung what still he sings, approved, in heaven;
Though now with bolder note, above the damp
Terrestrial, which the pure celestial fire
Cooled, and restrained in part his flaming wing.

Philosophy was deemed of deeper thought,
And judgment more severe, than Poetry;
To fable, she, and fancy, more inclined.
And yet, if Fancy, as was understood,
Was of creative nature, or of power,
With self-wrought stuff, to build a fabric up,
To mortal vision wonderful and strange,
Philosophy, the theoretic, claimed,
Undoubtedly, the first and highest place
In Fancy's favour. Her material souls,
Her chance, her atoms shaped alike, her white
Proved black, her universal nothing, all;
And all her wondrous systems, how the mind
With matter met; how man was free, and yet
All pre-ordained; how evil first began;
And chief, her speculations, soaring high,
Of the eternal, uncreated Mind,
Which left all reason infinitely far
Behind—surprising feat of theory!—
Were pure creation of her own, webs wove
Of gossamer in Fancy's lightest loom,
And no where, on the list of being made
By God, recorded: but her look, meanwhile,
Was grave and studious; and many thought
She reasoned deeply, when she wildly raved.

The true, legitimate, anointed bard,
Whose song through ages poured its melody,
Was most severely thoughtful, most minute
And accurate of observation, most Familiarly acquainted with all modes
And phases of existence. True, no doubt,

He had originally drunk, from out
The fount of life and love, a double draught,
That gave whate'er he touched a double life :
But this was mere desire at first, and power
Devoid of means to work by ; need was still
Of persevering, quick, inspective mood
Of mind, of faithful memory, vastly stored,
From universal being's ample field,
With knowledge ; and a judgment, sound and clear,
Well disciplined in nature's rules of taste ;
Discerning to select, arrange, combine,
From infinite variety, and still
To nature true ; and guide withal, hard task,
The sacred, living impetus divine,
Discreetly through the harmony of song.
Completed thus, the poet sung ; and age
To age, enraptured, heard his measures flow ;
Enraptured, for he poured the very fat
And marrow of existence through his verse,
And gave the soul, that else, in selfish cold,
Unwarmed by kindred interest, had lain,
A roomy life, a glowing relish high,
A sweet, expansive brotherhood of being—
Joy answering joy, and sigh responding sigh,
Through all the fibres of the social heart.
Observant, sympathetic, sound of head,
Upon the ocean vast of human thought,
With passion rough and stormy, venturing out,
Even as the living billows rolled, he threw
His numbers over them, seized as they were,
And to perpetual ages left them fixed,
To each, a mirror of itself displayed ;
Despair for ever lowering dark on Sin,
And Happiness on Virtue smiling fair.

He was the minister of fame, and gave
To whom he would renown ; nor missed himself—
Although despising much the idiot roar

Of popular applause, that sudden, oft,
Unnaturally turning, whom it nursed
Itself devoured—the lasting fame, the praise
Of God and holy men; to excellence given.
Yet less he sought his own renown, than wished
To have the eternal images of truth
And beauty, pictured in his verse, admired.
’Twas these, taking immortal shape and form
Beneath his eye, that charmed his midnight watch,
And oft his soul with awful transports shook
Of happiness, unfelt by other men.
This was that spell, that sorcery, which bound
The poet to the lyre, and would not let Him go; that hidden mystery of joy,
Which made him sing in spite of fortune’s worst,
And was, at once, both motive and reward.

Nor now among the choral harps, in this
The native clime of song, are those unknown,
With higher note ascending, who, below,
In holy ardour, aimed at lofty strains.
True fame is never lost: many, whose names
Were honoured much on earth, are famous here
For poetry, and, with arch-angel harps,
Hold no unequal rivalry in song;
Leading the choirs of heaven, in numbers high,
In numbers ever sweet and ever new.

Behold them yonder, where the river pure
Flows warbling down before the throne of God;
And, shading on each side, the tree of life
Spreads its unfading boughs!—See how they shine,
In garments white, quaffing deep draughts of love,
And harping on their harps, new harmonies
Preparing for the ear of God, Most High!

But why should I, of individual worth,
Of individual glory, longer sing?

No true believer was, that day, obscure ;
No holy soul but had enough of joy ;
No pious wish without its full reward.
Who in the Father and the Son believed,
With faith that wrought by love to holy deeds,
And purified the heart, none trembled there,
Nor had by earthly guise his rank concealed ;
Whether, unknown, he tilled the ground remote,
Observant of the seasons, and adored
God in the promise, yearly verified,
Of seed-time, harvest, summer, winter, day
And night, returning duly at the time
Appointed ; or, on the shadowy mountain side,
Worshipped at dewy eve, watching his flocks ;
Or, trading, saw the wonders of the deep,
And as the needle to the starry Pole
Turned constantly, so he his heart to God ;
Or else, in servitude severe, was taught
To break the bonds of sin ; or, begging, learned
To trust the Providence that fed the raven,
And clothed the lily with her annual gown.

Most numerous, indeed, among the saved,
And many, too, not least illustrious, shone
The men who had no name on earth. Eclipsed
By lowly circumstance, they lived unknown,
Like stream that in the desert warbles clear,
Still nursing, as it goes, the herb and flower,
Though never seen ; or like the star, retired
In solitudes of ether, far beyond
All sight, not of essential splendour less,
Though shining unobserved. None saw their pure
Devotion, none their tears, their faith, and love,
Which burned within them, both to God and man,— None saw but God. He, in his bottle, all
Their tears preserved, and every holy wish
Wrote in his book ; and, not as they had done,
But as they wished with all their heart to do,

Arrayed them now in glory, and displayed,—
No longer hid by coarse, uncourtly garb,—
In lustre equal to their inward worth.

Man's time was passed, and his eternity
Begun. No fear remained of change. The youth,
Who, in the glowing morn of vigorous life,
High-reaching after great-religious deeds,
Was suddenly cut off, with all his hopes
In sunny bloom, and unaccomplished left
His withered aims,—saw everlasting days,
Before him, dawning rise, in which to achieve
All glorious things, and get himself the name
That jealous Death too soon forbade on earth.

Old things had passed away, and all was new,
And yet, of all the new-begun, naught so
Prodigious difference made, in the affairs
And thoughts of every man, as certainty.
For doubt, all doubt, was gone, of every kind;
Doubt that erewhile, beneath the lowest base
Of mortal reasonings, deepest laid, crept in,
And made the strongest, best cemented towers
Of human workmanship, so weakly shake,
And to their lofty tops so waver still,
That those who built them, feared their sudden fall.
But doubt, all doubt, was passed; and, in its place,
To every thought that in the heart of man
Was present, now had come an absolute,
Unquestionable certainty, which gave
To each decision of the mind immense
Importance, raising to its proper height
The sequent tide of passion, whether joy
Or grief. The good man knew, in very truth,
That he was saved to all eternity,
And feared no more; the bad had proof complete,
That he was damned for ever; and believed

Entirely, that on every wicked soul
Anguish should come, and wrath, and utter wo.

Knowledge was much increased, but wisdom more.
The film of Time, that still before the sight
Of mortal vision danced, and led the best
Astray, pursuing unsubstantial dreams,
Had dropped from every eye. Men saw that they Had vexed themselves in vain, to understand
What now no hope to understand remained ;
That they had often counted evil good,
And good for ill ; laughed when they should have wep ,
And wept, forlorn, when God intended mirth.
But what, of all their follies passed, surprised
Them most, and seemed most totally insane
And unaccountable, was value set
On objects of a day, was serious grief
Or joy for loss or gain of mortal things.
So utterly impossible it seemed,
When men their proper interests saw, that aught
Of terminable kind, that aught, which e'er
Could die, or cease to be, however named,
Should make a human soul—a legal heir
Of everlasting years—rejoice or weep,
In earnest mood ; for nothing now seemed worth
A thought, but had eternal bearing in't.

Much truth had been assented to in Time,
Which never, till this day, had made a due
Impression on the heart. Take one example.
Early from heaven it was revealed, and oft
Repeated in the world, from pulpits preached,
And penned and read in holy books, that God
Respected not the persons of mankind.
Had this been truly credited and felt,
The king, in purple robe, had owned, indeed,
The beggar for his brother ; pride of rank

And office thawed into paternal love ;
Oppression feared the day of equal rights,
Predicted ; covetous extortion kept
In mind the hour of reckoning, soon to come ;
And bribed injustice thought of being judged,
When he should stand, on equal foot, beside
The man he wronged, and surely—nay, 'tis true,
Most true, beyond all whispering of doubt,
That he, who lifted up the reeking scourge,
Dripping with gore from the slave's back, before
He struck again, had paused, and seriously
Of that tribunal thought, where God himself
Should look him in the face, and ask in wrath, “ Why didst thou this ? Man ! was he not thy brother Bone of thy bone, and flesh and blood of thine ? ”
But, ah ! this truth, by heaven and reason taught,
Was never fully credited on earth.
The titled, flattered, lofty men of power,
Whose wealth bought verdicts of applause for deeds
Of wickedness, could ne'er believe the time
Should truly come when judgment should proceed
Impartially against them, and they, too,
Have no good speaker at the Judge's ear,
No witnesses to bring them off for gold,
No power to turn the sentence from its course ;
And they of low estate, who saw themselves,
Day after day, despised, and wronged, and mocked,
Without redress, could scarcely think the day
Should e'er arrive, when they, in truth, should stand
On perfect level with the potentates
And princes of the earth, and have their cause
Examined fairly, and their rights allowed.
But now this truth was felt, believed and felt,
That men were really of a common stock,
That no man ever had been more than man.

Much prophecy—revealed by holy bards,
Who sung the will of heaven by Judah's streams—

Much prophecy, that waited long, the scoff
Of lips uncircumcised, was then fulfilled ;
To the last tittle scrupulously fulfilled.
It was foretold by those of ancient days,
A time should come, when wickedness should ween
Abased ; when every lofty look of man
Should be bowed down, and all his haughtiness
Made low ; when righteousness alone should lift
The head in glory, and rejoice at heart ;
When many, first in splendour and renown,
Should be most vile ; and many, lowest once,
And last in Poverty's obscurest nook,
Highest and first in honour, should be seen,
Exalted ; and when some, when all the good,
Should rise to glory and eternal life ;
And all the bad, lamenting, wake, condemned
To shame, contempt, and everlasting grief.

These prophecies had tarried long, so long
That many wagged the head, and, taunting, asked,
"When shall they come?" but asked no more, no:
mocked :

For the reproach of prophecy was wiped
Away, and every word of God found true.

And, oh ! what change of state, what change of rank,
In that assembly everywhere was seen !
The humble-hearted laughed, the lofty mourned,
And every man, according to his works
Wrought in the body, there took character.

Thus stood they mixed, all generations stood !
Of all mankind, innumerable throng !
Great harvest of the grave !—waiting the will
Of heaven, attentively and silent all,
As forest spreading out beneath the calm
Of evening skies, when even the single leaf
Is heard distinctly rustle down and fall ;

So silent they, when from above, the sound
Of rapid wheels approached, and suddenly
In heaven appeared a host of angels strong,
With chariots and with steeds of burning fire ;
Cherub, and Seraph, Thrones, Dominions, Powers,
Bright in celestial armour, dazzling, rode.
And, leading in the front, illustrious shone
Michael and Gabriel, servants long approved
In high commission,—girt that day with power,
Which naught created, man or devil, might Resist. Nor waited, gazing, long ; but, quick
Descending, silently and without song,
As servants bent to do their master's work,
To middle air they raised the human race,
Above the path long travelled by the sun ;
And as a shepherd from the sheep divides
The goats ; or husbandman, with reaping bands,
In harvest, separates the precious wheat,
Selected from the tares ; so did they part
Mankind, the good and bad, to right and left,
To meet no more ; these ne'er again to smile,
Nor those to weep ; these never more to share
Society of mercy with the saints,
Nor, henceforth, those to suffer with the vile.
Strange parting ! not for hours, nor days, nor months,
Nor for ten thousand times ten thousand years ;
But for a whole eternity !—though fit,
And pleasant to the righteous, yet to all
Strange, and most strangely felt ! The sire, to right.
Retiring, saw the son—sprung from his loins,
Beloved how dearly once ! but who forgot,
Too soon, in sin's intoxicating cup,
The father's warnings and the mother's tears—
Fall to the left among the reprobate ;
And sons, redeemed, beheld the fathers, whom
They loved and honoured once, gathered among
The wicked. Brothers, sisters, kinsmen, friends ;
Husband and wife, who ate at the same board,

And under the same roof, united, dwelt,
From youth to hoary age, bearing the chance
And change of Time together, parted then
For evermore. But none, whose friendship grew
From virtue's pure and everlasting root,
Took different roads ; these, knit in stricter bonds
Of amity, embracing, saw no more
Death, with his sithe, stand by ; nor heard the word,
The bitter word, which closed all earthly friendships,
And finished every feast of love—Farewell.
To all, strange parting ! to the wicked, sad
And terrible ! New horror seized them, while
They saw the saints withdrawing, and with them
All hope of safety, all delay of wrath.

Beneath a crown of rosy light,—like that
Which once, in Goshen, on the flocks, and herds,
And dwellings, smiled, of Jacob, while the land
Of Nile was dark ; or like the pillar bright
Of sacred fire, that stood above the sons
Of Israel, when they camped at midnight by
The foot of Horeb, or the desert side
Of Sinai ;—now, the righteous took their place,
All took their place, who ever wished to go
To heaven, for heaven's own sake. Not one remained
Among the accursed, that e'er desired with all
The heart to be redeemed, that ever sought
Submissively to do the will of God,
Howe'er it crossed his own ; or to escape
Hell, for aught other than its penal fires.
All took their place, rejoicing, and beheld,
In centre of the crown of golden beams
That canopied them o'er, these gracious words,
Blushing with tints of love : “ Fear not, my saints.

To other sight of horrible dismay,
Jehovah's ministers the wicked drove,
And left them bound immovable in chains

Of Justice. O'er their heads a bowless cloud
Of indignation hung ; a cloud it was
Of thick and utter darkness, rolling, like
An ocean, tides of livid, pitchy flame ;
With thunders charged, and lightnings ruinous,
And red with forked vengeance, such as wounds
The soul ; and full of angry shapes of wrath,
And eddies whirling with tumultuous fire,
And forms of terror raving to and fro,
And monsters, unimagined heretofore
By guilty men in dreams before their death,
From horrid to more horrid changing still,
In hideous movement through that stormy gulf :
And evermore the Thunders, murmuring, spoke
From out the darkness, uttering loud these words,
Which every guilty conscience echoed back :
" Ye knew your duty, but ye did it not."
Dread words ! that barred excuse, and threw the weight
Of every man's perdition, on himself,
Directly home. Dread words ! heard then, and heard
For ever through the wastes of Erebus.
" Ye knew your duty, but ye did it not !"
These were the words which glowed upon the sword,
Whose wrath burned fearfully behind the cursed,
As they were driven away from God to Tophet.
" Ye knew your duty, but ye did it not !"
These are the words to which the harps of grief
Are strung ; and, to the chorus of the damned,
The rocks of hell repeat them, evermore ;
Loud echoed through the caverns of despair,
And poured in thunder on the ear of Wo.

Nor ruined men alone, beneath that cloud,
Trembled. There, Satan and his legions stood,
Satan, the first and eldest sinner,—bound
For judgment. He, by other name, held once
Conspicuous rank in heaven among the sons
Of happiness, rejoicing, day and night

But pride, that was ashamed to bow to God,
Most High, his bosom filled with hate, his face
Made black with envy, and in his soul begot
Thoughts guilty of rebellion 'gainst the throne
Of the Eternal Father and the Son,—
From everlasting built on righteousness.

Ask not how pride, in one created pure,
Could grow ; or sin without example spring,
'Where holiness alone was sown : esteem't
Enough, that he, as every being made
By God, was made entirely holy, had
The will of God before him set for law
And regulation of his life, and power
To do as bid ; but was, meantime, left free,
To prove his worth, his gratitude, his love ;
How proved besides ? for how could service done,
That might not else have been withheld, evince
The will to serve, which, rather than the deed,
God doth require, and virtue counts alone ?
To stand or fall, to do or leave undone,
Is reason's lofty privilege, denied
To all below, by instinct bound to fate,
Unmeriting, alike, reward or blame.

Thus free, the Devil chose to disobey
The will of God, and was thrown out from heaven,
And with him all his bad example stained :
Yet not to utter punishment decreed,
But left to fill the measure of his sin,
In tempting and seducing man—too soon,
Too easily seduced ! And, from the day
He first set foot on earth,—of rancour full,
And pride, and hate, and malice, and revenge,—
He set himself, with most felonious aim
And hellish perseverance, to root out
All good, and in its place to plant all ill ;
To rub and raze, from all created things,

The fair and holy portraiture divine,
 And on them to enstamp his features grim ;
 To draw all creatures off from loyalty
 To their Creator, and to make them bow
 The knee to him. Nor failed of great success,
 As populous hell, this day, can testify.
 He held, indeed, large empire in the world,
 Contending proudly with the King of heaven.
 To him temples were built, and sacrifice
 Of costly blood upon his altars flowed ;
 And—what best pleased him, for in show he seemed Then likest God—whole nations, bowing, fell
 Before him, worshipping, and from his lips
 Entreated oracles, which he, by priests,—
 For many were his priests in every age,—
 Answered, though guessing but at future things,
 And erring oft, yet still believed ; so well
 His ignorance, in ambiguous phrase, he veiled.

Nor needs it wonder, that with man once fallen,
 His tempting should succeed. Large was his mind
 And understanding ; though impaired by sin,
 Still large ; and constant practice, day and night,
 In cunning, guile, and all hypocrisy,
 From age to age, gave him experience vast
 In sin's dark tactics, such as boyish man,
 Unarmed by strength divine, could ill withstand.
 And well he knew his weaker side ; and still,
 His lures, with baits that pleased the senses, busked,
 To his impatient passions offering terms
 Of present joy, and bribing reason's eye
 With earthly wealth, and honours near at hand.
 Nor failed to misadvise his future hope.
 And faith, by false, unkerneled promises
 Of heavens of sensual gluttony and love,
 That suited best their grosser appetites.
 Into the sinner's heart, who lived secure,
 And feared him least, he entered at his will.

But chief, he chose his residence in courts
And conclaves, stirring princes up to acts
Of blood and tyranny ; and moving priests
To barter truth, and swap the souls of men
For lusty benefices, and address
Of lofty sounding. Nor the saints elect,
Who walked with God, in virtue's path sublime,
Did he not sometimes venture to molest ;
In dreams and moments of unguarded thought,
Suggesting guilty doubts and fears, that God
Would disappoint their hope ; and in their way
Bestrewing pleasures, tongued so sweet, and so
In holy garb arrayed, that many stooped,
Believing them of heavenly sort, and fell ;
And to their high professions, brought disgrace
And scandal ; to themselves, thereafter, long
And bitter nights of sore repentance, vexed
With shame, unwonted sorrow, and remorse.
And more they should have fallen, and more have wept,
Had not their guardian angels, who, by God
Commissioned, stood beside them in the hour
Of danger, whether craft, or fierce attack,
To Satan's deepest skill opposing skill
More deep, and to his strongest arm, an arm
More strong,—upborne them in their hands, and filled
Their souls with all discernment, quick, to pierce
His stratagems and fairest shows of sin.

Now, like a roaring lion, up and down
The world, destroying, though unseen, he raged ;
And now, retiring back to Tartarus,
Far back, beneath the thick of guiltiest dark,
Where night ne'er heard of day, in council grim,
He sat with ministers whose thoughts were damned,
And there such plans devised, as, had not God
Checked and restrained, had added earth entire
To hell, and uninhabited left heaven,
Jehovah unadored. Nor unsevere,

Even then, his punishment deserved. The Worm
That never dies, coiled in his bosom, gnawed
Perpetually ; sin after sin brought pang
Succeeding pang ; and, now and then, the bolts
Of Zion's King, vindictive, smote his soul
With fiery wo to blast his proud designs ;
And gave him earnest of the wrath to come.
And chief, when, on the cross, Messiah said,
" 'Tis finished," did the edge of vengeance smite
Him through, and all his gloomy legions touch
With new despair. But yet, to be the first
In mischief, to have armies at his call,
To hold dispute with God, in days of Time,
His pride and malice fed, and bore him up
Above the worst of ruin. Still, to plan
And act great deeds, though wicked, brought at least
The recompense which nature hath attached
To all activity, and aim pursued
With perseverance, good, or bad ; for as,
By nature's laws, immutable and just,
Enjoyment stops where indolence begins ;
And purposeless, to-morrow borrowing sloth,
Itself, heaps on its shoulders loads of wo,
Too heavy to be borne ; so industry—
To meditate, to plan, resolve, perform,
Which in itself is good—as surely brings
Reward of good, no matter what be done :
And such reward the Devil had, as long
As the decrees eternal gave him space
To work. But now, all action ceased ; his hope
Of doing evil perished quite ; his pride,
His courage, failed him ; and beneath that cloud,
Which hung its central terrors o'er his head,
With all his angels, he, for sentence, stood,
And rolled his eyes around, that uttered guilt
And wo, in horrible perfection joined.
As he had been the chief and leader, long,
Of the apostate crew that warred with God

And heliness ; so now, among the bad,
Lowest, and most forlorn, and trembling most,
With all iniquity deformed and foul,
With all perdition ruinous and dark,
He stood,—example awful of the wrath
Of God ! sad mark, to which all sin must fall !—
And made, on every side, so black a hell,
That spirits, used to night and misery,
To distance drew, and looked another way ;
And from their golden cloud, far off, the saints
Saw round him darkness grow more dark, and heard
The impatient thunderbolts, with deadliest crash
And frequentest, break o'er his head,—the sign
That Satan, there, the vilest sinner, stood.

Ah me ! what eyes were there beneath that cloud !
Eyes of despair, final and certain ! eyes
That looked, and look'd, and saw, where'er they looked,
Interminable darkness ! utter wo !

'Twas pitiful to see the early flower
Nipped by the unfeeling frost, just when it rose, Lovely in youth, and put its beauties on.
'Twas pitiful to see the hopes of all
The year, the yellow harvest, made a heap,
By rains of judgment ; or by torrents swept,
With flocks and cattle, down the raging flood ;
Or scattered by the winnowing winds, that bore,
Upon their angry wings, the wrath of heaven.
Sad was the field, where, yesterday, was heard
The roar of war ; and sad the sight of maid,
Of mother, widow, sister, daughter, wife,
Stooping and weeping over senseless, cold,
Defaced, and mangled lumps of breathless earth,
Which had been husbands, fathers, brothers, sons,
And lovers, when that morning's sun arose.
'Twas sad to see the wonted seat of friend
Removed by death ; and sad to visit scenes,

When old, where, in the smiling morn of life,
Lived many, who both knew and loved us much,
And they all gone, dead, or dispersed abroad;
And stranger faces seen among their hills.
'Twas sad to see the little orphan babe
Weeping and sobbing on its mother's grave.
'Twas pitiful to see an old, forlorn,
Decrepit, withered wretch, unhoused, unclad,
Starving to death with poverty and cold.
'Twas pitiful to see a blooming bride,
That promise gave of many a happy year,
Touched by decay, turn pale, and waste, and die.
'Twas pitiful to hear the murderous thrust
Of ruffian's blade that sought the life entire.
'Twas sad to hear the blood come gurgling forth
From out the throat of the wild suicide.
Sad was the sight of widowed, childless age
Weeping.—I saw it once. Wrinkled with time,
And hoary with the dust of years, an old
And worthy man came to his humble roof,
Tottering and slow, and on the threshold stood.
No foot, no voice, was heard within. None came
To meet him, where he oft had met a wife,
And sons, and daughters, glad at his return;
None came to meet him; for that day had seen
The old man lay, within the narrow house,
The last of all his family; and now
He stood in solitude, in solitude
Wide as the world; for all, that made to him
Society, had fled beyond its bounds.
Wherever strayed his aimless eye, there lay
The wreck of some fond hope, that touched his soul
With bitter thoughts, and told him all was passed.
His lonely cot was silent, and he looked
As if he could not enter. On his staff,
Bending, he leaned; and from his weary eye,
Distressing sight! a single tear-drop wept.
None followed, for the fount of tears was dry.

Alone and last, it fell from wrinkle down
To wrinkle, till it lost itself, drunk by
The withered cheek, on which again no smile
Should come, or drop of tenderness be seen.
This sight was very pitiful ; but one
Was sadder still, the saddest seen in Time .
A man, to-day, the glory of his kind,
In reason clear, in understanding large,
In judgment sound, in fancy quick, in hope
Abundant, and in promise, like a field
Well cultured, and refreshed with dews from God ;
To-morrow, chained, and raving mad, and whipped
By servile hands ; sitting on dismal straw,
And gnashing with his teeth against the chain,
The iron chain, that bound him hand and foot ;
And trying whiles to send his glaring eye
Beyond the wide circumference of his wo ;
Or, humbling more, more miserable still,
Giving an idiot laugh that served to show
The blasted scenery of his horrid face ;
Calling the straw his sceptre, and the stone,
On which he, pinioned, sat, his royal throne.
Poor, poor, poor man ! fallen far below the brute !
His reason strove in vain to find her way,
Lost in the stormy desert of his brain ;
And, being active still, she wrought all strange,
Fantastic, execrable, monstrous things.

All these were sad, and thousands more, that sleep
Forgotten beneath the funeral pall of Time ;
And bards, as well became, bewailed them much,
With doleful instruments of weeping song.
But what were these ? What might be worse had in't,
However small, some grains of happiness ;
And man ne'er drank a cup of earthly sort,
That might not held another drop of gall ;
Or, in his deepest sorrow, laid his head
Upon a pillow, set so close with thorns,

That might not held another prickle still.
Accordingly, the saddest human look
Had hope in't ; faint, indeed, but still 'twas hope.
But why excuse the misery of earth ?
Say it was dismal, cold, and dark, and deep,
Beyond the utterance of strongest words ;
But say that none remembered it, who saw
The eye of beings damned for evermore,
Rolling, and rolling, rolling still in vain,
To find some ray, to see beyond the gulf
Of an unavenued, fierce, fiery, hot,
Interminable, dark Futurity !
And rolling still, and rolling still in vain !

Thus stood the reprobate beneath the shade
Of terror, and beneath the crown of love,
The good ; and there was silence in the vault
Of heaven ; and as they stood and listened, they heard
Afar to left, among the utter dark,
Hell rolling o'er his waves of burning fire,
And thundering through his caverns, empty then
As if he preparation made, to act
The final vengeance of the fiery Lamb.
And there was heard, coming from out the Pit,
The hollow wailing of Eternal Death,
And horrid cry of the Undying Worm.

The wicked paler turned, and scarce the good
Their colour kept ; but were not long dismayed.
That moment, in the heavens, how wondrous fair !
The angel of Mercy stood, and, on the bad
Turning his back, over the ransomed threw
His bow, bedropped with imagery of love,
And promises on which their faith reclined.
Throughout, deep, breathless silence reigned again,
And on the circuit of the upper spheres,
A glorious seraph stood, and cried aloud,
That every ear of man and devil heard,

"Him that is filthy, let be filthy still ;
Him that is holy, let be holy still."
And, suddenly, another squadron bright,
Of high arch-angel glory, stooping, brought
A marvellous bow,—one base upon the Cross,
The other on the shoulder of the Bear,
They placed,—from south to north, spanning the heavens,
And on each hand dividing good and bad,—
Who read, on either side, these burning words,
Which ran along the arch in living fire,
And wanted not to be believed in full :
"As ye have sown, so shall ye reap this day."

COURSE OF TIME.

BOOK X.

God of my fathers ! holy, just, and good !
My God ! my Father ! my unfailing Hope !
Jehovah ! let the incense of my praise,
Accepted, burn before thy mercy seat,
And in thy presence burn, both day and night.
Maker ! Preserver ! my Redeemer ! God !
Whom have I in the heavens but Thee alone ?
On earth, but Thee, whom should I praise, whom love ?
For Thou hast brought me hitherto, upheld
By thy omnipotence ; and from thy grace,
Unbought, unmerited, though not unsought—
The wells of thy salvation, hast refreshed
My spirit, watering it, at morn and even ;
And, by thy Spirit, which thou freely givest
To whom thou wilt, hast led my venturous song,
Over the vale and mountain tract, the light
And shade of man ; into the burning deep
Descending now, and now circling the mount,
Where highest sits Divinity enthroned ;
Rolling along the tide of fluent thought,
The tide of moral, natural, divine ;
Gazing on past and present, and again,
On rapid pinion borne, outstripping Time,
In long excursion, wandering through the groves

Unfading, and the endless avenues,
That shade the landscape of Eternity ;
And talking there with holy angels met,
And future men, in glorious vision seen !
Nor unrewarded have I watched at night,
And heard the drowsy sound of neighbouring sleep
New thought, new imagery, new scenes of bliss
And glory, unrehearsed by mortal tongue,
Which, unrevealed, I, trembling, turned and left,
Bursting at once upon my ravished eye,—
With joy unspeakable have filled my soul,
And made my cup run over with delight :
Though in my face the blasts of adverse winds,
While boldly circumnavigating man,
Winds seeming adverse, though perhaps not so,
Have beat severely ; disregarded beat,
When I, behind me, heard the voice of God,
And his propitious Spirit say, Fear not !

God of my fathers ! ever present God !
This offering, more, inspire, sustain, accept ;
Highest, if numbers answer to the theme ;
Best answering, if thy Spirit dictate most.
Jehovah ! breathe upon my soul ; my heart
Enlarge ; my faith increase ; increase my hope
My thoughts exalt ; my fancy sanctify,
And all my passions, that I near thy throne
May venture, unreprieved ; and sing the day,
Which none unholy ought to name, the Day
Of Judgment ! greatest day, passed or to come !
Day ! which,—deny me what thou wilt, deny
Me home, or friend, or honourable name,—
Thy mercy grant, I, thoroughly prepared,
With comely garment of redeeming love,
May meet, and have my Judge for Advocate.

Come, Gracious Influence, Breath of the Lord
And touch me trembling, as thou touched the man,

Greatly beloved, when he in vision saw,
By Ulai's stream, the Ancient sit ; and talked
With Gabriel, to his prayer swiftly sent,
At evening sacrifice. Hold my right hand,
Almighty ! hear me, for I ask through Him,
Whom thou hast heard, whom thou wilt always hear,
Thy Son, our interceding Great High Priest !
Reveal the future, let the years to come
Pass by, and open my ear to hear the harp
The prophet harp, whose wisdom I repeat,
Interpreting the voice of distant song ;—
Which thus again resumes the lofty verse,
Loftiest, if I interpret faithfully
The holy numbers which my spirit hears.

Thus came the day, the Harp again began,
The day that many thought should never come,
That all the wicked wished should never come,
That all the righteous had expected long ;
Day greatly feared, and yet too little feared,
By him who feared it most ; day laughed at much
By the profane, the trembling day of all
Who laughed ; day when all shadows passed, all dreams,
When substance, when reality commenced ;
Last day of lying, final day of all
Deceit, all knavery, all quackish phrase ;
Ender of all disputing, of all mirth
Ungodly, of all loud and boasting speech ;
Judge of all judgments, Judge of every judge,
Adjuster of all causes, rights and wrongs ;
Day oft appealed to, and appealed to oft
By those who saw its dawn with saddest heart ;
Day most magnificent in Fancy's range,
Whence she returned, confounded, trembling, pale,
With overmuch of glory faint and blind ;
Day most important held, prepared for most,
By every rational, wise, and holy man ;
Day of eternal gain, for worldly loss ;

Day of eternal loss, for worldly gain ;
Great day of terror, vengeance, wo, despair ;
Revealer of all secrets, thoughts, desires ;
Rein-trying, heart-investigating day,
That stood between Eternity and Time,
Reviewed all past, determined all to come,
And bound all destinies for evermore ;
Believing day of unbelief ; great day,
That set in proper light the affairs of earth,
And justified the Government Divine ;
Great day !—what can we more ? what should we more ?
Great triumph day of God's incarnate Son !
Great day of glory to the Almighty God !
Day ! whence the everlasting years begin
Their date, new era in eternity,
And oft referred to in the song of heaven !

Thus stood the apostate, thus the ransomed stood,
Those held by justice fast, and these by love,
Reading the fiery scutcheonry, that blazed
On high, upon the great celestial bow :
"As ye have sown, so shall ye reap this day."
All read, all understood, and all believed,
Convinced of judgment, righteousness, and sin

Meantime the universe throughout was still.
The cope, above and round about, was calm ;
And motionless, beneath them, lay the Earth,
Silent and sad, as one that sentence waits,
For flagrant crime ;—when suddenly was heard,
Behind the azure vaulting of the sky,
Above, and far remote from reach of sight,
The sound of trumpets, and the sound of crowds,
And prancing steeds, and rapid chariot wheels,
That from four quarters rolled, and seemed in haste.
Assembling at some place of rendezvous ;
And so they seemed to roll, with furious speed,
As if none meant to be behind the first.

Nor seemed alone : that day, the golden trump,
Whose voice, from centre to circumference
Of all created things, is heard distinct,
God had bid Michael sound, to summon all
The hosts of bliss to presence of their King ;
And, all the morning, millions infinite,
That millions governed each, Dominions, Powers,
Thrones, Principalities, with all their hosts,
Had been arriving, near the capital,
And royal city, New Jerusalem,
From heaven's remotest bounds. Nor yet from heaven
Alone came they, that day. The worlds around,
Or neighbouring nearest on the verge of night,
Emptied, sent forth their whole inhabitants.
All tribes of being came, of every name,
From every coast, filling Jehovah's courts.
From morn till mid-day, in the squadrons poured
Immense, along the bright celestial roads.
Swiftly they rode, for love unspeakable,
To God, and to Messiah, Prince of Peace,
Drew them, and made obedience haste to be Approved. And now, before the Eternal Throne,— Brighter, that day, than when the Son prepared
To overthrow the seraphim rebelled,—
And circling round the mount of Deity
Upon the sea of glass, all round about,
And down the borders of the stream of life,
And over all the plains of Paradise,
For many a league of heavenly measurement,—
Assembled, stood the immortal multitudes,
Millions, above all number infinite,
The nations of the blessed. Distinguished each,
By chief of goodly stature blazing far ;
By various garb, and flag of various hue
Streaming through heaven from standard lifted high—
The arms and imagery of thousand worlds.
Distinguished each, but all arrayed complete,
In armour bright, of helmet, shield, and sword ;

And mounted all in chariots of fire.
A military throng, blent, not confused ;
As soldiers on some day of great review,
Burning in splendour of refulgent gold,
And ornament, on purpose, long devised
For this expected day. Distinguished each,
But all accoutred as became their Lord,
And high occasion ; all in holiness,
The livery of the soldiery of God,
Vested ; and shining all with perfect bliss,
The wages that his faithful servants win.

Thus stood they numberless around the mount
Of presence ; and, adoring, waited, hushed
In deepest silence, for the voice of God.
That moment, all the Sacred Hill on high
Burned, terrible with glory, and, behind
- The uncreated lustre, hid the Lamb,
Invisible ; when, from the radiant cloud,
This voice, addressing all the hosts of heaven,
Proceeded, not in words as we converse,
Each with his fellow, but in language such
As God doth use, imparting, without phrase
Successive, what, in speech of creatures, seems Long narrative, though long, yet losing much
In feeble symbols of the thought Divine.

My servants long approved, my faithful sons,
Angels of glory, Thrones, Dominions, Powers,
Well pleased, this morning, I have seen the speed
Of your obedience, gathering round my throne,
In order due, and well-becoming garb ;
Illustrious, as I see, beyond your wont,
As was my wish, to glorify this day :
And now, what your assembling means, attend.

This day concludes the destiny of man.
The hour, appointed from eternity,

To judge the earth, in righteousness, is come ;
 To end the war of Sin, that long has fought,
 Permitted, against the sword of Holiness ;
 To give to men and devils, as their works,
 Recorded in my all-remembering book,
 I find ; good to the good, and great reward
 Of everlasting honour, joy, and peace,
 Before my presence here for evermore ;
 And to the evil, as their sins provoke,
 Eternal recompense of shame and wo,
 Cast out beyond the bounds of light and love.

Long have I stood, as ye, my sons, well know,
 Between the cherubim, and stretched my arms
 Of mercy out, inviting all to come
 To me, and live ; my bowels long have moved
 With great compassion ; and my justice passed
 Transgression by, and not imputed sin.
 Long here, upon my everlasting throne,
 I have beheld my love and mercy scorned ,
 Have seen my laws despised, my name blasphemed,
 My providence accused, my gracious plans
 Opposed ; and long, too long, have I beheld
 The wicked triumph, and my saints reproached
 Maliciously, while on my altars lie,
 Unanswered still, their prayers and their tears,
 That seek my coming, wearied with delay ;
 And long, Disorder in my moral reign
 Has walked rebelliously, disturbed the peace
 Of my eternal government, and wrought
 Confusion, spreading far and wide, among
 My works inferior, which groan to be Released. Nor long shall groan. The hour of grace,
 The final hour of grace, is fully passed ;
 The time accepted for repentance, faith,
 And pardon, is irrevocably passed ;
 And Justice, unaccompanied, as wont,
 With Mercy, now goes forth, to give to all

According to their deeds. Justice alone,—
For why should Mercy any more be joined?
What hath not mercy, mixed with judgment done,
That mercy, mixed with judgment and reproof,
Could do? Did I not revelation make,
Plainly and clearly, of my will entire?
Before them set my holy law, and gave Them knowledge, wisdom, prowess to obey,
And win, by self-wrought works, eternal life?
Rebelled; did I not send them terms of peace,
Which, not my justice, but my mercy asked?—
Terms, costly to my well-beloved Son;
To them, gratuitous, exacting faith
Alone for pardon, works evincing faith?
Have I not early risen, and sent my seers,
Prophets, apostles, teachers, ministers,
With signs and wonders, working in my name?
Have I not still, from age to age, raised up
As I saw needful, great, religious men,
Gifted by me with large capacity,
And by my arm omnipotent upheld,
To pour the numbers of my mercy forth,
And roll my judgments on the ear of man?
And lastly, when the promised hour was come,—
What more could most abundant mercy do?—
Did I not send Immanuel forth, my Son,
Only begotten, to purchase, by his blood,
As many as believed upon his name?
Did he not die to give repentance, such
As I accept, and pardon of all sins?
Has he not taught, beseeched, and shed abroad
The Spirit unconfined, and given at times
Example fierce of wrath and judgment, poured
Vindictively on nations guilty long?
What means of reformation, that my Son
Has left behind, untried? what plainer words,
What arguments more strong, as yet remain?
Did he not tell them, with his lips of truth,

The righteous should be saved, the wicked damned ?
And has he not, awake both day and night,
Here interceded with prevailing voice,
At my right hand, pleading his precious blood
Which magnified my holy law, and bought,
For all who wished, perpetual righteousness ?
And have not you, my faithful servants, all
Been frequent forth, obedient to my will,
With messages of mercy and of love,
Administering my gifts to sinful man ?
And have not all my mercy, all my love,
Been sealed and stamped with signature of heaven ?
By proof of wonders, miracles, and signs
Attested, and attested more by truth
Divine, inherent in the tidings sent ?
This day declares the consequence of all.
Some have believed, are sanctified, and saved,
Prepared for dwelling in this holy place,
In these their mansions, built before my face ;
And now, beneath a crown of golden light,
Beyond our wall, at place of judgment, they,
Expecting, wait the promised, due reward.
The others stand with Satan bound in chains,
The others, who refused to be redeemed :
They stand, unsanctified, unpardoned, sad,
Waiting the sentence that shall fix their wo.
The others, who refused to be redeemed ;
For all had grace sufficient to believe,
All who my gospel heard ; and none, who heard
It not, shall by its law, this day, be tried.
Necessity of sinning, my decrees
Imposed on none ; but rather, all inclined
To holiness ; and grace was bountiful,
Abundant, overflowing with my word ;
My word of life and peace, which to all men,
Who shall or stand or fall, by law revealed,
Was offered freely, as 'twas freely sent,
Without all money, and without all price.

Thus they have all, by willing act, despised
Me, and my Son, and sanctifying Spirit.
But now, no longer shall they mock or scorn.
The day of grace and mercy is complete,
And Godhead from their misery absolved.

So saying, He, the Father infinite,
Turning, addressed Messiah, where he sat,
Exalted gloriously, at his right hand.
This day belongs to justice and to thee,
Eternal Son, thy right for service done,
Abundantly fulfilling all my will ;
By promise thine, from all eternity,
Made in the ancient Covenant of Grace ;
And thine, as most befitting, since in thee
Divine and human meet, impartial Judge,
Consulting thus the interest of both.
Go then, my Son, divine similitude,
Image express of Deity unseen,
The book of my remembrance take ; and take
The golden crowns of life, due to the saints ;
And take the seven last thunders ruinous ;
Thy armour take ; gird on thy sword, thy sword
Of justice ultimate, reserved, till now,
Unsheathed, in the eternal armoury ;
And mount the living chariot of God.
Thou goest not now, as once, to Calvary,
To be insulted, buffeted, and slain ;
Thou goest not now, with battle and the voice
Of war, as once against the rebel hosts.
Thou goest a Judge, and findest the guilty bound ;
Thou goest to prove, condemn, acquit, reward.
Not unaccompanied ; all these, my saints,
Go with thee, glorious retinue, to sing
Thy triumph, and participate thy joy ;
And I, the Omnipresent, with thee go ;
And with thee all the glory of my throne.

Thus said the Father ; and the Son beloved,
Omnipotent, Omniscient, Fellow God,
Arose, resplendent with Divinity ;
And He the book of God's remembrance took ;
And took the seven last thunders ruinous ;
And took the crowns of life, due to the saints ;
His armour took ; girt on his sword, his sword
Of justice ultimate, reserved, till now,
Unsheathed, in the eternal armoury ;
And up the living chariot of God
Ascended, signifying all complete.

And now the Trump, of wondrous melody,
By man or angel never heard before,
Sounded with thunder, and the march began,
Not swift, as cavalcade, on battle bent,
But, as became procession of a judge,
Solemn, magnificent, majestic, slow ;
Moving sublime with glory infinite,
And numbers infinite, and awful song,
They passed the gate of heaven, which, many a league,
Opened either way, to let the glory forth
Of this great march. And now, the sons of men
Beheld their coming, which, before, they heard :
Beheld the glorious countenance of God !
All light was swallowed up, all objects seen
Faded ; and the Incarnate, visible
Alone, held every eye upon him fixed ;
The wicked saw his majesty severe ;
And those who pierced Him saw his face with clouds
Of glory circled round, essential bright !
And to the rocks and mountains called in vain,
To hide them from the fierceness of his wrath :
Almighty power their flight restrained, and held
Them bound immovable before the bar.

The righteous, undismayed and bold,—best proof,
This day, of fortitude sincere,—sustained

By inward faith, with acclamations loud,
Received the coming of the Son of Man ;
And, drawn by love, inclined to his approach,
Moving to meet the brightness of his face.

Meantime, 'tween good and bad, the Judge his wheels
Stayed, and, ascending, sat upon the great
White Throne, that morning founded there by power
Omnipotent, and built on righteousness
And truth. Behind, before, on every side,
In native and reflected blaze of bright,
Celestial equipage, the myriads stood,
That with his marching came ; rank above rank,
Rank above rank, with shield and flaming sword.

'Twas silence all ! and quick, on right and left,
A mighty angel spread the book of God's Remembrance ; and, with conscience now sincere,
All men compared the record, written there
By finger of Omniscience ; and received
Their sentence, in themselves, of joy or wo ;
Condemned or justified, while yet the Judge
Waited, as if to let them prove themselves.
The righteous, in the book of life displayed,
Rejoicing, read their names ; rejoicing, read
Their faith for righteousness received, and deeds
Of holiness, as proof of faith complete.
The wicked, in the book of endless death,
Spread out to left, bewailing, read their names ;
And read beneath them, Unbelief, and fruit
Of unbelief, vile, unrepented deeds,
Now unrepentable for evermore ;
And gave approval of the wo affixed

This done, the Omnipotent, Omniscient Judge,
Rose infinite, the sentence to pronounce,
The sentence of eternal wo or bliss !
All glory heretofore seen or conceived,

All majesty, annihilated, dropped,
 That moment, from remembrance, and was lost ;
 And silence, deepest hitherto esteemed,
 Seemed noisy to the stillness of this hour.
 Comparisons I seek not, nor should find,
 If sought. That silence, which all being held,
 When God's Almighty Son, from off the walls
 Of heaven the rebel angels threw, accursed,
 So still, that all creation heard their fall
 Distinctly, in the lake of burning fire,—
 Was now forgotten, and every silence else.
 All being rational, created then,
 Around the judgment seat, intensely listened.
 No creature breathed. Man, angel, devil, stood
 And listened ; the spheres stood still, and every star
 Stood still, and listened ; and every particle,
 Remotest in the womb of matter, stood,
 Bending to hear, devotional and still.
 And thus upon the wicked, first, the Judge
 Pronounced the sentence, written before of old :
 "Depart from me, ye cursed, into the fire,
 Prepared eternal in the Gulf of Hell,
 Where ye shall weep and wail for evermore,
 Reaping the harvest which your sins have sown."

So saying, God grew dark with utter wrath ;
 And, drawing now the sword, undrawn before,
 Which through the range of infinite, all around,
 A gleam of fiery indignation threw,
 He lifted up his hand omnipotent,
 And down among the damned the burning edge
 Plunged ; and from forth his arrowy quiver sent,
 Emptied, the seven last thunders ruinous,
 Which, entering, withered all their souls with fire.
 Then first was vengeance, first was ruin seen !
 Red, unrestrained, vindictive final, fierce !
 They, howling, fled to west among the dark ;
 But fled not these the terrors of the Lord.

Pursued, and driven beyond the Gulf, which frowns
Impassable, between the good and bad,
And downward far remote to left, oppressed
And scorched with the avenging fires, begun
Burning within them,—they upon the verge
Of Erebus, a moment, pausing stood,
And saw, below, the unfathomable lake,
Tossing with tides of dark, tempestuous wrath ;
And would have looked behind ; but greater wrath,
Behind, forbade, which now no respite gave
To final misery. God, in the grasp
Of his Almighty strength, took them upraised,
And threw them down, into the yawning pit
Of bottomless perdition, ruined, damned,
Fast bound in chains of darkness evermore ;
And Second Death, and the Undying Worm,
Opening their horrid jaws, with hideous yell,
Falling, received their everlasting prey.
A groan returned, as down they sunk, and sunk,
And ever sunk, among the utter dark !
A groan returned ! the righteous heard the groan,
The groan of all the reprobate, when first
They felt damnation sure ! and heard Hell close !
And heard Jehovah, and his love retire !
A groan returned ! the righteous heard the groan,
As if all misery, all sorrow, grief,
All pain, all anguish, all despair, which all
Have suffered, or shall feel, from first to last
Eternity, had gathered to one pang,
And issued in one groan of boundless wo !

And now the wall of hell, the outer wall,
First gateless then, closed round them ; that which thou
Hast seen, of fiery adamant, emblazed
With hideous imagery, above all hope,
Above all flight of fancy, burning high,
And guarded evermore, by Justice, turned
To Wrath, that hears, unmoved, the endless groan

Of those wasting within ; and sees, unmoved,
The endless tear of vain repentance fall.

Nor ask if these shall ever be redeemed.
They never shall! Not God, but their own sin, Condemns them. What could be done, as thou hast heard,

Has been already done ; all has been tried,
That wisdom infinite, and boundless grace,
Working together, could devise ; and all
Has failed. Why now succeed? Though God should stoop,

Inviting still, and send his Only Son
To offer grace in hell, the pride, that first Refused, would still refuse ; the unbelief,
Still unbelieving, would deride and mock ;
Nay more, refuse, deride, and mock ; for sin,
Increasing still, and growing, day and night,
Into the essence of the soul, become
All sin, makes what in time seemed probable,— Seemed probable, since God invited then,—
For ever now impossible. Thus they,
According to the eternal laws which bind
All creatures, bind the Uncreated One,
Though we name not the sentence of the Judge,—
Must daily grow in sin and punishment,
Made by themselves their necessary lot,
Unchangeable to all eternity.

What lot ! what choice ! I sing not, cannot sing.
Here, highest seraphs tremble on the lyre,
And make a sudden pause !—but thou hast seen.
And here, the bard, a moment, held his hand,
As one who saw more of that horrid wo
Than words could utter ; and again resumed.

Nor yet had vengeance done. The guilty Earth,
Inanimate, debased, and stained by sin,

Seat of rebellion, of corruption, long,
And tainted with mortality throughout,—
God sentenced next; and sent the final fires
Of ruin forth, to burn and to destroy.
The saints its burning saw, and thou mayst see
Look yonder, round the lofty golden walls
And galleries of New Jerusalem,
Among the imagery of wonders passed;
Look near the southern gate; look, and behold—
On spacious canvass, touched with living hues—
The Conflagration of the ancient earth,
The handiwork of high archangel, drawn
From memory of what he saw, that day.
See! how the mountains, how the valleys burn,
The Andes burn, the Alps, the Apennines,
Taurus and Atlas; all the islands burn;
The Ocean burns, and rolls his waves of flame.
See how the lightnings, barbed, red with wrath,
Sent from the quiver of Omnipotence,
Cross and recross the fiery gloom, and burn
Into the centre!—burn without, within,
And help the native fires, which God awoke,
And kindled with the fury of his wrath.
As inly troubled, now she seems to shake;
The flames, dividing, now a moment, fall;
And now, in one conglomerated mass,
Rising, they glow on high, prodigious blaze!
Then fall and sink again, as if, within,
The fuel, burned to ashes, was consumed.
So burned the Earth upon that dreadful day,
Yet not to full annihilation burned.
The essential particles of dust remained,
Purged by the final, sanctifying fires,
From all corruption; from all stain of sin,
Done there by man or devil, purified.
The essential particles remained, of which God built the world again, renewed, improved,
With fertile vale, and wood of fertile bough;

And streams of milk and honey, flowing song ;
And mountains cinctured with perpetual green ;
In clime and season fruitful, as at first,
When Adam woke, unfallen, in Paradise.
And God, from out the fount of native light,
A handful took of beams, and clad the sun
Again in glory ; and sent forth the moon
To borrow thence her wonted rays, and lead
Her stars, the virgin daughters of the sky.
And God revived the winds, revived the tides ;
And touching her from his Almighty hand,
With force centrifugal, she onward ran,
Coursing her wonted path, to stop no more.
Delightful scene of new inhabitants !
As thou, this morn, in passing hither, sawst.

Thus done, the glorious Judge, turning to right,
With countenance of love unspeakable,
Beheld the righteous, and approved them thus :
“ Ye blessed of my Father, come, ye just,
Enter the joy eternal of your Lord ;
Receive your crowns, ascend, and sit with me,
At God's right hand, in glory evermore !”

Thus said the Omnipotent, Incarnate God ;
And waited not the homage of the crowns,
Already thrown before him ; nor the loud
Amen of universal, holy praise ;
But turned the living chariot of fire,
And swifter now,—as joyful to declare
This day's proceedings in his Father's court,
And to present the number of his sons
Before the Throne,—ascended up to heaven !
And all his saints, and all his angel bands,
As, glorious, they on high ascended, sung
Glory to God and to the Lamb !—they sung
Messiah, fairer than the sons of men,
And altogether lovely. Grace is poured
